FRENCH SEIZE 3 CITIES AS COUNTER MOVE TO SABOTAGE

Troops Advance to Karlsruhe, Mannheim and Darmstadt — Movement Will Afford French Use of Left Bank Rhine Railway Through British Area.

GIVES CONTROL FAR INTO GERMANY

Rapid Movement of All Portable Property Fills Roads East — Germans Regard Move as Pressure for Negotiations.

PARIS, March 3.—Three great German cities with nearly $1,000,000 inhabitants—Karlsruhe, Mannheim and Darmstadt—are now as good as occupied by French expeditionary forces. The foreign office this afternoon stated, the advance was a counter sabotage move.

The Darmstadt railway center and the Karlsruhe and Mannheim ports were taken over today, although the cities themselves had not been occupied.

Troops headed by armored automobiles and cavalry moved forward at dawn across the Rhine, meeting a chilly, sleepy welcome. Not more than 1000 soldiers were engaged for the occupation of each strategic point.

Th occupation of the cities themselves, demanding the use of at least two divisions, can be only a matter of time.

In some quarters it is asserted the new French advance has not so much to do with turning the thumbscrew on Germany as with checkmating the reiterated refusal of Gen. Godley, British Commander at Cologne, to allow the French to use the main left bank Rhine railway through the British area.

It is stated that with the further move forward to Marburg it will be possible for the French to organize a direct railway system on the right bank of the Rhine from Essen to Strasbourg via Frankfurt. But to do this it will be necessary to occupy Frankfurt.

This view of the advance is borne out by the obvious deadlock that has been reached after 14 days of detailed negotiations between Gen. Godley and Gen Payot.

The Quai d' Orsay tonight denied there was any special significance in Premier Poincare's conference yesterday with M. Dariac, author of the famous Rhineland report. M. Dariac, however, discussed the economic aspects of the Ruhr and Rhineland with the Premier, and his visit this time cannot be dissassociated from reports that the French Government is about to promulgate conditions under which it will recognize the creation of a Rhine-Westphalian buffer state.

FRENCH ADVANCE GIVES CONTROL FAR INTO GERMANY

BERLIN, March 3.—The French today occupied Mannheim and Darmstadt, east of the Rhine. They also took the Karlsruhe harbor and now have both shores of the Rhine under direct control.

If the French occupy Frankfurt, as is expected, they will control Western Germany to a degree far beyond that indicated by the amount of territory involved. This holds true even if they do not occupy Frankfurt, the greatest railway center of that section of the country.

As industry and commerce in Western Germany center along the Rhine, the new occupation is tanta-

WOMAN DIES OF BURNS CAUSED BY IRON

Mrs. Dora Gartland Believed to Have Fainted—Found in Home by Firemen.

Mrs. Dora Gartland, 47 years old, was fatally burned in the dining room of her home, 5600 Greer avenue, yesterday afternoon. The police say that she probably had suffered a fainting spell when ironing clothes with an electric iron and fell to the floor and that the linoleum and her clothing caught fire from the iron as it became overheated.

Her husband, Joseph Gartland, a milk wagon driver, who usually gets home about noon, did not arrive yesterday until after the accident. He said his wife had been subject to fainting spells. No one lived with them.

At 3:55 p. m. William H. Becker of 5604 Greer avenue saw smoke coming from the windows of the Gartland home. Unable to get in the house, he ran to the house of Fire Engine Company No. 53, Union boulevard and Natural Bridge avenue, several blocks away, and called the fire apparatus.

The firemen broke through a door and found Mrs. Gartland unconscious, with most of her clothing burned away. The cloth of a nearby table and clothes on the table she evidently had been froning were also burned. The current was turned on in the iron. A hole of considerable size was burned in the floor and the gold nose-piece of Mrs. Gartland's spectacles had been melted. She died at the city hospital at 7:20 p. m.

By the Associated Press.

NEWBERN, N. C., March 3.—Senator F. M. Simmons, who has been at his home here for several weeks, recuperating from illness, wired his colleague, Senator Overman, today that he would be unable to accept President Harding's appointment to the Debt Funding Commission.

Senator Simmons had been nominated by President Harding to the Debt Funding Commission in place of Senator Carter Glass who declined to serve.

WEEKS PLANS TO ABROGATE GOLTRA BARGE CONTRACT

Secretary of War to Act Under Opinion Rendered by the Department of Justice.

GOVERNMENT WILL OPERATE THE FLEET

Transportation Service Clear Through From St. Paul to New Orleans Will Be Provided.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 3.—Acting on an opinion rendered by the Department of Justice, Secretary of War Weeks has decided to cancel the contract under which Edward F. Goltra, of St. Louis, Democratic National Committeeman for Missouri, is the Jessee of 19 river barges and four tow boats built for him under a wartime contract, and to take over the fleet for operation by the Government. Some of the boats will be placed in operation of the lower river, as a part of the established Mississippi Warrior Federal Line and some on the upper river so that the Government will be able to provide a transportation service clear through from St. Paul to New Orleans.

Steps will be taken in St. Louis by Government representatives early next week, probably Tuesday, to give effect to the War Department's order.

Abrogation Strongly Urged.

Abrogation of the Goltra contract has been strongly urged upon by the War Department for several months by the Merchant's Exchange of St. Louis, which sent a delegation here to see Weeks about the matter and by shipping interests in other Mississippi River cities.

After considerable study of the legal questions involved, Weeks asked the Department of Justice to pass upon the case. In an opinion recently received, the department holds that Weeks, under the terms of the Goltra contract, has the right to terminate it on the ground of nonfulfillment by the lessee.

The War Department takes the position that Goltra, by failing to hold himself out as a common carrier, has failed to live up to an express obligation in his contract. Only a few of the boats, it is stated, have been used, and those on special trips, although there has been an insistent demand by Valley shippers for additional boats, operated in a regular service, on the Mississippi. The fleet is tied up in winter quarters in St. Louis.

Primary Purpose of Fleet.

The Goltra boats were built with an emergency wartime appropriation for the primary purpose of bringing iron ore down the river from St. Paul and taking back coal from the fields near St. Louis. Though this was the purpose set out in the preamble of the contract leasing the boats to Goltra, the document was so worded as to permit him to operate on any part of the river and its tributaries.

By the time the boats were completed the wartime emergency which they were designed to meet, had long since passed. For one reason or another, Goltra put off taking them over, after their completion, until last July 15, when they were formally put into his possession.

The War Department assumed that Goltra would operate the boats on the upper river. To its surprise, Goltra announced that he would enter the lower river service. He produced an agreement the existence of which Secretary Weeks was not aware, giling him the right to carry freight on the river from St. Louis to New Orleans at 20 per cent under the rail rate, the same reduction that is made by the established Government service. This agreement, signed by former Secretary of War Baker, was made on the last day of the outgoing administration.

Controversy Follows.

At once the War Department and Goltra became engaged in a controversy which has continued intermittenly ever since. Weeks did not see his way clear to nullify the agreement permitting Goltra to run

REMMERS TELLS G. O. P. COMMITTEE TO "GO TO HELL"

Candidate for Presidency of Aldermen Cites Story of Rich Man Trying to Get Into Heaven.

ADDRESSES WOMEN'S REPUBLICAN CLUB

Neun, Who Has Support of Organization, Says He Will Not Throw Mud in Campaign.

Oliver T. Remmers, candidate for the Republican nomination for the presidency of the Board of Aldermen in the primary election Friday, who, as far as is known, has the support of only one of the 28 Republican committeemen, literally told the Republican City Committee to "go to hell," in an address yesterday before the Republican Women's Club at the American Annex Hotel.

Commenting on statements that his opponent, Walter J. G. Neun, chairman of the Republican Committee, was supported by virtually all of the committeemen, Remmers, recalled that he had paid the Republican City Committee a filing fee of $60, and told an old story of a rich man who died and sought admission to heaven.

"The rich man knocked at the pearly gates," Remmers said, "and when questioned by St. Peter on his qualifications stated he once had given a dime to a starving family and five cents to a blind man.

"St. Peter verified this, then said to the bookkeeper, 'Give back his 15 cents and tell him to go to hell.'

"Now," Remmers added, "the City Committee can take my $60, split it among themselves, and—you know the rest of the story."

Machine for Neun.

Virtually the full Republican organization support went to Neun through the withdrawal from the race of Alderman Edward L. Kuhs of the First Ward, who announced his retirement Friday, in favor of Neun, after a committee poll showed 17 members were supporting Neun. Kuhs was the choice of four members.

Remmers indicated much of the opposition against him was because he participated in the "house-cleaning" movement in 1920 that cracked the organization slate.

Twenty-four committeemen, many of them members of the present committee, supported what was known as the "courthouse-city hall slate," which included three judicial candidates around whom centered the "Three Ks" fight. Remmers was a member of the committee which got out a "house-cleaner" ballot that broke the organization slate in the primary election.

Reference to Bond Issue.

Passage of the $87,372,500 bond issue for public improvements, Remmers said, makes it highly important that voters select a candidate of ability and judgment for the presidency of the board, as that official is a member of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, which handles the city's finances.

"I don't want to hold any postmortem," Remmers stated, "but I remember the United Railways compromise, and I see in the offing a similar situation—a possible Terminal Railroad compromise in which there is going to be a first prize and a booby prize.

"If the city trades the free bridge for the Eads Bridge, it looks as if St. Louis will get the booby prize."

However, as is known, the proposal for use by the railroads of the free bridge provides only for exchange of the use of a deck of each bridge, and not an exchange of ownership or obligations.

Remmers said there had been adverse comment on men holding unexpired terms in public office while aspiring for other offices, apparently referring to charges he has made that Neun had made a pledge, when a committee candidate, that he would not seek other office. Neun has denied this.

Mrs. Joseph Maserang, presiding, told Remmers he would have to confine his remarks to his own candidacy. Remmers then concluded: "I merely want to say that if this is a Republican City Committee primary, my opponent probably will take the oath, but if it is a public primary—

FORD HAS WAY TO GET A MILLION IF HE EVER GOES BROKE

"Every One of 1,000,000 Men Working for Me Would Lend Me a Dollar," He Says.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PIKEVILLE, Ky., March 3.—During his recent inspection of his holdings in Eastern Kentucky, Henry Ford won the hearts of the people of Pond Creek, according to reports today from his newly acquired coal field in the mountains. Ford mingled freely with the citizens and invited a number of them to go through his private car, in which he made the trip to Kentucky.

Then he announced a wholesale slash of prices which proved the greatest surprise of all his doings. He ordered heavy reductions on hay and grain, food supplies and merchandise from the commissaries in general. He owns several of the biggest commissaries in the coal mining area. When asked if he was not afraid of "going broke" on the Pond Creek investment, Ford said, "If I do. I have a million men working for me and there is not one of them who wouldn't lend me a dollar, and I'd be a millionaire tomorrow." Ford is understood to be negotiating for a vast coal territory in Southeastern Kentucky. His experts have nearly completed a survey.

NEW YORK CATHEDRAL GUARDED AT WELCOME TO POPE'S ENVOY

Uniformed Policemen and Detectives About St. Patrick's During Ceremonies.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March. 3.—Extraordinary precautions were taken today to guard St. Patrick's Cathedral, in Fifth avenue, during the ceremonies of welcome to Archbishop Fumasoni-Biondi, the new apostolic delegate to Washington. Fifty uniformed policemen surrounded the edifice, while detectives mingled with the assemblage. The ceremonies were attended by characteristic splendor and pomp.

The apostolic delegate sat on a throne in the sanctuary of the Cathedral, holding a golden staff. Opposite, sat Archbishop Hayes, on the Cathedral throne. The church was thronged with clergy, parishioners and hundreds of nuns and parochial school children who carried miniature American flags.

Asserting that the occasion was one of the most historic in the Cathedral's history, Archbishop Hayes, in his address of welcome, said the apostolic delegation would realize the great devotion of the Catholic people of America to His Holiness, the Pope.

DOCTORS PUZZLED BY CASE OF GIRL WITH TEMPERATURE OF 114

Escanaba (Mich.) Young Woman Said to Be Conscious and Rational With High Fever.

By the Associated Press.

ESCANABA, Mich., March 3.—Miss Evelyn Lyons is baffling the medical profession of this city with a strange fever which carries a steady temperature of 114 degrees, the highest the physician's thermometer registers.

Dr. H. J. Defnet, City Health Commissioner, who is in charge of the case, said the thermometer reading was correct. Five other physicians watching the case verified this. According to Dr. Defnet the young woman's body is so hot that the placing of a hand on the skin is not altogether pleasant.

He said the young woman is conscious and rational, while under ordinary conditions a patient usually is delirious when fever reaches 106 degrees. Miss Lyons has been in the same condition 10 days. She first suffered an attack of influenza which developed into pneumonia.

SUGAR PRICE INCREASES FROM 7 TO 10 CENTS A POUND

Retailer Blames Wholesaler and He Blames Jobber, Who Blame Speculator, etc.

The retail price of sugar has increased 3 cents a pound in the last month, from 7 to 10 cents. The retailer blames the wholesaler, the wholesaler blames the jobber and the jobber blames the speculator. The latter asserts the others are wrong and that increased consumption is responsible.

The wholesalers say they sell at the market quotation, and that the increase in the wholesale price from $7.45 to $9.25 a 100 pounds, since Feb. 1, is due to the fact that they have had to pay correspondingly increased rates for carload lots.

The sugar price climb is general throughout the country, and Congress has been asked to investigate the alleged shortage of supply and determine if it actually exists, or whether it is fictitious, due to hoarding by speculators.

CONGRESS TO END STORMY CAREER AT NOON TODAY

SPENCER HANGS ON TO LAST HOPING TO WIN PATRONAGE

Senator Continues Efforts to Obtain Appointment of Garesche for New Judgeship—Action Before Next Session Unlikely.

Post-Dispatch Bureau.
No. 20 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—At a late hour tonight the President had not sent to the Senate the name of any nominee for the Eastern Missouri District judgeship. The time limit for nominations at this session of the Senate will expire at noon tomorrow when the present Congress wil go out of existence.

In the unlikely event of a nomination tomorrow confirmation would be extremely difficult to obtain.

All things considered, the outlook is for postponement of the Missouri judgeship appointment till the next session of Congress. A number of Senators, anticipating just such a situation as has arisen with respect to the Missouri and other appointments, went to the Constitution for enlightenment on the President's appointive powers, and reached the conclusion that he is not permitted to fill the newly created judgeship in recess.

This was the consensus at a recent meeting of the Senate Judiciary Committee, to which judicial nominations are referred. Senator Knute Nelson of Minnesota, chairman, said the constitutional inhibition was plain.

Power to Fill Vacancies.

"The President," says the Constitution, in section 2 of article 2, "shall have power to fill up all vacancies that may happen during the recess of the Senate by granting commissions, which shall expire at the end of their next session."

This means, in Nelson's judgment, that the President may act in recess to fill a vacancy occurring in a judgeship by reason of the death or retirement of the incumbent, but may not make an original appointment to a new judgeship in this manner.

The new judgeships, according to this view, cannot be construed as coming within the meaning of "vacancies that may happen during the recess of the Senate." They are positions created by an act of Congress last September.

The same opinion is held by Senator Pepper of Pennsylvania, who looked into the question because of its bearing on some Pennsylvania appointments.

"Unlikely" to Act During Recess.

The President's own disposition, judging by a statement at the White House yesterday, squares with what appears to be the law on the subject. He was "very unlikely," it was stated, to fill any of the new judgeships in recess, but felt that contests which had arisen over them should be settled when the Senate was in session.

The White House expression notwithstanding, Senator Spencer declared yesterday that in his opinion the Eastern Missouri nomination, if not made and confirmed at the present session, would be made by the President in recess.

Up to the last minute in which any hope of success could be cherished, Spencer continued his efforts to have the President name former Circuit Judge Vital W. Garesche for the place.

Antagonism Flares Out.

The long-standing antagonism between Senator Spencer and Missouri Republican Congressmen flared out today in an open break between the Senator and Representative Charles L. Faust of St. Joseph over the St. Joseph postmastership.

Spencer backed Charles D. Morris, publisher of the St. Joseph Gazette, against Faust's candidate, Elliott Marshall. Marshall yesterday was given the nomination by the President. This morning Spencer told Faust he would block Marshall's confirmation. Faust replied that he, in that event, would 'run up the black flag" against the Senator.

Spencer said that he was called over the long-distance telephone from St. Joseph last night to receive protests against the Marshall nomination by Morris, Ralph O. Stauber, a lawyer; Dr. J. G. Morgan, member of the Police Board, and Clarence U. Philley, a theater owner.

"Couldn't Refuse Them."

"I could not refuse them," Spencer told Faust, in explaining his decision to hold up Marshall's name.

The same four St. Joseph politicians, Faust said today, telephoned to him last night that they proposed to "shive him from himself."

Faust added that he would go to "the end of his rope" against Spencer and the other Morris supporters. If the nomination should go over, he said he would attempt to have Marshall named in recess.

When Faust and Spencer first clashed over the appointment two or three days ago, Spencer told Faust in the presence of two Missouri newspaper men that, while he would try to get the job for Morris, he would not protest against the confirmation of Marshall if the latter should be named. Faust recalled this promise today in the course of a scathing denunciation of the Senator's political methods.

JUDGE INDEFINITELY POSTPONES ANTICIGARETTE LAW, TRIALS

Too Many Serious Cases on the Calendar, Utah Magistrate Rules.

By the Associated Press.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, March 3.—When the cases of A. N. Mackay and several others charged with violation of the State anticigarette law came up before City Judge Pratt today they were indefinitely postponed. Too many serious cases are on the calendar, the Judge ruled.

Mackay, general manager of the Salt Lake Tribune, is charged with having smoked a cigarette in a restaurant, thus violating that section of the anticigarette law which prohibits smoking in public places.

The attention of Salt Lake City residents has switched from the trial of alleged violators of the cigarette law to the Legislature where efforts to pass a substitute cigarette measure are under way. This new bill, although it would legalize the sale of cigarettes under State tax, is declared by some legislators to be more objectional than the statute now in effect.

HOFFHEIMER WIRES TO HARDING DECLINING FEDERAL JUDGESHIP

Says He Submitted Names of Three Other Aspirants to Bench in Ohio—Action Is Surprise to Friends.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—Harry M. Hoffheimer, who was confirmed yesterday as United States District Judge for the Southern District of Ohio, today telegraphed President Harding that for personal reasons he could not accept the appointment. He said he had made a trip to Washington to submit the names of three other aspirants for the place, and could not be in a position of appearing to act in bad faith.

CINCINNATI, O., March 3.—The action of Harry M. Hoffheimer in declining the appointment as United States District Judge for Southern Ohio, caused distinct surprise here. Not even the most intimate friends of Judge Hoffheimer would admit tonight that they knew that he contemplated declining the Federal judgeship. They pointed to the fact that he called upon United States District Judge John Weld Peck at his office, and that he made the statement that he would rededicate himself to public service as proof of his intention of going upon the bench.

Even his law partners, Province M. Pogue and Thomas Pogue, expressed surprise at the action in Washington.

RUSH TO PUT OVER BILLS AT NIGHT SESSIONS

Lame Ducks Gaze Fondly at Scenes — Both Branches Make Eleventh Hour Effort to Cut Down the Inevitable Mountain of Legislative Debris.

Double-Headed Filibuster Rages Over $10,000,000 Fertilizer Resolution — Farm Credits Bill Ready for President.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The Senate recessed at 1:36 o'clock this morning until 10 a. m.

Post-Dispatch Bureau.
No. 20 Wyatt Bldg.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—The sixty-seventh Congress is about to end its stormy career. At noon tomorrow the talk-wearied legislators begin their rush for home, for various junket trips financed by the United States Treasury, for trips to Europe, speechmaking, fence-fixing—many to stay home because the voters prefer them home rather than here trying to make laws.

But tonight Senate and House galleries are jammed. Page boys, secretaries, clerks, messengers—a host of attendants rush frantically about; there are countless conferences. "If you'll help me get my bill through, I'll help you get yours through" is the main burden of the whispered consultations. This will go on all night, or certainly most of the night.

But noon will come to find the reason for all this last moment excitement little changed. The list of bills waiting to be passed will be almost as long. The biennial legislative debris of good bills, bad bills, pork, pet measures, money-grabs will be as great as ever, probably far greater this time for time-killing filibusters which have been epidemic this session have swept reams of hoped-for measures into the backwash to stay.

Lame Ducks Gaze Fondly.

Tonight lame ducks gaze fondly at these scenes. They cling to their seats listening to men whose every utterance formerly sent them scurrying out of earshot. Senators Calder of New York and Frelinghuysen of New Jersey, among the rejected of the G. O. P., have rarely been in such close attendance in the Senate. For at noon the lame ducks give up their desks for good. It will be the last day for more than 100 members of Congress.

In the Senate Heflin (Democrat, Alabama), talked for more than three hours. He embarked on a one-man filibuster, enraged because Lame Duck Mondell, Republican floor leader in the House, had blocked passage of the bill that would give the cotton growers nitrate of soda with which to kill the devastating boll weevil. Heflin made charges of "bad faith" and "broken promises." He would prevent the Senate of the United States from passing one single solitary bill until his boll weevil exterminator was let out of the trap, he shouted with flaming indignation.

In the House Representative Pou (Democrat, North Carolina), took up the crusade for the boll weevil antidote. Lame Ducks Campbell (Republican, Kansas), who occupied the Speaker's chair, and Mondell, had "broken faith," he roared. They promised to let that bill come up and then they tried to push their whole tribe of Republic-

SENATE PUTS OFF WORLD COURT PLAN FOR TEN MONTHS

ROBINSON SCORES THE ADMINISTRATION

Points Out That Two Most Important Harding Policies, Excluding Debt Plan, Have Failed of Action.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
No. 20 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—American participation in the permanent court of international justice was voted into 10 months of confinement by the Senate today. The Republican majority, including the "irreconcilables," seized upon President Harding's own belatedness as the convenient excuse for their refusal to act at this session.

The eleventh-hour efforts of the Democrats, embraced in a resolution by King of Utah, to bring the world court plan up for immediate action were snowed under by a vote of 42 to 24. It must now await the coming of a new Congress, next December.

When Mr. Harding sent his request for action to the Senate a week ago today the unaltered enemies of the League of Nations and such of its adjuncts as the world court promptly took refuge in the fact that it was too near the end of the session to get action. The Foreign Relations Committee, headed by Lodge of Massachusetts, sought to add to the delay by asking for more information. They got the information back with disconcerting promptness from Secretary of State Hughes, admittedly the real sponsor of the idea and merely acting through the President.

"Too Late to Do Anything."

So when the move was made in the Senate today to test the genuineness of open support, by asking for immediate action, the excuse was providently at hand, several Republicans taking care, however, to "explain" their votes afterward on the ground that "it was too late to do anything now."

When King moved to take up his motion for giving the President the requested authority, McCormick, Republican, of Illinois, sought to counter with a motion to lay it on the table, but Lodge, calling over his shoulder, assured McCormick that there was no danger of the King motion getting anywhere. In other words, the G. O. P. leaders had definitely arranged to bury the world court as far as this Congress is concerned.

How Senators Voted.

And bury it they did, the lineup on the question of whether the Senate should act being as follows, on party lines, with two exceptions:

For immediate action: Senators Ashhurst, Bayard, Caraway, Culberson, Dial, George, Gerry, Glass, Harris, Harrison, Heflin, Hitchcock, Jones of New Mexico, Kendrick, King, McKellar, Overman, Pittman, Pomerene, Robinson, Sheppard, Smith, Swanson, all Democrats, and Norbeck, Republican; total, 24.

Against action: Senators Borah, Brandegee, Bursum, Calder, Cameron, Couzens, Cummins, Curtis, Dillingham, Edge, Fernald, France, Frelinghuysen, Hale, Harrold, Johnson, Kellogg, Keyes, Ladd, La Follette, Lenroot, Lodge, McCormick, McCumber, McKinley, McLean, McNary, Moses, New, Norris, Oddie, Page, Pepper, Phipps, Poindexter, Reed of Pennsylvania, Shortridge, Smoot, Spencer, Sterling, Sutherland, Wadsworth, Warren, Watson, Welder, Willis, all Republicans; Walsh of Massachusetts, Walsh of Montana and Shields, Democrats; total 49.

A substitute resolution later was presented by King, likewise embracing all the reservations supposed to be necessary to remove Republican and "irreconciliable" objection, but it was ordered on to the table to stay.

Senator Robinson grasped the opportunity offered by the situation to score the administration record from its outset.

Robinson Scores Administration.

"The present administration is now reaping a harvest of the condemnation and repudiation which it sowed in order to win the election of 1920," said Robinson. "The legislative and executive policies of President Harding have broken down, due to the reactionary character of the policies and to the irreconcilable factions existing within the Republican party."

"The two most important Harding policies, excluding the British debt settlement which was accorded overwhelming support on both sides have been repudiated by Congress despite the huge Republican majority, Robinson pointed out—one, the ship subsidy, the other the world court."

Robinson pictured President Harding as trying to stand between the liberal elements of the G. O. P., led by Hughes, on one side, the reactionaries and "irreconcilables" on the other, and being crushed in the resultant conflict.

"The administration foreign policy is incomprehensible even to those responsible for it," said Robinson. "The United States in former administrations took advanced position in the promotion of orderly tribunals for the settlement of international disputes.

"Now we are in the humiliating position of facing backward and standing still while European peoples in the maze and confusion of financial and economic problems which threaten their undoing are stumbling and staggering forward."

Shields, Democrat, of Tennessee, explained his irreconcilability on the League of Nations in a speech likewise taking the easy way out that the world court plan "is too important to be taken up with so short a time to discuss its merits."

Edge, Republican of New Jersey, similarly contributed to the record the explaantion that he voted to turn down the court because the time was so short.

CONGRESS TO END STORMY CAREER AT NOON TODAY

an bills ahead of it. He would not permit the House to transact one infinitesmal iota of business until this ghastly insult, outrage, robbery, ruin of the wretched farmer, was stopped.

Efforts to Stop Filibuster.

After the Senate filibuster had been in progress five hours, efforts were made to effect a settlement.

An unofficial Senate committee conferred with House leaders, urging that a vote be permitted on the nitrate resolution. Senators were told that the House would not be coerced by the Senate filibuster.

Participating in the blockade were Senators Heflin and Harris, Democrats, Georgia. Declaring they did not wish to obstruct the farm credits bill, they insisted on a House vote on the Senate resolution.

Leaders in the House preparing for action on the nitrate resolution indicated it was their purpose to obstruct all matters except the conference report on the farm credits bill and the measure reclassifying most of the Federal employes in Washington.

The Senate filibuster was called off at midnight to consider nominations and minor measures.

Uncle Joe Cannon listened with faint amusement. He had heard that sort of talk so often during all these years. He is going home to stay by his own wish, not the voters'. Over on the Senate that other veteran, John Sharp Williams, might have been listening, too. But the famous Mississippian had already heard too much of it. He ducked out quietly the evening before. He was heartily sick of the performance. He was, in his own words, going home to "get clean."

The babble of voices on the floor and in the galleries heightened the confusion. Bills intermittently were taken up—between filibusters—hastily passed, rejected or tabled. Possibly half a dozen legislators may know what these bills are for. The rest voted as told by the party whip, if they voted at all.

Alien Property Bill.

The bill to return property up to $10,000 seized by the alien property custodian in the war was taken up in the Senate. Allen property custodian Miller sat in the reserved gallery. He said the bill would take most of the work off his bureau. It is a measure of economy. Down on the floor, a dozen Senators heatedly were debating precedents, international law. Willis, Republican, Ohio, said all the property should be turned back or none but that none should be turned back until we know how much Germany owed us for the Lusitania claims and all the others. Nobody knows that yet accurately.

King, Democrat, Utah, said all the property should go back. Should America violate the traditions of centuries? Should we confiscate private property of Germans to pay the debts owed by the Government of Germany? Ah, no, Mr. President, heaven forbid—and so forth.

Only the Clock Progresses.

The bill was dropped for something else. It became clear that this German property matter was too involved to get through. Senator Sheppard (Democrat, Texas), arose. He denounced the New York State Legislature for saying that prohibition had failed, made bootleggers out of good citizens. Prohibition was growing stronger every day, Mr. President. The great moral forces were—

"Mr. President," shouted somebody across the Senate, "I ask unanimous consent to the immediate consideration of Senate bill No. 18,999, for the relief of Hezekiah Culpepper of Cornfield Corners, County of Horseradish, Arizona, * * *"

The Senator explained that this was an imperative matter. The Senate passed the bill for the Senator's constituent.

Actually the only real progress was made by the hands on the Senate clock as they steadily cut down the length of this ancient process. The Heflin filibuster ended at supper time. Senators Lodge (Republican, Massachusetts), and Curtis (Republican, Kansas), Republican leaders, went to the House to see if the double-barreled filibuster could be amicably called off. Heflin announced he would continue it otherwise. Likewise Pou.

The House suffered ffrom a succession of roll calls as part of its filibuster penalty. This was interrupted while a huge chest of silver was carried ceremoniously to the Speaker's chair for presentation to Montell as a gift from the House. The Democrats suspended their denunciations of him long enough to join in the well-wishing, the felicitation and the glowing compliments for his statesmanship. Then they went back to upbraiding him for his actions.

Accelerated business is looked for just before the closing time tomorrow, particularly on rural credits measures of relief for the farmers which are the most important matters scheduled to be acted upon.

Both the Senate and House approved the conference report on the farm credits bill tonight and the measure is ready for submission to President Harding when he visits the Capitol prior to sine die adjournment tomorrow to sign bills.

Statement on Farm Credits.

Managers on the part of the House explained in a formal statement to the House that the bill as agreed to in conference would create two distinct and separate rural credit organizations, the Federal intermediate credit banks and the national agricultural credit corporations. The former would be placed under the control and management of the Federal Farm Loan Board and the latter under the supervision of the Comptroller of the Curency.

"While the two systems will furnish relief to the agricultural interests of the country," the statement said, "the Federal intermediate credit banks will more particularly take care of the needs of a certain class and might come nearer than would the national agricultural credit corporations in taking care of the entire needs of the general agricultural public; the national agricultural credit corporations will make certain the caring for in a national way of the livestock and co-operative marketing requirements.

"The House bill provides for the fixing of the rate of interest to be paid by the borrowers for the national agricultural credit corporations. After full conference, your managers were compelled to recede to the Senate provision upon the theory that we should not attempt to fix the rate of interest paid by borrowers so that was a question entirely in the hands of the states. If the precedent were established in this instance, it might mean the limiting of rates of interest charged by national banks."

U. S. HAS NO RIGHT TO HALT FRANCE IN RUHR, ROOT SAYS

Would Be Same as France Trying to Compel Us to Naturalize Japanese, Former Secretary of State Asserts

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 3. — The United States has no more right to stop France from going into the Ruhr than France would have in compelling this country to naturalize the Japanese, declared Elihu Root, former Secretary of State in an address to the newly appointed executive body of the Committee of 100 on Foreign Relations at its initial meetintg today.

"In the long course of the growth of civilization," spoke Root, "there have developed certain ways in which nations can help one another—certain good offices—mediation, conciliation, arbitration, various forms of compulsion, justified only when the nation exercising it does so in asserting its rights and then it has only the right to assert its own.

"No Right to Stop France."

"For instance: A lot of people want us to stop France going into the Ruhr. We have no more right to do that than France would have to come over here and make us naturalize the Japanese. Many people who realize that wanted us to mediate between Germany and France. We had no right to do that, unless both countries were willing and an inquiry was made, apparently to ascertain if they were, and it seemed they were not. That ended it. That stoped us unless we were willing to violate rights of France and Germany which we could not permit them to violate in our case. In most cases, international and individual, after the facts are correctly and intelligently stated, there is no room left for argument."

"The primary purpose of the Committee of 100," Root said, "is to get into the heads of the American people a series of noncontroversial facts to which everyone would agree, but which nine-tenths of the people of the United States do not know—facts which form the necessary basis of all sound reasoning upon international affairs."

Elementary Data Needed.

The voters need certain elementary data regarding national rights, national duties and national manners, he asserted, and the next thing was to obtain the means by which this information could be gotten into their minds, "some way of cutting down the economic loss in the millions, billions and trillions of words precipitated upon the world today which is frightful."

The new executive committee follows:

Chandler P. Anderson, Washington, D. C.; Edgar A. Bancroft, Chicago; Bishop Joseph F. Berry, Philadelphia; Prof. Philip Marshall Brown, Princeton University; John W. Davis, New York; Alexander Dunbar, Pittsburg; Maj.-Gen. Clarence R. Edwards, U. S. A.; Samuel Gompers and John Hays Hammond, Washington; David Jayne Hill, Washington; Jeremiah W. SIX ARMY PLANES MAKE FIRST LEG OF VIRGIN ISLAND TRIP

Craft With 12 Flyers Aboard Travel From San Antonio to New Orleans in 6 Hours Flying Time.

JOURNEY WILL BE RESUMED TODAY

Porto Rico on Route of Airmen — Air Base for Primary Defense of Canal Is Sought.

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, La., March 3.—Covering the 550 airline miles from San Antonio to New Orleans in six hours flying time, 12 flyers of the United States Army Air Service, in six De Haviland planes landed here at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon, completing the first lap of a trip to Porto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

The squadron left Kelly Field at San Antonio shortly after 8 o'clock this morning, the start having been delayed by rain. The only stop was at Houston, where the fliers ate lunch and rested an hour and a half. From Houston to New Orleans the flight was uninterrupted. The last 200 miles from Lake Charles was covered in two hours flat.

The first day's journey was without mishap, according to Capt. Thomas G. Lanphier, commanding the squadron. Low clouds interfered somewhat with visibility, but there were no accidents.

"That country between Lafayette and New Orleans didn't look very inviting for the air," said one of the pilots. "Nothing but trees and water to land in, if anything went wrong."

V-Shaped Formation.

Most of the day's flight was at an altitude of 5000 feet and above, the squadron maintaining a V-shaped wedge formation. Just before reaching New Orleans the formation was broken up to avoid accidents in landing. The flagship "Man of War," with Capt. Lanphier and Lieut. J. G. Moorman, was the first to land, followed at 2-minute intervals by the other planes. Landing conditions were ideal, the planes coming up into the head of a steady breeze.

An immediate overhauling was given plane No. 2, piloted by Lieut. G. B. Austin and Lieut. N. Longfellow. The other planes were found to be in first class shape.

The aviators were entertained tonight at a banquet given by the Military Order of the World War and the Aviation Board.

Montgomery Next Stop.

The squadron will "take off" at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow for the second lap of the journey, which will take the fliers to Montgomery, Ala.

Plans for the aerial defense of the Panama Canal and of the gulf coast ports will depend in a large measure on the success of the present trip, it was pointed out. The fliers will go to Porto Rico and from there fly to St. Thomas in the Virgin Islands in search of a suitable air base for the primary defense of the canal.

This is the first time land machines have been tried out in a flight across water and should the tenture prove successful, it will prove the feasibility of mustering the entire air force of the country in the West Indies on 48 hours' notice, it was stated.

Other pilots in the flight are: Lieuts. C. V. Hayes and James A. Woodruff, plane 3; Lieuts. C. G. McDonald and R. K. Stoner, plane 4; Lieuts. Erick Nelson and D. H. Dunton, plane 5; Lieuts. Guy M. Kirksley and E. T. Selzer, plane 6.

Route of Flight.

The route chosen for the flight is as follows:

San Antonio air intermediate depot to Houston, Tex., and thence to New Orleans, La., 550 miles; New Orleans to Montgomery, Ala., 450 miles; Montgomery to Arcadia, Fla., 450 miles; Arcadia, Fla., to Havana, Cuba, 300 miles; Havana to Santa Clara, Cuba (emergency flight only), 175 miles; Havana to Camaguey, Cuba, 325 miles; Camaguey to Guantanamo, Cuba, 200 miles; Guantanamo to Port Au Prince, Haiti, 225 miles; Port Au Prince to San Domingo, D. R., 150 miles; San Domingo to San Juan, Porto Rico, 250 miles.

Members to a Man Rise and Cheer When Veteran, Finishing 46 Years' Service, Asks Leave to "Extend Remarks."

WASHINGTON, March 3.—Representative Cannon of Illinois, "Uncle Joe," as he is known to his colleagues, received an ovation tonight such as few men have been given by the House.

The veteran of 46 years' legislative service, who voluntarily retires tomorrow from Congress, asked unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the Record on what he said he did not know about the farm credits bill. The House to a man arose and cheered him, the galleries joining in the demonstration, which lasted several minutes.

M. U. PRESIDENT REFUSES TO PERMIT MRS. O'HARE TO SPEAK

Rebukes Faculty Member Who Granted Use of University Auditorium for Meeting.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., March 3.—President J. C. Jones of the University of Missiuri this afternoon met a committee from the Veterans' Council and heard its protest against the speaking advertised here by Mrs. Kate Richards O'Hare of St. Louis. Before the committee reached the President's office, he learned that the Liberal Club had invited Mrs. O'Hare here and had advertised that she would speak in the University Auditorium Monday evening.

Dr. Jones revoked the order allowing the university auditorium or any other university building for Mrs. O'Hare's speech and called the member of the university faculty, who had granted the use of the auditorium to the Liberal Club, before him and rebuked him for his action. Dr. Jones told members of the Veterans' Council, that Mrs. O'Hare would do more harm than good in Columbia and that as a citizen he was opposed to her coming here and making a speech. Dr. Jones sent a janitor to all bulletin boards and had the notices announcing Mrs. O'Hare's speech destroyed.

M'NARY NOMINATION LIKELY TO FAIL WITH ADJOURNMENT

Banker Approved by Committee for Comptrollership of Currency but Senate Action Is Not Expected.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—The Senate controversy over the nomination of James G. McNary, prominent Southwestern banker, to be comptroller of currency, was caught tonight in a maze of matters and appeared likely to be before the Senate until the moment of adjournment.

Although the Senate Banking Committee today voted, six to five, to recommend confirmation of McNary, opponents reiterated predictions that the nomination would fail with adjournment tomorrow. Some expressed the belief that McNary would be given a recess appointment but others said they doubted such a result.

McNary's case was in an unfavorable parliamentary situation because of the short time before adjournment. With the Senate agreed to recess until 10 o'clock tomorrow, continuing the legislative day of today, the rules permitted a single objection to force postponement of action until tomorrow.

CYRUS E. WOODS NOMINATED TO BE AMBASSADOR TO JAPAN

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—Cyrus E. Woods of Pennsylvania, now Ambassador to Spain, was nominated by President Harding today to be Ambassador to Japan, succeeding Charles B. Warren, who recently resigned.

Alexander P. Moore, the Pittsburg publisher, was nominated to be Ambassador to Spain to succeed Ambassador Woods.

ENGLISH WOMAN TALKS ON WORLD PROBLEMS

Discourse on "Can We Set the World at Order" Is Essentially a Sermon.

Miss Maude Royden, English woman preacher, addressed a large audience in Moolah Temple last night. Her subject, as in all her nightly appearances scheduled for her nine weeks' American tour, was "Can We Set the World in Order?"

Miss Royden, who is 46 years old, has an adequate voice and an earnest, convincing manner. She announced no text, and stood at no pulpit or desk, but her discourse, an hour in length, was essentially a sermon. She followed this with nearly a half-hour of answers to questions asked by persons in the audience.

Spiritual power, used in accordance with spiritual law, must set the world in order. This was the substance of the address. The existence and efficacy of spiritual power, and the futility of substitutes for it, were argued by the speaker in these words:

"Spiritual law teaches us that if one member suffers, all the members suffer with it. Yet we English sent Lloyd George to Paris, with a mandate to inflict a maximum of suffering upon our defeated enemy, and to bring back peace and prosperity to us. And now that we have got peace and prosperity, now that we have 500,000 unemployed, we have concluded that Lloyd George must have been a very stupid person. We do not see that, so long as we seek the suffering of others, we must suffer, too; that we cannot defy the great spiritual laws. And so we go on setting up one Government after another, expecting it to do the impossible.

"Love Is the Law of Life."

"God is love, and love is the law of life. It is as scientific to try to restore Europe by hate and revenge as it would be to sow our fields with salt. We must put our brains into our religion. It is as asinine to try to violate spiritual law as to try to violate scientific law. We cannot in reality break the spiritual law, any more than we can break a scientific law, but we can break ourselves against it.

"Some of us have every excuse for hate—the wounds of the war have gone deep, and resentment seems inevitable. But if it is impossible to love any more, then the end has come.

"I have come to America, where science has developed such power, and where the poison of hatred and the fear of bankruptcy are not so present as they are with us, to see it you cannot keep the world out of chaos. Shall we view with a fatalistic resignation the evidences so lately found of a great ancient civilization, and conclude that our civilization is doomed, like that of Egypt, to perish? Must we believe that we have come so far in achievement, only to fail? I cannot believe it. I must protest against any such resignation to the supposed will of God. To be resigned to the present course of events is not a virtue, it is a crime. What is the will of God, but the kingdom of God? Christ has shown us what humanity should be; science has shown us that the universe is trustworthy, and that God also is trustworthy. Now shall we say we can go no farther?

One of the questioners after the discourse asked whether attempts had been made to bring about an understanding between thoughtful persons in Germany and in the allied countries. Miss Royden told, in reply, of one conference in which a German woman declared that she realized the wrong done by Germany in invading Belgium, and in which French from the devastated regions spoke in favor of a new and better understanding.

The Ruhr Invasion.

A question as to the Ruhr invasion was so framed as practically to place France and Germany upon the same level. Miss Royden, in replying, said that the Ruhr invasion was dangerous to the world's future peace, but that Germany had been the aggressor in two successive wars, and that France had reason for what seems to other nations an excessive fear. "France did not get security in the Versailles treaty," she said, "and I must say that it was partly the fault of America."

Her longest reply was to a question as to her belief as to prayer. She affirmed her belief that spirit can dominate matter. "I believe in Christ's miracles," she said. "Even science does not now tell us that miracles of healing are impossible. We are even learning to perform them ourselves. And shall we affirm that spirit can dominate the matter of the body, but cannot dominate other matter? Christ had a unique perception of spiritual law, and was able to dominate the spiritual world in a unique way, which was in accordance with law. His method was prayer, and the law of prayer is faith. The trouble with the world is that so few persons believe in prayer."

A number of ministers were in the audience. Dean Scarlett of Christ Church Cathedral introduced the speaker. Miss Royden came here from Springfield, Ill., to which she referred in her address as the birthplace of Lincoln. Another error occured when, in speaking of the origin of war, she located the scene of the murder of the Austrian Archduke in Serbia, whereas it was in Bosnia, a discontended border province of the Austrian Empire. Miss Royden speaks tonight at the University of Illinois.

SEVERAL PERSONS HURT IN ST. JOSEPH TORNADO

Thousands of Dollars Damage Reported—Thousands of Houses Wrecked.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., March 3.—A tornado which struck St. Joseph without warning late today injured seven or eight persons, plunged half of the city in darkness by leveling electric light wires and wrought property damage amounting to thousands of dollars. Only one or two of the injured are in a dangerous condition, according to hospital reports.

The storm came from the west and before hitting St. Joseph leveled a number of houses in the village of Elwood, on the Kansas side of the Missouri River, directly opposite. The tornado began its destruction at the river's edge and swept a path eastward through the lower part of the city, several hundred yards in width. The sash and door factory of the Collier-Adams Manufacturing Co. was almost wrecked, but the workmen had left the plant.

Wire poles were uprooted as the storm moved eastward and trains were unable to enter the Union Station, while street car traffic was paralyzed. Community Hall, a large brick building housing the municipal charity organizations and many other city departments, was partly destroyed. The Everett public school, one of the largest in the city, was unroofed and a brick laundry was wrecked. A number of store fronts were smashed and scores of dwellings were damaged.

In a negro quarter dozens of shanties were leveled, but only a few of the occupants suffered injury. A switch shanty in which several railroad men and some boys had taken refuge from a drenching rain was picked up and carried several hundred feet. A switchman was severely injured and with two of the boys slightly hurt. Reports from the country east of here are to the effect that there was heavy damage to barns and other farm buildings, but no fatalities have been reported. The tornado is believed to have spent its force soon after it struck St. Joseph.

A large number of passengers were bruised and scratched when a street car was overturned and rolled from the track to the sidewalk.

Negro families and some whites who were rendered homeless were cared for tonight by the city authorities.

"His part in the victory which has been achieved will be held in grateful remembrance by generations of the new Ireland which he was privileged to see enter upon the path of independence.

"Foremost in the councils of his adopted country, he died as he would have wished, at his post—a great American who laid his splendid gifts unreservedly upon her republican altar. The Government and people of Ireland share your grief and desire to assure you of their keen sympathy and remembrance in this dark hour of your affliction."

OUSTER WRIT BARS BRANCH NATIONAL BANKS IN MISSOURI

SIX JUSTICES JOIN IN OPINION

Plan of First National to Open String of Branches Brought Protest From Outlying Banks.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 3.—National banks are not entitled to open branches in this State, it is held, in effect, in an opinion by the Supreme Court of Missouri, en banc, today, granting a writ of ouster against the operation by the First National Bank of St. Louis of a branch in the old Night and Day Bank, 518 Olive street, St. Louis.

Granting the writ means that the First National must close its branch, which was the first of a number it had planned to conduct in St. Louis. It is understood here, however, that the bank has the right of appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States, and that if this is taken the branch could be retained pending a decision.

The opinion held that there was nothing in the national banking act authorizing national banks to establish branches in Missouri, for the reason that the Federal law provides national banks may establish branches only when the laws of the State in which they are, permit the establishment of branches, and pointed out that Missouri banking laws specifically prohibited banks from having branches.

Opinion by Justice Walker.

Apart from this, the opinion which was written by Justice Walker, was largely confined to a discussion of pertinent cases at law. Five of the other Justices concurred. The sixth, Justice Ragland, did not sit in the case.

Assistant Attorney-General Merrill Otis was chief representative of the State in the suit, which was a quo warranto proceeding brought in the name of the State at the relation of Attorney-General Barrett. When Barrett took up the matter he told newspaper men he was doing so because, in his opinion, if national banks were permitted to establish branches, it would mean the virtual elimination of smaller banks in the cities and of community banks in small towns.

After the opinion was handed down today Barrett explained that the State's attitude had been that if national banks were permitted to establish branches, it would mean the ultimate nationalization of all State banks.

Opposition to Branches.

Announcement by the First National Bank, last May, that it planned to open branches at certain business locations throughout St. Louis, brought a storm of protest from outlying bankers, who feared the effect of such competition. At the time First National officers stated that their attorneys had informed them that a national bank was permitted to open additional places of business within the city where it was located. In spite of a tradition based on an old ruling of a Comptroller of the Currency that the law was limited to a single location.

An attorney for the outlying banks announced that a State law prohibited State banks from having branches, and that there had been no recent ruling as to national banks. The First National opened its first branch at the old Night and Day Bank location on June 15 last. The outlying banks induced Gov. Hyde to request an opinion as to the legality of this from the Attorney General. Thereupon the quo warranto proceeding was brought, as a test.

Small Banks Organized.

Smaller banks organized the Association of Missouri Banks and Trust Companies Opposed to Branch Banking and it was announced in September that this organization comprised 1134 banks and trust companies in its membership, out of 1650 in Missouri. The association began an extensive advertising campaign to obtain support for a bill introduced in Congress by Senator Capper and Congressman Dyer, to prohibit expressly the operation of branches by national banks except in states where State banks may have branches.

This association, on Jan. 7, requested Comptroller of the Currency Crissinger to close the First National's branch, on the ground that he had closed two branch banks in Tacoma, Wash., upon finding that the Washington banking laws did not permit branches. A resolution asking the Comptroller of the Currency to prohibit national bank branches in Missouri was adopted by the State Senate Jan. 24.

F. O. Watts, president of the First National Bank, said yesterday that he had received no formal notice of the granting of the writ of ouster by the Supreme Court, and therefore declined to comment on the decision or discuss the possibility of appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States.

OUSTER WRIT BARS BRANCH NATIONAL BANKS IN MISSOURI

Plan of First National to Open String of Branches Brought Protest From Outlying Banks.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 3.—National banks are not entitled to open branches in this State, it is held, in effect, in an opinion by the Supreme Court of Missouri, en banc, today, granting a writ of ouster against the operation by the First National Bank of St. Louis of a branch in the old Night and Day Bank, 518 Olive street, St. Louis.

Granting the writ means that the First National must close its branch, which was the first of a number it had planned to conduct in St. Louis. It is understood here, however, that the bank has the right of appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States, and that if this is taken the branch could be retained pending a decision.

The opinion held that there was nothing in the national banking act authorizing national banks to establish branches in Missouri, for the reason that the Federal law provides national banks may establish branches only when the laws of the State in which they are, permit the establishment of branches, and pointed out that Missouri banking laws specifically prohibited banks from having branches.

Opinion by Justice Walker.

Apart from this, the opinion, which was written by Justice Walker, was largely confined to a discussion of pertinent cases at law. Five of the other Justices concurred. The sixth, Justice Ragland, did not sit in the case.

Assistant Attorney-General Merrill Otis was chief representative of the State in the suit, which was a quo warranto proceeding brought in the name of the State at the relation of Attorney-General Barrett. When Barrett took up the matter he told newspaper men he was doing so because, in his opinion, if national banks were permitted to establish branches, it would mean the virtual elimination of smaller banks in the cities and of community banks in small towns.

After the opinion was handed down today Barrett explained that the State's atttitude had been that if national banks were permitted to establish branches, it would mean the ultimate nationalization of all State banks.

Opposition to Branches.

Announcement by the First National Bank, last May, that it planned to open branches at central business locations throughout St. Louis, brought a storm of protest by outlying bankers, who feared the effect of such competition. At that time First National officers stated that their attorneys had informed them that a national bank was permitted to open additional places of business within the city where it was located, in spite of a tradition based on an old ruling of a Comptroller of the Currency that they were limited to a single location.

An attorney for the outlying banks announced that a State law prohibited State banks from having branches, and that there had been no recent ruling as to national banks. The First National opened its first branch at the old Night and Day Bank location on June 15 last. The outlying banks induced Gov. Hyde to request an opinion as to the legality of this from the Attorney-General. Thereupon the quo warranto proceeding was brought, as a test.

Small Banks Organized.

Smaller banks organized the Association of Missouri Banks and Trust Companies Opposed to Branch Banking and it was announced in September that this organization comprised 1184 banks and trust companies in its membership, out of 1650 in Missouri. The association began an extensive advertising campaign to obtain support for a bill introduced in Congress by Senator Capper and Congressman Dyer to prohibit expressly the operation of branches by national banks except in states where State banks may have branches.

This association, on Jan. 7, requested Comptroller of the Currency Crissinger to close the First National's branch, on the ground that he had closed two branch banks in Tacoma, Wash., upon finding that the Washington banking laws did not permit branches. A resolution asking the Comptroller of the Currency to prohibit national bank branches in Missouri was adopted by the State Senate Jan. 24.

F. O. Watts, president of the First National Bank, said yesterday that he had received no formal notice of the granting of the writ of ouster by the Supreme Court, and, therefore, declined to comment on the situation or discuss the possibility of an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States.

Community Fund Workers Hope to Reach Goal by Tomorrow Night—$301,340 More Needed

Teams Encouraged by Yesterday's Showing Which Brought Total Up to $780,344—Churches to Be Visited Today.

Optimism is again the spirit of officers of the campaign for the $1,081,684 Community Fund for 1923, considering the chances of raising the fund in full, as the campaign draws to a close. This attitude was fostered largely by the report yesterday that $780,344 had been pledged up to noon, or 72.2 per cent of the fund, which is for 40 charities of St. Louis and St. Louis County.

During the last several days fear had been expressed that the goal would not be reached. John L. Johnston, chairman of the Campaign Committee, last night declared his belief that the fund would be completed. His reasons were that the 64 teams canvassing the general public had made a better showing yesterday than before, that giving had become more widespread among the people, and that a considerable number of givers had promised to increase their subscriptions if need be. They may be called upon to do so.

The solicitors planned to appear in churches today in carrying on their work, and also to visit residences. All restrictions as to the territory the various solicitors may cover have been lifted and each member of the small army of workers is at liberty to go wherever he or she pleases in search of gifts today and tomorrow.

$301,340 to Be Raised.

The amount to be raised between yesterday noon and tomorrow night is $301,340. The next and final report of pledges will be made at a dinner for workers at 6:30 p. m. tomorrow at Hotel Chase. The number of separate pledges up to noon yesterday was 23,135 and the total sum for the 24 hours which ended then was $140,940.95.

Fifty-five of the canvassing teams had raised 50 per cent or more of their quotas by yesterday, and 17 of these had raised more than their quotas. The leading group was the team captained by J. Fred Mocker, with pledges equivalent to 300 per cent of its quota.

Support by Ministers Urged.

The Church Federation yesterday sent a letter to ministers, urging support of the Community Fund, which was signed by the Rev. George A. Campbell, the Rev. Ivan Lee Holt and the Rev. Arthur H. Armstrong, officers of the federation. It follows:

"The Christian people of St. Louis and those who are minded to help others—all unselfish spirits—must not let the apeal for the Community Fund fail. There are some very few who have already gone to the limit in assuming obligations. Of course this is a matter between God and themselves. Jesus Christ stands before every citizen in the person of any needy human being. It is the scar on His pierced hand that our contributions should cover. The divine call comes to every heart in the appeal of suffering. We cannot be deaf to this voice of God.

"The united, co-operating community voted nearly $90,000,000 for the city's civic needs. This great forward step in community co-operation must be followed by another. Forty co-operating philanthropic and charitable organizations approach St. Louis together on behalf of suffering humanity. This step St. Louis also must take. The response to the appeal for the Community Fund should be immediate and overwhelming."

Archbishop Glennon Gives $100.

A subscription of $100 by Archbishop Glennon was announced yesterday. In making it he remarked: "It is not the size of the gift, but the spirit that counts." He had previously indorsed the purposes of the fund, as had a representative of the Jewish charities. Neither Catholic or Jewish charities are represented in this, the first year of the Community Fund, because money had been raised previously for them, but they are expected to participate hereafter. It has been noticed that many Catholics and Jews have contributed to the fund, however.

Large pledges reported yesterday totaling $51,025, were:

$2500 each—Moon Motor Car Co., Chevrolet Motor Co., Frank O. Watts, Edwards Whitaker.

$1500 each—Mr. and Mrs. David May, Vesper-Buick Auto Co.

$1000 each—Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Hammer, the Globe-Democrat, Charles H. Peters, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lesser, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Goldman, Mr. and Mrs. Morton J. May, Mrs. F. E. Woodruff.

mount to controlling all the territory deep into the interior.

Everything the French might seize—records, automobiles, railroad equipment, bicycles, horses, wagons—fill the roads leading to the East. There is a rush on the banks to remove savings.

The military Rhine frontier presupposes control all the way to the mountains to the eastward, and if an eventual separate Rhineland is planned, it would require complete occupation of both banks. Germany, however, regards the fresh advances as pressure to force negotiations.

Mixed Arbitration Tribunal Resumes Sittings in Paris.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, March 3.—The mixed arbitration tribunal, which was originally composed of French and Germans, resumed its sittings in Paris today and the proceedings are being followed with keen interest by diplomats, international jurists and those who are strongly supporting the League of Nations.

It may be recalled that the German Government, owing to political conditions, withdrew its judges sitting on this tribunal. France had foreseen the possibility of such action, and on the departure of the German judges called on the League of Nations to apply article 304 of the Versailles treaty and nominate judges selected from neutral nations to replace the Germans.

The French and neutral judges met this morning and at the opening of the session of the French Minister of Justice welcomed the new members and invited them to maintain to the highest degree the principles of international law.

GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS' NAMES ON ALLEGED BOOTLEGGER'S LIST

Cabinet Officer, Members of Congress and Navy Officers Indexed as Customers, Washington Police Say.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 3. — The names of some high Government officials and army and navy officers were found indexed in the books of an alleged bootlegger arrested today, police reported.

Included in the list of customers, according to police, were names of a Cabinet officer, six members of Congress, 15 high navy officers, several of high rank in the army and exclusive women's and men's clubs. The amounts sold to each and financial standings also were recorded, police said, adding that the man arrested had made a practice of submitting monthly statements.

Police declared the alleged bootlegger, James Martyn Connor, had boasted he would never be arrested because of his exclusive clientele.

KING ALFONSO EMPHATICALLY DENIES ABDICATION RUMOR

Spanish Monarch Says He Is Always Ready to Do His Duty and if Necessary to Die in Doing It.

By the Associated Press.

MADRID, March 3.—King Alfonso, in a speech at the inauguration of the new Library of Fine Arts today, gave definite denial to rumors of the possibility of his abdication.

"It will give me much pleasure to lay the foundation stone of the new school, and if possible, also the last stone," he said. "I say this because of the rumor recently published indicating that I was about to abdicate. I am not a deserter; I desire to remain at my post. I am always ready to do my duty, and even to die if necessary in executing it.

"The King of Spain could never abdicate in order to avoid dealing with the problems and difficulties presenting themselves."

Alfonso said the Madrid newspaper which published the rumor was misinformed and had acted in an incorrect manner.

The fire was sweeping the Babinda when the boats left and she had a list that was expected to send her to the bottom.

VIENNA JOURNAL CONFISCATED

VIENNA, March 3.—The Arbiter Zeitung, leading Social Democratic newspaper in Austria, was confiscated this morning. The action was taken because the paper criticised the Government for its suppression of the Wiener Neustadt Gleicheit, Social organ. The Gleichheit had urged its subscribers to disregard the question on the census sheet relating to race and origin.

FEUD FLARES UP, MAN SHOOTING HIS BROTHER AND NIECE

Joseph Cooper of Bloomfield, Mo., Fires From Auto Passing Around Buggy, Later Surrenders.

WOUNDED MAN KILLED OTHER'S SON

Pair Said Not to Have Met Before Since Slayer Was Given 10-Year Sentence Last October.

By Long Distance Telephone to the Post-Dispatch.

BLOOMFIELD, Mo., March 3.—"There's Jim Cooper, the killer of my boy."

With these words, officers of Stoddard County say, Joseph Cooper of Bloomfield, Mo., suddenly drew an automatic pistol yesterday morning and opened fire, as the automobile in which he was riding four miles out of Bloomfield passed around a buggy containing his brother, James, and the latter's daughter.

The car sped on toward Bloomfield over the rought hill roads, leaving "Jim" Cooper wounded in the hip and his daughter in the arm. The driver of the machine, a 20-year-old youth, was too surprised and shaken to stop, he told officers. Besides he had no desire to mix in the 20-year-old feud of the Cooper family, which has resulted in three deaths within the last two years.

Joe Cooper Surrenders.

Joe Cooper surrendered to Sheriff Roscoe Walker, after getting out of the automobile a mile from Bloomfield and walking into town, because he "didn't want to get the driver of the car in trouble." He refused to make a statement and is being held pending the outcome of the injuries to the wounded man and girl. They are expected to recover.

The shooting occurred within a few miles of the farm home of "Jim Cooper near Acquilla, and in the same locality in which the three other feud victims were shot to death.

Sheriff Walker said he believed Joe and Jim Cooper had not met until yesterday, except in Bloomfield, since Jim was sentenced to 10 years in the penitentiary last October for the murder of Joe's son, Clarence.

Shooting of Clarence Cooper.

Clarence at the time was under bond, after a trial in which the jury disagreed, charged with killing Jim's son, Edgar, and William Cooper, a brother of the two men who figured in yesterday's shooting. Joe Cooper was also charged with these murders, but the case against him was dropped.

Jim, who is said to have mortgaged his farm and spent most of his money in prosecuting Clarence for his son Edgar's death, claimed self-defense when tried for shooting Clarence. He asserted the latter, whom he and his wife overtook on the road, grabbed the couple's buggy horse by the bit, reached for his hip pocket and declared, "I'm going to kill you now. I've got you where I want you."

After shooting Clarence, Jim and his wife drove off, leaving the body in the road, where it was found three hours later by Joe, father of the slain man. At the trial in which Jim was convicted, it was testified that bullet wounds in Clarence's head indicated he had been shot from behind.

Wife to be Tried.

Jim is now out on an appeal bond, in his fight to keep out of the penitentiary for this killing. His wife, Clare Cooper, goes to trial at this term of the Circuit Court at Bloomfield, also charged with the murder of Clarence.

The meeting between the fathers of the two slain boys yesterday is believed to have been an accidental one, as Joe was walking to Acquilla to take a train to Bloomfield, when the youth in the automobile offered him a ride.

Jim is thought to have been unarmed. "I believe I've got all his guns in the courthouse," said Sheriff Walker.

MAN GETS $30,000 VERDICT FOR INJURY IN AUTO COLLISION

A jury in Circuit Judge Taylor's court yesterday returned a verdict for $30,000 in favor of William A. Deems, 1348 McCausland avenue, a commission merchant, against James H. Grover, 5061 Lindell boulevard, vice president of the St. Louis Union Trust Co., for injury Deems suffered in an accident Oct. 25, 1921, when their automobiles collided in Forest Park at Skinker road and Wells drive. Deems sued for $75,000 damages, alleging that his spine was hurt so that he is compelled to wear constantly a steel brace or corset. He asserted that the collision, which occurred at 7 p. m., was due to negligence on the part of the defendant.

Grover denied that he was driving his car fast, as charged by the plaintiff. Just before the collision, he said, he had slowed down for a crossing. He said he had the right of way, did not have any warning of the approach of the other car and that the accident was unavoidable so far as he was concerned. David R. Francis Jr., who was in the machine with Grover, testified for the defendant.

HAYES AGAIN CONVICTED AND SENTENCED TO DIE

Jury for the Second Time Fixes Punishment at Hanging in Case of Deck Killing.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HILLSBORO, Mo., March 3.—Eugene Hayes, 27 years old, of Herculaneum, Jefferson County, was convicted by a jury here today on a charge of murder, for the second time, and his punishment again fixed at hanging.

The same verdict in the first trial, in July, 1921, had been reversed and remanded by the Supreme Court of Missouri on a technicality. The charge was that Hayes hired James Seward of St. Louis to assassinate Andrew Deck, a prohibition informer, at Herculaneum, Feb. 26, 1921.

The first verdict in Hayes' case was reversed because it was held there was error in not including in the instructions to the jury one for the benefit of the defendant, to the effect that he was to be acquitted if it was found he had not "aided, hired or abetted" Seward in killing Deck. This instruction was included in those given the jury yesterday.

The jury deliberated an hour and a half, returning its verdict at 1:50 p. m., as told in the Final Edition of yesterday's Post-Dispatch. Testimony was heard Thursday and Friday. It did not vary from that of the previous trial, except that new evidence designed to support Hayes' contention that he had been mistreated by the St. Louis police to force a confession was introduced. This resulted in the arrest of a defense witness as he left the stand, under a bench warrant charging the giving of false testimony.

Told of Seeing Blood on Shirt.

This witness was Fred Abbott, who said he lived at 2327 Park avenue, St. Louis, and was a florist's employe. He swore that he had looked through a window of Police Captain Kirk's office in the Soulard Street Police Station, St. Louis, when Hayes was being questioned there, from the sidewalk, and saw the defendant's shirt smeared with blood. To controvert this, the State called Capt. Kirk and other policemen, who declared the windows weer frosted so that they obstructed vision, and had been closed at the time. Circuit Judge Dearing fixed Abbott's bond at $500. He had not furnished bond late this afternoon.

It is expected that a new trial will be asked for Hayes. He was defended by Attorney James Booth of Pacific. The State was represented by former Prosecuting Attorney R. E. Kleinschmidt of Hillsboro, who prosecuted Hayes the first time, because the present Prosecuting Attorney, Charles J. White of Festus, represented Hayes then.

Seward Sentenced to Be Hanged.

Seward, who, it was charged, was hired by Hayes to kill Deck, was convicted and sentenced to be hanged in July, 1921. The Supreme Court upheld the sentence and the execution was set for Jan. 26 last. However, Gov. Hyde granted him a 60-day reprieve, in order to determine whether he merited commutation of his sentence to life imprisonment. This period will expire March 27. The Supreme Court had granted an additional 30-day reprieve, which ran concurrently with the first, and has expired.

Ernest Hayes, father of Eugene Hayes, was convicted in the Deck case and sentenced to be hanged, but his appeal to the Supreme Court is pending. William Hayes, brother of Eugene, was convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment, but obtained a new trial. Otto and Jesse Thomas, brothers, were acquitted of the charge.

REMMERS TELLS G. O. P. COMMITTEE TO "GO TO HELL"

Neun "Not to Throw Mud."

Neun, the next speaker, declared, "I'm not going to throw any mud in my campaign. I'm going to conduct a gentleman's campaign." He outlined his conception of duty in public office and said he was not seeking the office, but was doing his duty as he saw it, and as had been urged by his friends.

The man chosen, he added, "must be a man of ability, one whom the people can have confidence in, and not someone who is tied up with any organization or industry."

Remmers is attorney for Anheuser-Busch, Inc., and the Busch interests control several companies, including the Manufacturers' Railroad.

The usual practice of holding political meetings in all sections of the city is noticeably absent in this campaign. Thus far the Republican City Committee has made no announcement of any ward meetings, arranged heretofore to give the candidates an opportunity to address the voters.

This situation, it is said, is to the disadvantage of candidates for aldermanic berths who have no organization support. The 14 Aldermen to be elected will be chosen by city-wide vote. The general rule has been that the aldermanic candidate with the support of his ward committeemen is supported by committeemen in other wards. This gives an advantage to the organization candidates.

Remmers has the support of City Collector Koeln. The only committeeman known to be supporting him is Joseph Metzler of Koeln's ward, the Twelfth.

Several Candidates Present.

Mrs. Frank P. Hays, president of the Republican Women's Club, welcomed the Republican candidates, all of whom had been invited to speak before the club. Brief talks were made by the following aldermanic candidates: Walter H. Stempf, Eighth Ward; Elmer E. Walter, Twenty-fourth; Chauncey J. Krueger, incumbent, Twenty-fourth; George Meisinger, incumbent, Tenth; Adam Reis, incumbent, Sixteenth; Herman C. Kralemann, incumbent, Twenty-second; Ralph H. Eilers, incumbent, Twenty-sixth; John Brod Jr., Twenty-eighth; Max Paffrath, Fourteenth; Wilbur C. Schwartz, Twentieth; Gus Baur, incumbent, Fourteenth, and Dr. Edwin F. Randall, Second.

Randall said he was a member of the old City Council for four years "and managed to keep out of jail."

A labor issue entered into the campaign last week with publication in the bulletin of the Trades Union Educational League of the Central Trades and Labor Union, of a speech made by Remmers two years ago opposing an "open shop" resolution which had been placed before the directors of the Chamber of Commerce. The speech was reprinted in full, and indorsement was given Remmers on his position.

The Young Men's Republican Club yesterday announced indorsement of Neun. Aldermanic candidates from the 14 wards from which Aldermen are to be elected April 3, also were indorsed, all of them Republican organization candidates, except William F. Ringhoff, of the Sixth Ward.

WEEKS PLANS TO ABROGATE GOLTRA BARGE CONTRACT

boats on the lower river, but, in order to guard against a possible traffic war, between two Government agencies, he stipulated that Goltra should not take business which the established line was equipped to handle without the consent of the War Department.

Subsequently, after St. Louis grain shippers had put in an urgent request for more boats on the lower river, Goltra was given blanket permission to make contracts for the handling of grain without further authority from the War Department. The department announced that it wanted Goltra to operate and would help him in every possible way if he did operate. There never has been any restriction on him except with respect to the lower river.

Goltra, here today, said that he had heard nothing from the War Department about a proposed cancellation of the contract. Such action, he added, would not be justified. He expected to depart for St. Louis tonight.

Mrs. Boland Quits G. O. P. Board.

Mrs. E. A. Boland of 6104 Berthold avenue, Republican City Committeewoman for the Twenty-fourth Ward, sent a letter of resignation to W. F. Smith, Republican City Committeeman in that ward, Friday, in which she stated she had too many other duties, and that she could not give the time to the work she felt the position merited. Smith said an appointment would be made from the women's Republican organization.

27 ARRESTS MADE IN 14 GAMBLING RAIDS

Places Suspected of Being Headquarters for Race Betting Visited Simultaneosuly.

Fourteen places suspected of being headquarters for race betting were raided simultaneously at 2 p. m. yesterday by 30 detectives, who arrested 27 men and booked them as "suspected of gambling." The wholesale raiding followed instructions from Chief of Detectives Hoagland for a campaign against bookmakers, who, he said, were reported to be doing a large business in the downtown district.

Every effort was made to keep the plans secret. However, when Detective-Sergeant Robert Bourland answered a telephone in an electric shop at 19 North Ninth street, which had just been raided, he listened in on a hasty warning of "choke it, cut it out." The proprietor of the shop, Cecil J. Powers, 23 years old, of 413 Blase avenue, and seven customers were arrested. Two racing forms and some tabulated bets were found, officers said.

The 27 men arrested were released on bonds last night and the cases will be placed before the Circuit Attorney. Police have been hampered in such cases by an interpretation of the law by the Circuit Attorney that in order to establish a case against a defendant charged with receiving bets on horse races, it must be proved that the horse named in the bet ran in the race on which the bet was placed. Hoagland said last night he was going to continue to raid places under suspicion.

Places were raided, and proprietors or employes arrested, as follows: Saloon, 17 North Ninth street, Hugh Sweeney, 34, of 3044 Ashland avenue; cigar store, 1726 Olive street; Albert Yaeger, 1622 Knapp street, and two customers; book and stationery store, 410 Washington avenue, Joseph J. Foster, 4216 Washington boulevard; poolroom, 2235 North Broadway, Louis Rosenthal, 51, of 5595 Bartmer avenue; cigar store, 103 North Eighth street, James Byrnes, 2443 North Spring avenue, and one customer; room No. 214, Brevort Hotel, 412 Pine street, William Seldhus, a clerk; cigar store, 923 Chestnut street, Fred Smith, 5209 Page boulevard; cigar store, 325 Walnut street, Charles Deibel, 2316 Park avenue; cigar store, 117 North Tenth street, John Goetz, 1235 Market street, and Christ Fontana, who said he was a broker, of 4636 Newberry terrace; a room in the Benoist Building, 202 North Ninth street, John Clark, 56, residing at the Lacleda Hotel; poolroom, 307 Pine street, Fred Bock, and one man, who, police said, stated he came there to place a bet; cigar store, southwest corner of Twelfth boulevard and Olive street, John McElroy, 4520 Forest Park boulevard, and two customers.

Detectives Roach and Kincer raided the cigar store of Tom Kearney, at 407 Walnut street. They found Kearney seated in a chair in front of a counter and Dan Murphy, residing at the Metropole Hotel, in a rear room. No evidence of betting was found.

BABIES HERE EXCEL IN TRUE AMERICAN TYPE

Yet Health Show Examinations Indicate Flat Feet Are Common.

St. Louis babies approach closer to the true American type than children anywhere else in the United States, according to Dr. C. St. Clair Drake of Chicago, in charge of the examination of babies at the Health Show, which closes at the Coliseum tonight.

Dr. Drake bases his statement on a comparison of the records of the entrants at the local baby show with a standard chart, compiled from the examination of 15,000 babies throughout the country. St. Louis babies, although running truer to the American type than infants in other sections of the country, have proved no exception to babies in any community in that they are 80 per cent defective. This does not mean that the other 20 per cent are 100 per cent perfect. Dr. Drake said yesterday that in his examination of 15,000 babies he never had seen a "perfect" specimen. Those infants who are not victims of some physical or mental defect lack some of the many fine points that constitute a perfect baby.

Flat feet and overnourkishment are two defects common to St. Louis babies, according to Dr. Drake. The tendency of the St. Louis infant's pedal extremity to rest entirely on the ground is particularly noticeable, he said, and the leaning toward "fleshiness" caused defective marks to be placed against children otherwise healthy.

Many Pretty Boy Babies Here.

Another surprising feature of the baby examinations, Dr. Drake said, was the number of handsome boys presented for examination. "The rosy-cheeked, pretty-featured male infants I have examined in St. Louis should all have been girls," he said.

Eighty babies were examined daily at the show, with the exception of yesterday, when the remaining 160 entrants were all passed through the examination rooms. First and second prizes of $10 savings accounts will be awarded to the winners in each of the eight divisions, at 4 p. m. today. A silver loving cup will be presented to the mother of the most nearly perfect infant examined. Twelve sets of twins were examined in the division for these children. A special division for triplets was kept open throughout the show, but no triplets were presented for examination.

Dr. Max C. Starkloff, Health Commissioner, who had charge of the show, said yesterday that the people of St. Louis had shown a "wonderful response" to it, and that he could state definitely that this health exhibition would be an annual event. Crowds that taxed the capacity of the Coliseum viewed the exhibits Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights, according to Dr. Starkloff. Everyone attending expressed a deep interest and seemed eager to correct living conditions not conducive to health, he said.

SHERIFF MOHRSTADT IMPROVED

Operation of Blood Transfusion at Hospital Helps Patient.

Sheriff Charles E. Mohrstadt was reported yesterday as improved in condition as a result of a blood-transfusion operation performed on him at the St. Louis Baptist Hospital. He was taken there last Monday suffering from a complication of ailments resulting from a severe cold, and it was found that his system was so run down it would be necessary to transfuse blood of a robust person. As is customary in such cases, an advertisement for human blood was published, and among others who responded was a city fireman who happened to be a neighbor of Mohrstadt.

The fireman's blood proved to be what was needed and after several more transfusions it is believed the Sheriff soon will be able to leave the hospital.

QUICK HEARING IN CASE OF DIAMOND BANKRUPTCY URGED

Examination to Determine Value of Assets Urged by Attorney for Receiver of Harris & Kober Firm.

HARRIS SAYS BROKER HAS $500,000 OF GEMS

Charges Simon Van Raalte Outgeneraled Him—Latter Says He Stands to Lose $150,000 Himself.

Morris Levinson, counsel for the receiver in the bankruptcy proceeding against the Harris & Kober Diamond Importing Co., 704 Olive street, which has failed, with liabilities estimated at $1,200,000, will ask Federal Judge Faris tomorrow for an order for the immediate examination of the alleged bankrupts before Referee in Bankruptcy Coles.

The purpose of this hurried proceeding, Levinson said, is to determine as quickly as possible the actual assets of the concern, and particularly as to the disposition of a large purchase of diamonds recently made in New York and for which Judge Faris Friday morning issued six reclamation orders.

Attorneys for the creditors doubt that the assets will exceed $75,000, but Louis K. Harris, member of the firm, added a cipher to this figure in a statement to the Post-Dispatch by declaring that the assets should be $750,000.

Involuntary Bankruptcy Action.

As has been told, the bankruptcy proceeding was an involuntary one, filed Tuesday by three New York jewelers, members of the National Jewelers' Board of Trade, and set forth that Harris & Kober had committed acts of bankruptcy by making payments to preferred creditors within the last month.

The first statements by Harris, who has acted as spokesman for the firm, indicated that the failure was due to extended credits and economic conditions over which the firm had no control. But in an interview yesterday he said that in a series of transactions with Simon Van Raalte of 36 Washington terrace, wealthy investment broker and real estate operator, he was outgeneraled by Van Raalte, who now had virtually all of the firm's diamonds.

Van Raalte at his home last night said that Harris' charge was an unwarranted attack upon his honor and said he would like to know what Harris & Kober did with all the thousands of dollars that they had "swindled" from him.

Harris had said that the failure of his firm was due to being in the clutches of Van Raalte.

"The truth of the matter is that I am in their clutches for $150,000 that I lose in their failure," Van Raalte said. "I have not slept for four nights from thinking of my losses."

Harris said Van Raalte had nearly $500,000 worth of diamonds upon which he said his firm borrowed money, and that Van Raalte charged him interest on loans made on notes at the rate of 18 per cent a year.

Denies Charging Illegal Rate.

Van Raalte said he could prove that he never charged above the legal rate of interest, and that the diamonds he held as security for Harris & Kober's signature to "worthless paper" would not be appraised by honest diamond experts at more than $125,000.

Entered Business 45 Years Ago.

Harris said that he and Kober entered the diamond importing business about 15 years ago with a capital of $12,000 and began borrowing money from Van Raalte a few years ago.

On Feb. 12 Harris went to New York to purchase diamonds, and while there, he related, received a telephone message from Kober that their bank here had refused to honor their checks against a deposited check.

Harris hurried home with $65,000 worth of diamonds that he said he had purchased in New York, giving customers' notes in payment. When he arrived here he found that the firm's credit was ruined, and pressing obligations were due Feb. 25, he said.

"Got Diamonds and Notes, Too."

In the last few years, several customers who hade made large purchases gave extended notes in payment. These notes were hypothecated, Harris said, at a liberal discount to Van Raalte, who also demanded on most of them diamonds to secure the indorsement of Harris & Kober. In this way, Harris explained, Van Raalte got the customers' notes that were given in payment for diamonds, and also diamonds to secure them.

"If, for example," Harris explained, "I sold a customer $10,000 worth of diamonds and he gave me a 12 months' note for that amount, Van Raalte would let us have $8500 on the note and require about $14,000 worth of diamonds to secure our indorsement thereon.

"In this way Van Raalte got over $200,000 of our best paper and nearly $500,000 worth of diamonds, for which our firm received not more than $275,000."

Van Raalte's Version.

Van Raalte gave an entirely different version of the transactions.

"At various times," he explained, "Harris came to my office and said his company was doing too much business for its limited capital; that its bank line was full. He persuaded me to buy the notes of different people, stating that they were customers' notes for merchandise.

"It now appears that he had certain of his friends give him accommodation notes that they signed to indicate that they owed him money. These notes he sold to me. In this way I acquired and now own over $200,000 of this paper, so much of it of doubtful value that I stand to lose $150,000 in excess of the security I hold.

"I had a narrow escape. I had rediscounted a lot of this paper and four banks called me quick a few days ago for exactly $181,000. Don't think I didn't have to hustle. And now they say I've got all their diamonds!"

Harris and his partner, Samuel L. Kober, as individuals, purchased a pawnshop in October, 1921, from Van Raalte, for which they agreed to pay him $374,000. This business, in the Holland Building, had been the property of Van Raalte for 30 years.

Says Payments Were Kept Up.

Harris and Kober paid Van Raalte $100,000 cash and gave pledges, consisting of notes and merchandise, as security for the balance, which was to have been paid off in installments of $5000 a month. Harris said these payments were kept up. Van Raalte declared that Harris and Kober were several months in arrears.

Harris and Kober, again as individuals, are interested in a housing trust and in a contracting company. They declare that money of the diamond business was not used in these enterprises.

Attorneys for the creditors say that more of these transactions will be disclosed in the bankruptcy hearing. The attorneys say that the firm has outstanding notes exceeding $500,000; a contingent liability of $140,000, and a liability for goods recently purchased amounting to $150,000.

They are demanding the immediate examination of the alleged bankrupts to trace some of the recently purchased diamonds, of which there seems to be only about $15,000 worth in stock.

J. G. W. Schoenthaler of the Elsenstadt Jewelry Co. was appointed receiver by Federal Judge Faris, under a bond of $100,000.

$75,000 TO AID PROSECUTION OF HERRIN MINE RIOT CASES

Bill Became Effective Today, It Is Said, Despite Governor's Veto.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 3.—A bill appropriating $75,000 for the use of the Attorney-General in prosecuting the Herrin mine riot cases will become effective at midnight tonight under the 10-day statute, as Gov. Small did not sign the measure, nor permitted it to reach the legislative limit without executive consideration.

$60,000 Damage in Fire.

Fire at 6:55 last night caused $5000 damage to the five-story brick building of the Pioneer Fur Co., 114 North First street, and $1000 to the stock of mink, raccoon and other furs. The stock of the Missouri Fur Co., next door south, was damaged $100 by water. A gas-heated drying room was in operation when the fire started. A minor explosion of fire gases temporarily drove firemen out of the second floor. Two alarms were sounded.

DISSOLUTION OF ANTHRACITE TRUST SOUGHT BY U. S.

Attorney-General Announces Plan for Carrying Out Order Against Lehigh Valley Railroad.

The Post-Dispatch Bureau,
No. 20 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—Complete dissolution of the Anthracite Coal Trust is sought by Attorney-General Daugherty through the plan filed today in the Federal Court of the Southern District of New York for carrying out the Supreme Court dissolution order, the Department of Justice announced.

Daugherty found defects in the plan of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Co. for carrying into effect the Supreme Court mandate, insisting that the court should retain jurisdiction in the case to guard against any attempted evasion of the decree. On the plan presented by the Government Daugherty stated:

"The result of the plan now proposed, if carried into effect, would be at once to divest the Lehigh Railroad Co. of all right, title and interest in the coal company, Coxe Brothers & Co. and the Delaware, Susquehanna & Schuylkill Railroad Co., and to terminate the domination exercised by these combined companies over the Lehigh Valley Coal Sales Co. The Lehigh Valley's interest in the said stocks would, in the first instance, be transferred to trustees who would hold the same under the authority of and subject to the directions of the court.

"Within a short time, the Lehigh Valley Railroad Co.'s interest in these companies would pass into the hands of persons who are in no wise connected with or interested in the railroad. Thus there would be not merely a complete termination of all intercorporation relations between the companies, but they will actually pass under separate ownership and control.

"The effectiveness of the plan involves the disposition in good faith by all stockholders of the railroad of either the rail holdings or their coal interests."

Legality of Government's Dissolution Plan is Approved.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 3.—Federal Judge Learned Hand today approved the legal aspects of the Government's plan for dissolution of "The Anthracite Coal Trust" and separation of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Co. and coal subsidiaries, Acting Attorney-General A. T. Seymour announced. The plan is to be returned to Judge Hand in two weeks for final approval.

Suit Filed in 1914.

This suit is one of a series filed in 1914 to destroy the monopoly which certain railroads were said to have acquired over the mining, transporting and marketing of anthracite coal. The petition charged that as early as 1875 the Lehigh Valley Railroad organized the defendant, the Lehigh Valley Coal Co., for the purpose of acquiring all of the anthracite coal bearing lands situated along its lines. These acquisitions continued until 1905, when it acquired Coxe Brothers & Co., Inc., the largest independent producer and shipper of anthracite over its lines, and the Delaware, Susquehanna and Schuylkill Railroad Co., which operates a series of gathering lines serving collieries owned by that company.

In 1913, the year preceding the filing of the suit, the Lehigh Valley Railroad Co. transported over 13,909,545 tons of anthracite, being a greater tonnage than was carried by any other carrier. Of this enormous total, 11,120,000, or almost 80 per cent, was controlled by the Lehigh Valley Railroad through its subsidiary companies. This control was possible, it was charged, through monopolistic practices, such as the granting of rebates, preferences and advantages to the controlled companies, which independent companies did not enjoy.

Law Evasion Alleged.

The Lehigh Valley Coal Sales Co., it was alleged, was found to divest the Lehigh Valley Railroad of the appearance of interest in the coal of Lehigh Valley Coal Co., and thus evade the commodities clause of the Hepburn act. The stock of the sales company was entirely subscribed for by the stockholders of the railroad company and the subscriptions were paid for out of a special dividend declared by the railroad company.

Immediately on its formation the sales company, by which the latter agreed to sell to the former, and the former agreed to buy from the latter all coal mined or produced by the coal company and the sales company, was prohibited from handling any other coal. This contract was attacked as violative of the Sherman law.

The district court dismissed the Government's petition. The case was appealed to the Supreme Court and was argued during the October term, 1916, and re-argued in November, 1917. In October, 1919, the case was submitted without argument, but was again restored to the docket and was argued a third time in the October term, 1920. Thereafter the decree of the District Court was reversed and the case was remanded with instructions to enter a decree completely dissolving the inter-corporate relations between the Lehigh Valley Railroad Co., the Lehigh Valley Coal Co., Coxe Brothers & Co., Inc., and the Delaware, Susquehanna and Schuylkill Railroad Co., and canceling the contract between the sales company and the coal company.

RUHR PROTEST MEETING TO BE HELD HERE TODAY

Dr. Reinhard Strecker to Address Audience on Conditions in Germany.

Resistance of the industrial population of the Ruhr region of Germany to French occupation is being strengthened through outside aid, according to Dr. Reinhard Strecker of Darmstadt, Germany, secretary of Education in the Province of Hessen, who will address a mass meeting at 2 p. m. today at the Eagles' Hall, Lafayette and Jefferson avenues, on conditions in Germany. The meeting is under the auspices of a committee of 100, formed to hold a Ruhr protest meeting.

Contributions are being sent in from many cities in Europe, he said in a statement issued through a member of the local committee, said several cities, among them Copenhagen, have offered to care for a large number of children and women while the occupation continues. The Socialists of Germany, he said, are looking to England and the United States to aid in an amicable settlement.

Dr. Strecker came to this country to study the educational systems of Canada and the United States, he said, arriving with his wife about a week before the French forces entered the Ruhr. He came here from Milwaukee, where he spoke at a Ruhr protest meeting Friday. His home city was occupied by French troops yesterday.

Woman Storekeeper Slugged.

Mrs. Mary Schulze, 60 years old, was slugged and robbed of $30 in her notion store at 4660 Easton avenue at 12:30 p. m. yesterday by an armed man who entered the store and said he wanted to buy two yards of oilcloth. When she turned, the man slugged her on the head with the butt-end of a revolver. She was unconscious for an hour and a half. The store is one block from the Deer Street Police Station.

BOY ON BICYCLE INJURED BY AUTO

Driver and Another Man Flee When Machine Is Wrecked Against Curb.

George Laurent, 14 years old, son of Julius Laurent, of 7114 Minnesota avenue, was knocked from his bicycle and seriously injured at 10 o'clock last night at Nagle avenue and Broadway, by an automobile, northbound on Broadway, which swerved into the curb, after striking the boy, and was wrecked. The driver and another man jumped from the machine and fled.

The boy was taken to the City Hospital, where he was found to be suffering from a fracture of the skull and a deep laceration of the left thigh. Police traced the license on the automobile, a Chandler, and learned it had been issued to an Italian residing on Wash street.

Mrs. M. J. Hopkins Injured in Collision of Machines.

Mrs. Lina Hopkins, 54 years old, wife of Dr. Milton J. Hopkins of 3754 Lindell boulevard, may lose her left eye as the result of the collision at 5 p. m. yesterday of an automobile in which she was riding, driven by her husband, and a machine belonging to Lee I. Niedringhaus of 29 Portland place, driven by a negro chauffeur, at Garrison avenue and Washington boulevard.

Mrs. Hopkins was taken to the Baptist Hospital, where physicians said cuts on her left eyeball from broken windshield glass might cause the loss of the eye. The cause of the accident was not clear. The chauffeur of the Niedringhaus car, Clifford Jones of 3107 Lawton avenue, was arrested.

Vance Bradshaw, 7, of 2005A North Thirteenth street, was struck in front of 2011 North Thirteenth street at 4 p. m. by a car driven by Charles O'Neil of 4510A Clarence avenue, and suffered internal injuries and scalp wounds. O'Neil said the boy had jumped from a truck on which he was riding and ran in front of the car.

Traffic Policeman Joseph Deters, on duty at the west crossing of Twelfth boulevard and Locust street last night, jumped on the running board of a westbound coupe which had failed to make a boulevard stop at the east side of Twelfth, after the driver failed to obey his signal to stop. The driver was a youth, and another young man and woman were with him. Knocking on the glass window by the policeman brought no response. Knocking harder broke the pane, and his right wrist and two fingers were cut. He jumped off and followed the machine in another car to Twentieth street, losing the trail there.

Janitor Found Dead on Street Car.

Forty-five minutes after he had been treated at the clinic of the City Hospital for heart disease, Harry Scott, 68 years old, a janitor in an apartment at Emma and Goodfellow avenues, was found dead on a Bellefontaine street car at Fourteenth and Carroll streets at 5:45 p. m. yesterday.

LARGER VESSEL NECESSARY TO CARE FOR CONGRESSMEN

Rush for Accommodation for Ocean Voyage of Inspection on Pacific Coast and in Alaska.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—The rush for accommodations for the ocean voyage arranged by Secretary of War Weeks to enable members of the Senate and House to inspect army establishments on the Pacific coast and in Alaska has been so great that the transport Grant, a larger vessel, has been substituted for the St. Mihiel. Some members of Congress desire to visit Hawaii and the party will be divided at San Francisco, those bound for Alaska proceeding from that port on a ship of the St. Mihiel, while the Grant will proceed to Honolulu.

It was stated today that many officers and troops were under orders to proceed to the west coast, Alaska and Hawaii, and the number of applications from members of the Senate and House was far in excess of expectations. If all of the applicants were given accommodations on the larger transport, it probably would be necessary to send some officers and their families by rail to San Francisco.

Weeks invited only holdover members of the Senate and House Committees on Military Affairs, Appropriations and Territories to make the trip. Some members of the California delegation in the House are anxious to go home by water if it can be arranged, and the War Secretary must now decide whether to limit the number of members of Congress or send army officers by rail.

ST. LOUISANS ON WAY HOME

C. of C. Party Due Back Tuesday Morning.

The Chamber of Commerce delegation, which has been to Havana, Panama and Costa Rica, is on its way home and is scheduled to arrive at Union Station Tuesday morning.

A cable received by the Chamber yesterday from Paul V. Bupn, general secretary, said a brilliant reception was given for the St. Louisans by Roy T. Davis, a Missourian who is American Minister to Costa Rica, and that President Acosta of Costa Rica also entertained the tourists. All the members of the party have been in good health.

Rodemich's Orchestra to Be Broadcast.

Listeners to the broadcast radio programs of Post-Dispatch station, K S D, will hear Gene Rodemich's dance orchestra every Monday night, beginning tomorrow, as that orchestra began playing for the supper dances of Hotel Statler last night. Station K S D broadcasts the Statler dance music Monday nights, from 10:30 p. m. to 1 a. m. Rodemich's orchestra will play at the hotel every night except Sunday. It has 11 musicians. The players who have been there will continue playing at luncheon and dinner.

SHIPPING BOARD PLANS ANNOUNCED BY LASKER

Government to Continue Operation Without Change Until Transfer Details Are Completed.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—Intention of the Shipping Board to continue the operation of all its lines without change until detailed plans are completed for transfer of the merchant fleet into private hands was announced tonight by Chairman Lasker.

"Shippers and passengers have the Government assurance," he said, "that they need not hesitate to book on Government ships; the service will be as in the past—adequate, prompt and regular."

In a statement Lasker said he had hoped to be able to announce the board's plan in a general way, leaving details for future publication, but that it had been decided that an announcement lacking fullest details might lead to misunderstandings.

Four Vessels to Be Put in Shape.

Announcement was made that the board intended to recondition four ships—the Mount Vernon, Agamenon, America and President Buchanan—all of which, together with the Leviathan, now being reconditioned at Newport News, Va., it was stated, would be assigned to the United States Lines.

The Shipping Board, under the merchant marine act of 1920, according to Lasker's statement, hopes to bring about the passage of the lines and routes operated by the Government into private hands, "as mandated by law, with guaranteed obligation that such lines will be maintained for a term of years, thus insuring to ports and shippers continuous service."

The Agamennon and the Mount Vernon, both formerly German liners, will be converted into oil burners with the expectation that they will be ready for service in 1924. Each will have accommodations for approximately 900 first and second class and 500 third class passengers. They are about 700 feet long with a gross tonnage of about 20,000 tons and have a speed of 23 knots.

Plans for refitting the President Buchanan, formerly the President Grant, call for additional boilers, installation of a fuel-oil system and a general overhauling of mechanical equipment. The ship will have accommodations for 700 cabin and 1400 third-class passengers. Bids for the reconditioning of the President Buchanan will be opened about April 1, while those for the refitting of the America will be opened March 9. The America has been in the service of the United States lines since their inception.

NEW BROWNS AND CARDINALS TESTED IN TRAINING GAMES

Austin Selects Weak Hurlers, Team Suffers Crushing Defeat, 19-1

Pepper Jim Himself Goes to the Mound in Desperation, Only to be Driven to the Bench After Three Straight Hits.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

MOBILE, Ala., March 3.—Jimmy Austin's team had a terrible time this afternoon at Monroe Park. The team selected by the veteran was defeated by the "Kid" nine, score 19 to 1, quite a reversal of form of the opening contest played Friday afternoon.

Austin chose the wrong pitchers. Perry Payne, who pitched the first three innings, and Charley Root, who twirled the eighth and ninth innings, wanted to get up a sweat more than to win a game. And they did just that, and nothing else.

Some of the players not in the game kidded Austin, calling for the fire department to put out the side. Austin cared but little, about the kidding by Carl Weilman, Lefty Leifield, Bob Coleman and members of the winning team. Despite the fact that his men were buried under an avalanche of hits and runs deeper than Tutankhamen's tomb, Jimmy was here, there and all over the playing field, showing more pepper than some of the very youngest kids on the squad.

In the eighth inning, when Charley Root was getting hammered all around the lot, Austin decided, after three long hits had been made, to go in and do the pitching. Root went to third and Austin to the mound. Jimmy's arm is in shape and he felt sure that by hurling a fast ball he would stop the bombardment.

Batters Like Austin's Offerings.

So Jimmy began pitching over the hot-shot and the batters liked the speed immensely. Pat Collins, the first man to face Austin, hit a clean and ringing single. Elam Vangilder the big pitcher who last year hit .334 in the American League, next swung and tripled to the very deepest corner of center field. Vangilder pulled up at third. John Schulte, the St. Louis catcher, who last year was a slugging star for the Mobile champions, next drove a line single to center field. After the hit Austin followed the ball on the run to center and told Johnny Tobin to take his place on the mound and stop the bombardment.

Lou Kraft started on the mound for the youngsters and he was touched for a pair of singles in the first inning. The hits, coupled with an error by Vangilder in left, resulted in the lone score of the game for Austin's team.

Henry Meine, a former Brownie, who this year belongs to the San Antonio club, pitched the next three innings and held the opposition to three scattered hits.

Dave Danforth next took a turn on the hill and the lefthander had little trouble retiring the opposing batsmen, only three hits being made off his delivery.

Thirteen Runs Off Payne.

Perry Payne, a tall righthander, who has a very good motion, opened on the mound against the kids and he was pounded hard in each of the three innings he worked. The outfit headed by young Bennett scored 13 runs in three innings against Payne.

Ray Donovan next took up the pitching burden and he managed to get by without being scored against. Lefty Leifield pitching the ninth and final round of the game. Pruett started the ninth with a single to right against the veteran lefthander, but after that Leifield had no trouble.

Elmer Vangilder also came through with five hits, one a three bagger and the others all clean singles. Ernie Vache managed to get a one single to center field in the eighth inning.

Manager Fohl announced today that he wanted the players to report at the park at 12 o'clock tomorrow for practice. The squad will work out for one hour and then dress and auto out to the golf course to witness Hagen play on the links.

ELMER MILLER SIGNS WITH OUTLAW TEAM

By the Associated Press.

Seven Brownies Will Depart for Mobile Training Camp Monday

SEVEN Brownie players, including some of the team's most essential players, will depart from St. Louis tomorrow afternoon for the training camp at Mobile, Ala.

George Sisler, Urban Shocker, Kenneth Williams, Marty McManus, Walter Gerber, Bill Jacobson and Gene Robertson will be in the party, which will probably receive a royal welcome at Mobile Tuesday morning. Sisler and Williams especially will prove real attractions to the camp followers and the younger players on the squad.

Jacobson is the only man of the bunch of regulars who will be confronted with real competition from the new men. There are five young outfielders trying to land a job with the Browns.

Paddock Barred By College Body

Sprinter and Team-Mates Being Investigated as to Eligibility.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 3.—The University of Southern California's track athletes, including Charles Paddock, spectacular sprint champion, will not compete this year in the outdoor intercollegiate track and field championships.

This became known tonight when it was announced the executive committee of the Intercollegiate A. A. A. had tabled for a year the membership application of the Pacific Coast college.

The action was taken, officials said, because of information concerning scholastic and eligibility requirements of the California University; but it was understood that they felt these requirements did not measure up to Eastern intercollegiate standards. The Californians, it was said, were asked to submit further information on both subjects.

Technically the application of the Westerners was tabled only until the next meeting of the Executive Committee; but as this does not take place until March, 1924, the matter cannot be considered before another year.

Recently the University of Southern California announced it planned to invade the East for the Intercollegiate meet with a team which included several prominent stars, in addition to Paddock.

The 1923 outdoor title meet was awarded to the University of Pennsylvania and will be held at Franklin Field, May 25 and 26.

LEVER SETS NEW MARK FOR 70-YARD DASH AT INTERCOLLEGIATE MEET

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 3.—Harold B. Lever, University of Pennsylvania flyer, tonight set a new world's indoor record of 7 1-10s for the 70-yard dash in the intercollegiate track and field meet at the Twenty-second Regiment Armory. Lever vanquished J. A. Leconey of Lafayette, intercollegiate champion, in lowering the former record of 7 1-5s., held jointly by half a dozen sprinters.

HY MYERS SIGNS A CARDINAL CONTRACT

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., March 3.—Outfielder Harry (Hy) Myers, traded by the Brooklyn National League club, for First Baseman Jacques Fournier of St. Louis, today signed a contract with the Cardinals.

Myers, who was a holdout with the Dodgers because of salary differences, said the Rickey document is "Satisfactory." He will leave his farm at Kensington, near here, Monday for Bradentown, Fla., the St. Louis training camp.

Yale Loses at Water Polo.

By the Associated Press.

PRINCETON, N. J., March 3.—Princeton and Yale aquatic stars divided honors today in two intercollegiate swimming league contests. The Eli's won the swimming contest, 34 to 28, but the Tigers triumphed in a water polo match, 30 to 21.

Eight Records Broken as 600 Athletes Compete in Illini Meet

Norton of Kansas U. Is All-Around Champion — American 75-Yard Record Equaled—Hubbard Broad Jumps 23 Feet ¾-Inch for Carnival Record.

URBANA, Ill., March 3.—Eight carnival records were shattered, two were tied and one was equalled in the sixth annual University of Illinois relay carnival which attracted a record-breaking entry of nearly 600 athletes representing 47 universities and colleges here today. The American record for the 75-yard dash also was tied. Emerson Norton, the University of Kansas star, captured the honors in the all-round championship competition.

Record-breaking performances resulted in nearly half of the events, due to the spirited competition, the fastest in the history of the carnival. The first mark to go was the two-mile college relay which was captured by Carleton College in 8:25, beating the former record of 8:33 2-5, established by Cornell College in 1921. Wilson of Iowa took the next shot at the record smashing by lowering his own record, in the 300-yard dash, covering the distance in :31 4-5 and beating the record of :32 1-5 hung up last year.

Van Orden of Michigan, rated as the best shot putter in the Western Conference, bettered the carnival record in this event by two feet and one inch with a heave of 43 feet 1¼ inches. The former record was made by Cross of Michigan in 1917. Central College of Fayette, Mo., cracked the college medley mark of 9:05 3-5 by winning the event in 8:44 3-5. Reinke of Michigan captured the 1000-yard run in the record-breaking time of 2:19 4-5, beating the best previous record, made by Winter of Minnesota last year.

Iowa Breaks Record.

The University of Iowa relay team lowered its own record, 3:27 2-5, in the one-mile university relay, by stepping the distance in 3:26. Wabash cut into the record breaking by taking the one-mile college relay in 3:34 1-5, beating its own record 3:36 4-5, established five years ago.

De Hart Hubbard, negro star from the University of Michigan, wound up the record breaking with a leap of 23 feet ¾ inches in the running broad jump. The carnival record of 22 feet, 8¼ inches was made by Earl Gilfillan of Notre Dame in 1918.

Robert Ayres, the University of Illinois flyer, tied the American and Illinois carnival record for the 75-yard dash, when he broke the tape ahead of seven other starters in :07 3-5. Johnson of Illinois equaled the mark for the 75-yard high hurdles, capturing the event in :09 3-5.

Illinois Beats Michigan.

The relays were fairly well divided, no team winning two races. Carleton, however, in addition to winning the two-mile college event, finished second in the college medley. Perhaps the biggest surprise was the victory of Illinois in the four-mile university relay, as Michigan was regarded as the favorite. None of the runners of Illinois were members of the famous quartet which established a world's record in the Drake relays last year.

In the 10 special events, Michigan carried off the major honors by winning three first places. Hubbard took the broad jump, Brooker the pole vault, Van Orden the shot put, while Reinke captured the 1000-yard run.

Falk Refuses to Report.

By the Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Tex., March 3.—Bib Falk, Chicago American League outfielder, announced here today he would not report to the White Sox training camp at Seguin, Tex., unless he were granted the increase in salary he had asked. If said he had received a contract from the Chicago club whereby he was granted a small increase but that the figure was insufficient.

Ruth Recovering but Will Be Unable to Go South With Teammates

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 3.

THAT Babe Ruth cannot leave with his teammates when they depart for New Orleans, Monday, to join the other members of Miller Huggins' fighting crew, was the definite announcement of his physician.

"Not before Wednesday," was the order of the Bambino's medical boss.

Ruth, following an attack of flu, is now sitting up in his hotel room entirely free from fever, but rather weak.

Ruth made it known today that he is not the least disconcerted, in so far as his outlook for the coming season is concerned, as a result of his spell of sickness.

Last Tuesday Ruth, who had been suffering from a cold, and Everett Scott played golf on a waterlogged course and, as a result, Ruth was taken sick Thursday. Thursday night his temperature reached 104.

"Plenty of time between now and the season's opening to be ready to play ball and give the best that's in me," Ruth told newspaper men. "You can tell the fans I expect to make good from the kick-off."

IOWA BEAT MICHIGAN; VICTORY 11TH STRAIGHT FOR HAWKEYE QUINTET

By the Associated Press.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., March 3.—A field goal by Janse from the center of the floor in the last moments of play gave the University of Iowa a 20 to 18 victory over the University of Michigan basketball team here, tonight.

Superb foul shooting by Funk of Iowa, who looped 10 out of 14 attempts, paved the way for Iowa's eleventh consecutive victory in the Western Conference race, and virtually clinched the conference title for them. Capt. Ely for Michigan, had eight free throws at the hoop, but counted only two of them.

The floor play of Paper and Haggerty featured for the Wolverines. Burgitt, Janse and Funk were the Iowa stars.

The score at the end of the half was 10—9 in favor of Michigan.

McDermott Hits Three Safeties; Holm Shines In Field for Rickeymen

Batting of Converted Catcher and Defense of Lavan's Rival, Attract Favorable Comment in Bradentown Training Battle.

By Herman Wecke,
Of The Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

BRADENTOWN, Fla., March 3.—The outstanding features of today's Cardinal practice game between the West and the East teams, in which the Western team again triumphed 5 to 3, was the batting of Joe McDermott and the fielding of Roscoe Holm. Somehow or other this Holm person refuses to remain out of the limelight.

In addition to fielding his position sensationally he crashed out two hits. McDermott pounded out three hits, two of them for extra bases, and drove in two runs.

This McDermott came to the Cardinals as a catcher and outfielder, but it is Rickey's idea to make him over into a first-sacker. This is, without a doubt, due to the fact that Jim Bottomley, who is scheduled to play the position, may not come up to expectations, in spite of the fact that the Cardinal manager states that Bottomley is a great player. McDermott still forgets to touch the bag, at times, in taking throws, but he is improving daily. Also he has not yet learned to shift, but this will come with practice.

But as hitter there seems no doubt. In the first inning he scored Mason with a single off Bailey, a left-handed pitcher. McDermott swats from the left side from the plate. Against Lester Sell, who was with the Cardinals last fall, he rapped out a double and a triple, both of them hard drives. At the first sack he handled 14 chances cleanly.

Oh, Boy! He's Good, but It's Early.

And as for Holm: The assertion of the veterans in camp Cardinal that he is a "ball hawk" is being borne out daily. Today he had four putouts and six assists. Against McCurdy in the eighth he made a glove-hand pickup and an underhand throw of a hard grounder that was a beauty. He also showed that he knew something about putting the sphere on runners sliding into the pivot stand. The swats he made again went out on a line.

Of the four pitchers who worked today, but two belong to the Cardinals. They are Learn and Sell. Learn, who pitched semipro ball last season, labored four innings and yielded but three hits, and one run. He is a big right-hander, standing six feet and but 22 years old.

Although hit safely eight times in five frames, Sell was counted upon but once, and that was due to an error by Assistant Manager Burt Shotton, who filled in at first, when Guy Moore was spiked. Sell picked two men off the sacks, and this helped considerably. The other two flingers who labored were Bailey and Carroll Grimm, who was recommended by Rogers Hornsby. Grimm looked good in the five sessions he labored, giving six hits and two runs.

Only Two Boners Pulled.

There were two "bone" plays in the contest. One was pulled by Eddie Dyer in the very first inning. He tried to steal third with a man on the base, following a close play at the far corner. Dyer figured the runner had been called out. Then, in the ninth, McDermott started off second, although he had been ruled safe by the umpire. Naturally he was an easy victim. Otherwise, it was a mighty good game for so early in the season.

A pass, an infield hit by Dyer and McDermott's hit gave the West one in the first. While Dyer's safety with the sacks loaded, gave two in the second. Three singles produced another in the fourth, while two hits, with Shotton's error, thrown in, counted the final one.

For the East, By McCurdy and Hafey and Edgar's long fly tallied one in the first. Moore's single and a titanic triple by Sell gave one in the seventh and a pass and hits by Sell and Shotton in the ninth.

President Sam Breadon arrived this morning and was out both morning and afternoon.

Tomorrow will be a day of rest.

Kabakoff to Meet Reddy at B. M. G. Reopening Bouts

Kaiser and Midget Smith Will Be Headliners of Angelica Club Card.

BOXING GAME COMES BACK

City Comission Already Has Received Applications From Three Clubs.

Professional boxing, which has been hibernating through a long period of depression locally, proposes to come back with two matches in the next three weeks under the new city boxing commission rule.

The Business Men's Athletic Association has applied for permission to stage a 10-round bout at the Armory, March 14, between Harry Kabakoff, the St. Louisan, and "Battling" Reddy of New York, who recently defeated Harry in a 12-round engagement in the East. The Angelica Physical Culture Club, according to Matchmaker Jack O'Connor, has received permission to stage a 10-round bout between "Midget" Smith of New York and "Peewee" Kaiser, the St. Louis featherweight, at the Coliseum on March 22.

St. Louisans to Be Featured.

Both bouts will feature the leading boxers that this city has developed in recent years. Kabakoff and Kaiser have taken tours through the East during the period boxing was knocked out here. Kaiser gained a draw with "Battling" Leonard and was knocked out by Johnny Curtin after he had weakened himself in an effort to make weight.

Kabakoff met Reddy in New York and won by a knockout from Young Leonard in a bout at Havana.

Promoters are not taking advantage of the new commission ruling which permits bouts to go 15 rounds. Harry Cook and Jack O'Connor said yesterday that 10 or 12 round bouts furnished a sufficient test for boxers and that they did not believe the public was interested in longer matches except in cases where some definite title was involved.

Three professional boxing clubs have applied for permits.

Meanwhile the amateurs, who have been active all during the time that professional boxing was under the ban, will give another show at the Southern A. C. March 8. The card has not been completed, but Ted Pearline has been matched to meet Walter Roland in one match while Eddie Rieth and Elmer Hemingway will be opponents in another.

Missouri Trims Pikers 42 to 26

Tigers Take Lead After Two Minutes and Romp the Rest of the Way.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., March 3.—Washington was smothered under the Missouri basketball steam roller here tonight, 42 to 26. Snatching the lead from the Pikers after two minutes of play, the Browning-Faurot-Wheat offensive play piled up a lead, while Bunker and Vanice held a line that forced the Pikers to long shots, which they were unable to count with regularity.

Minner was the star of the Washington attack. He scored five field goals and made good six of his 10 free throws. Thumser also played a good game for Washington. Capt Bun Browning, with 24 points, 7 field goals and 10 free throws, was easily the high point man of the game.

At the end of the first half Missouri held a lead of 24 to 12.

Tonight's game was the last of the season for Missouri, and the last of the collegiate career for Capt. Bun Browning and Herbert Bunker.

Central Defeats Cleveland, 29-27, In Final Minute

Champions Close High School League Season by Winning Eighth Straight Victory.

A field goal from midcourt by Cristal in the last minute of play gave the champion Central High School five a 29-to-27 victory over the Cleveland High five at the Cleveland High School auditorium last night and enabled Coach Callan's team to close the league season with eight straight victories. This is the second time in the league history that this has been accomplished. Soldan won eight games and lost none in winning the 1920 championship.

In the afternoon game McKinley defeated Soldan, 35 to 34.

Central, unbeaten for the season, was faced with defeat a few minutes before the close of its game with Cleveland, when the score stood 27 to 23 in favor of the South Siders. But three field goals came in rapid succession and turned the tide of the game.

Capt. Thomas, a guard, shot one in from the side of the court and then Hebberger followed with a short shot that tied the score. With only a few seconds remaining to play, Cristal, standing in midcourt, saw every teammate covered and took a chance on a long shot. It dropped into the basket with the points that meant the game.

A Sensational Game.

The comparatively small crowd which attended the afternoon game between McKinley and Soldan was rewarded with one of the best played games of the Interscholastic League season. The fact that Soldan had not won a game, added to the fact that the championship had been tucked away safely a week previous by Central, served to dull the enthusiasm of the crowd, but the players were not in the least effected.

An intense battle was waged as Soldan and McKinley fought for the lead. There was an outstanding individual in each lineup, Syberg for McKinley and Wackher for Soldan. The score at the end of the first half was 18 to 13 in Soldan's favor and Syberg had scored all of the 13 points for the South Enders.

Even so, Syberg missed an opportunity to keep his team in the running in the last minute of play when he "blew" a free throw with the score 33 to 32 in Soldan's favor.

Wackher's sensational shooting from all angles and a variety of distances had something of the semblance of luck, but he caked the ball so consistently that it would be unfair to attempt to disparage his effort. Without him Soldan would have been hopelessly outclassed. With him Soldan looked like a sound, well drilled team and the victory was well merited.

Koloff Easily Breaks Head Holds In Practice for Bout With Lewis

Powerful Bulgarian Tries Out New Plan to Block Champion's Chief Weapon, With Complete Success—Merely Toys With 200-Pound Wrestling Mate, Sanosian.

It may be true that Dan Koloff, the husky Bulgarian who is scheduled to meet Champion Ed "Strangler" Lewis in a wrestling match at the Coliseum next Wednesday night, has no fear of the champion's headlock. Nevertheless, Daniel is spending considerable time each afternoon at the National Athletic Association in prepping his neck and "bean" for the approaching ordeal against the dread grip.

Koloff has been working with Kozak Sanosian, an Armenian-Turk of 200 pounds, and Carl Schultz, the big Gernian from Chicago. Yesterday Schultz was absent and Sanosian had to assume the whole burden of giving Koloff action for the hour's workout.

Fortunately for the Armenian, Koloff displayed rough tactics only occasionally, preferring to be on the receiving end instead. Koloff's pet idea yesterday was to have Kozak apply headlocks a la "Strangler" Lewis, and then break loose. The big Bulgarian is practicing on what he figures is a new and sure way to break any headlock, should Lewis get a firm hold on his neck or skull. Instead of going to the floor leisurely, in order to try and eliminate possible injury to the neck, the Bulgarian gives himself a half twist and throws himself to the floor.

Against Sanosian the scheme worked well. The Armenian was jerked from his footing and several times not only lost his grip, but fell to the mat with more force than did Koloff.

May Not Work Against Lewis.

Lewis, the title holder, has more weight and undoubtedly more strength than Sanosian, but from the apparent ease with which Koloff broke Sanosian's locks it would seem as if he could face much more power and poundage and still accomplish his purpose.

The usual way of squirming out of the headlock, while being pinned on the floor, was also easy for Koloff against Sanosian. Apparently it was simply impossible for Kozak to retain a firm grip on Dan's powerful neck. The Bulgarian twisted away from the Armenian's grips with apparent ease.

Koloff expects Schultz to return to action today while he probably will also get the services of Boris Dimitroff, another Bulgarian, for training purposes.

Jimmy Londos, Greek champion, who meets Ivan Linow, in one of the other bouts is due to arrive from Chicago today and start training.

Municipal Soccer Semifinal Today

Ben Millers, Henses, St. Matthews and Baileys Clash at Fairground.

The Ben Millers, Henses, St. Matthews and Bailey Councils will engage in the semifinal round of the Municipal Soccer League championship competition at Fairground Park this afternoon. A double-header will be played on Grounds 2 which is located near Kossuth and Prairie avenues. The field has been enclosed by the Park Department and an admission fee of 25 cents will be charged.

The Millers won their first round game last Sunday from the St. Malachys, 1 to 0. The St. Matthews defeated the Schumachers and the Baileys defeated the De Pauls. The Henses drew a first round bye.

The Feature Contest.

The first game, between the Millers and the Henses will be started at 1:30 p. m. The second match will be started at 3 p. m. Should extra play be necessary in the first game to break a tie, the game will be transferred to Grounds 4 and resumed in order that the St. Matthews and Baileys can start their game at the appointed time.

Oliver Miller, one of the oldest referees in point of service in the Municipal Soccer League, will handle the Miller-Hense game which is expected to prove the feature contest of the double-header. The Millers are largely composed of players who have had some professional league experience and, while their goal scoring has not been especially remarkable, they maintain a tight defense and their passing game is good.

Phil Kavanaugh will referee the St. Matthews-Bailey game.

More Than 30,000 Players Use Public Park Courts in One Year.

By Davison Obear.

For the year ending April 1, 1922, the City of St. Louis spent only $14,082.04 for tennis in seven parks, according to the annual report of the Park Department. This was for the benefit of 30,978 players who were given permits to play. On this basis the city spent 45 cents for each player during the year.

As a comparison the Park Department report shows that the sum of $14,176.70 was spent for the maintenance of automobiles during the year. A total of $18,125.07 was used for the upkeep of the golf links in Forest Park.

The sum of $14,082.04 was expended in seven parks as follows:

Carondelet Park—
Labor	$ 1,606.41
Material	32.00
Fairground Park—
Labor	1,821.97
Forest Park—
Labor	6,266.00
Material	39.15
Manchester Park—
Labor	479.75
O'Fallon Park—
Labor	1,357.75
St. Louis Place—
Labor	1,107.27
Sherman Park	1,457.99
Total	$14,082.04

In the above figures it is interesting to note that the total amount of money spent for materials was $55.15 for the entire season. The treasurer of the Forest Park Tenis Club alone spent nearly that sum for the betterment of conditions in that park. The Park Department has been handicapped by lack of city funds, but the money available was no doubt distributed in the best possible manner. During the year ending April 1, 1922, the cost per game was approximately 6 cents.

On March 17 the Executive Committee of the United States Lawn Tennis Association may award the first annual national municipal tennis championship to St. Louis. If the tournament comes here the playing conditions in Forest Park must be improved, as that will likely be the place where it will be held.

Forest Park has 22 courts and the Lindell pavilion provides lockers and showers for the players. Recently some new lockers have been added. At the present time there is just one central drinking fountain for the hundreds of tennis players using the courts. Prior to the city championship event last September, new wire backstops were put up on the tournament courts. The playing surface of the two grandstand courts is in very good condition.

There is great need for locker buildings in the other large parks. At Sherman Park there is a building which provides a dressing room for baseball and soccer players. It is possible that another dressing room for tennis players may be provided in this building. The courts in Fairground Park are very [illegible] throughout the season. There are no facilities for lockers for tennis players at this park. Hundreds of the younger players use the Fairground courts and more courts are needed in that park.

Nearly 30,000 players are using the municipal courts in seven parks under the direct supervision of the City Park Department. Tennis courts in Reservoir and Tower Grove parks are also used by hundreds of players. Since 1920 the number of municipal players has increased 33 per cent.

J. AND P. COATS DEFEAT ABBOTT WORSTED TEAM IN EASTERN SEMI-FINAL

PAWTUCKET, R. I., March 3.—Abbott Worsted soccer team of Fort Village, Mass., the last representative of the Bay State in the National Cup series, was ousted from the competition here today by J. and P. Coats of this city, 1 to 0.

A crowd of 5000 fans was on hand. The condition of the playing arena was wretched, with ice and mud liberally supplied.

After 27 minutes of playing, Fleming got away and passed to Gilmore, who evaded two of the Abbott players and sent the ball across. Moresley missed it completely, but Gallagher sent the leather whizzing to the net, giving Davison no chance to save.

Abbott forced the play. Here the referee called offside on Parker when he had th tying goal at his boot. What the offense was, was not apparent.

The second half provided another series o fscrambles in the mud. No fan would dare designate it as a soccer game. The last 15 minutes found the Abbotts presented with chances galore, but they failed to accept the opportunities. Corrigan and Dunlap and Parker all had good chances; Nail dallied with the ball long enough to lose it.

Sarazen Tells of His 72-Hole Special Match With Hagen

"Keep Plugging, No Matter How Far You Are Behind," Is Advice From Golf Champion — Approach Putting British Titleholder's Long Suit.

By Gene Sarazen,
World's Champion Golfer.
(Copyright, 1923.)

Peculiarly the season of 1922 closed quite as sensationally and as dramatically for me as it had started. You will recall, perhaps, that I won the Southern open championship at New Orleans in the early spring. That victory gave me a world of confidence as well as a neat little purse of money. My last competition of that wonderful year—certainly I shall never forget it—was my victory over Walter Hagen in a special 72-hole match.

And then came my operation for appendicitis.

I had been axious to play Hagen because he was practically the only headliner in this country I hadn't met. Hagen didn't compete in the professional tournament. Many said I'd never have won that title had Walter been there, which made me more than axious to play against him as champion of Great Britain, the man who beat Abe Mitchell, consided the king of match-play golfers abroad.

The first 36 holes of our match were played on the Oakmont Country club links, where I had won the professional championship.

I consider this course one of the finest in the country. You can score well enough at Oakmont if you are straight—but if you roam off the line you pick up extra strokes quicker than you can count.

Those inconvenient traps are mighty difficult to get out of! They are deep and properly, I think, heavily laden with loose sand.

I thought I would have an advantage over Walter at Oakmont. But he was in a putting mood that day—and whenever Hagen has the touch on the greens he is virtually unbeatable. He is, I think, the finest putter in the game. At times his putting is simply uncanny. I wish I knew how he did it!

How Hagen Sights Putt Line.

I can explain his style if you would like, but I can't quite account for the results—for Hutchison, McLeod, Pat O'Hara and others are all good putters—yet none of these is as brilliant as Hagen. He uses a steel putter. He stands with all of the weight on the left foot as do most of us. He holds the club quite straight, but not too rigid and he always hits through with a fine, firm, delicate touch.

You seldom see Hagen short nor do you see him go by the hole very much. I am speaking of his approach putting now, which is his long suit. He gets more of these down than the average player, yet he is deadly on short putts also.

One reason Hagen does putt so well is that he always looks at the line to the hole very carefully and very thoroughly. Many think this is "grand stand stuff." It isn't at all. When Hagen sights the line he does it methodically and with a keen eye. What is more he never hurries. His stroke is always, even, firm and rythmical. Putt in that fashion and you can't very well go wrong.

As I was saying, Hagen was putting well although he was inclined to be erratic through the fairway. But that is when he is most dangerous; he plays his recoveries in such determined manner that it is no exaggeration to say he is apt to be closer to the pin playing out of a trap than when he has an open shot to the hole!

At one time during the match I was 5 down. Not a bright outlook I assure you, with Hagen traveling

However, I stuck, hung on with everything I had! I knew if I ever let up I was doomed. You can lose heart playing in championship or against champions. Moreover, you can never tell what is to happen in golf. So always keep plugging!

The struggle at Oakmont ended 2 up in favor of Hagen. Considering how he had been putting, I thought I was rather lucky in not being more than two holes behind. I knew he wasn't going to putt any better than he HAD been doing and I was in hopes my own work on the greens would improve the next day.

Bothered in Final Round.

The second part of the match was played on the Long course of the Westchester-Biltmore Club at Rye, N. Y. I started well and by the time the sixth hole was reached I was on even terms. At the turn I had taken the lead. Incidentally I was putting better and that helped my confidence considerably. The morning round ended with my having the advantage by one hole.

At noon I suffered some severe pains in my stomach, but paid little heed to the trouble, thinking I was having an attack of cramps. When the afternoon fun began I had forgotten about the trouble.

Hagen certainly stuck, but after a terrific fight I had managed to take the lead and I had no thought of losing the match at this late hour. So I proceeded to concentrate on the task in hand—I paid no heed to the gallery or to the score of the match. I simply played the shots the best I knew how, thinking only of getting the ball into the cup. So many fellows lose out by playing their opponents instead of playing the shots.

You all know the result—I won by 3 and 2. Then while receiving the congratulations of my admirers in my room after the game my stomach trouble suddenly returned. Finally it became so severe I had to call a doctor. "Get ready to go to the hospital young man. You've got appendicitis."

So ended the 1922 season of golf for me.

Scullins Meet Vespers Today

Ben Millers and Hoovers Engage in Second Game at High School Field.

There is little to choose between the two games to be played between the St. Louis Soccer League teams at High School Field this afternoon. The Scullins-Vespers contest, the opening game of the double-header, will probably be the faster of the two, but the more vigorous and exciting situations are likely to develop in the Ben Miller-Hoover game.

The national champion Scullins will be given an opportunity to trot forth their reserves this afternoon. Three of the regulars will not be fit for duty—Jimmy Nolan, Charlie Bechtold and George Bentley. Schurwan, Murphy, Oberle, Mitchell and possibly Dell will be used in place of the regulars.

The Vespers have proven Tartars for the champions this season. Aside from the replay of the cup tie, the Scullins have never been able to demonstrate a real superiority, all of which is very encouraging for the future of St. Louis soccer for the Vespers are a team of youngsters.

The Ben Millers, who are going through a stage of transition, will again experiment with new men. It is probable that Buddy Brengle will be at one of the inside positions on the forward line and Dolan will probably again appear at outside left.

Manager Foley of the Hoovers is going to use Jim McCarthy, formerly of the Vespers, at center forward. Foley's team presents the strongest defense of any team in the league, not excepting the Scullins and if a good scoring combination can be developed the Hoovers will make it warm for the Millers or any other team.

The first game will be started at 2:15 p. m.

Sun Favors Mackmen.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 3.—Ideal weather conditions are greeting the Philadelphia Athletics in their training here. Sunshine has been the order of the entire week and Manager Connie Mack states that he will continue to take advantage of the favorable weather by putting his men through a strenuous workout tomorrow afternoon if the sunshine continues.

Practically all of the Athletic squad, including the veterans, are in camp working hard.

Rigney to Report.

GREENVILLE, Tex., March 3.—Topper Rigney, shortstop, left Greenville today for Augusta, Ga., to join the spring camp of the Detroit Tigers. It was rumored here until he started to join the team that he was a holdout.

Bennett a Star, But Swings From The Wrong Side

Lefthand Hitter Has Poor Chance to Displace Regular Brown Outfielders.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

MOBILE, Ala., March 3.—Although the Browns have been in training less than a week it seems safe to say that there is one man in the squad of newcomers who is bound to stick with the club throughout the season. That player is none other than H. E. Bennett, last year a member of the Tulsa champions of the Western League.

Every scout in both major leagues who took a peep at Bennett was anxious to land him, but because of a working agreement with the Tulsa club, the Browns landed this classy outfielder. Bennett is a great hitter. Last season he clouted the ball to the tune of .370 and proved himself a real slugger by collecting 24 homers, 11 triples and 56 doubles.

Regulars Too Good.

There is hardly a chance for the newcomer to break into the Browns' outfield for two very good reasons: The first and foremost is that the Browns own three high-class outfielders; in fact, very nearly as classy an outfield as there is in the American League. All three regulars, Tobin, Williams and Jacobson, are real hitters and finished fly chasers. The second reason is that Bennett is unfortunate in that he bats left-handed. If he were a right-hander possibly there would be some chance that he might break into the game at some stage of the season, but with two left-handed hitters like Tobin and Williams there seems hardly a chance that Manager Fohl would place another southpaw hitter in the lineup.

Cedric Durst, a clever young ballplayer who was with the Browns all last season, but who had only a few chances to break into the game, also is a left-handed hitter. It is a question now as to whether Fohl wants to fill up on southpaw hitters for the role of utility players.

Ernie Vache is another player who has made a most favorable impression. He is a powerful fellow who hits from the right side of the plate. Up to the present time he has been driving the ball over the left field fence with great regularity, and every one is of the opinion that he has the makings of a great ball player. Whether he will continue his slugging after the pitchers of the squad have warmed up to their work is a question that cannot be answered at the present time.

Thurston Leads Rookies.

The most promising pitcher among the recruits is Hollis Thurston, secured from Salt Lake. No one has to take a second look at this boy to know that he is a high-class twirler. He goes about his work in a business-like manner and gives one the impression that he is a veteran at the game.

Manager Fohl also has Jim Elliott, the big lefthander from Terre Haute, to look over and Charley Root, a stocky righthander from Terre Haute. Both these boys come to the Browns with exceptionally good records. To date they have not started pitching in a manner that would justify any criticism as to their ability.

Frank Henry, a southpaw, secured from the Mobile club, has not reported at camp. He pitched good ball for Mobile last year, but whether he can make good in the American League is another question.

Then there is "Dauntless Dave" Danforth, the left hander who was sent to Tulsa last season by the Browns. He finished out the season with Tulsa in great style and proved that it was worth while to bring him black for another trial.

Western A. A. U. Title Boxing Bouts Will Be Held Here March 29-31

It was announced last night that the Western District Amateur Athletic Union would hold the district amateur championship boxing matches here March 29, 30 and 31. No arena has as yet been chosen.

Boxers from St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha and Little Rock are eligible. In a recent dual meet here Kansas City amateurs won decisively from a St. Louis team, although this city's representatives were not the best that could have been named.

A team will be chosen from the winners of this year's tourney to be sent to New York for the national championship competition.

St. Louis Firemen Defeat Chicagoans

Stratton and Cunningham Take 4 Out of 5 Games From Beggey and Miller.

John Stratton of No. 19 truck company, and Mike Cunningham of No. 18 engine company, of the St. Louis Fire Department, won four out of five handball games from the champions of the Chicago Fire Department last night at the National Athletic Club, Sixth and Pine streets, and took possession of the trophy donated by Dr. R. B. H. Gradwohl.

James Beggey and Fred Miller, the Chicago men, won their only game in the 20 played when they took the second contest last night by the close score of 21 to 20. The St. Louis players won 10 straight games in Chicago last week and wone nine out of 10 played here. Cunningham is the third man on the St. Louis team. HOUSE ENGROSSES $250,000 SALARY REDUCTION BILL

Steamroller Tactics Used by Democrats in Five-Hour Session to Advance Measure.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 3.—The Bales-Whitecotton salary reduction bill, estimated to lop $250,000 a year off the budgets of the various State departments, cutting the Public Service Commission from five to two members and eliminating four inspection departments by consolidations, was engrossed by the House at 7 o'clock tonight after a session which had lasted continuously from 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Steamroller action of the part of Democrats who control the House was required to obtain speedy engrossment of the measure, as from the outset first one Republican then another had prolonged the procedure by offering numerous amendments, by extensive interrogations and by repeated speeches which manifestly were having no effect. Several times Republicans tried to adjourn the session before action had been taken, but to no avail, Democratic floor leader Maxey insisting that the House remain in session until the bill had been acted upon.

Not a Caucus Measure.

Although the bill is not a Democratic caucus measure, it is evident that with a few exceptions, the House Democrats have determined to force it through. Representative Bales of Shannon, one of the authors, declared that he expected it to get a constitutional majority, although this was scouted by Republicans opposing it, who pointed out that almost the solid Republican membership of the House, plus the Democrats from St. Louis, probably will fight its passage.

Nearly all of the St. Louis delegation was absent today when the bill was engrossed.

This bill seeks to consolidate with the State Pure Food and Drug Department the Hotel Inspection and Beverage Departments and with the Bureau of Labor Statistics the Industrial Inspection and Mines and Mining Departments. These consolidations were part of the merger of departments sought in bills passed by the last Legislature, but referred and beaten at the polls by the Democratic State organization.

Salary Provisions.

By this measure also chief clerks of all State departments are placed upon a uniform salary basis of $2400 a year, a decrease of $400, stenographers in all departments, with a few exceptions, are placed at $1500. Department heads are forbidden to give fictitious titles to employes, as for instance to designate a stenographer as a clerk for the purpose of paying the salary of a higher classification, and the number of employes in the departments are limited.

The bill would fix the salaries of clerks and employes now receiving $2200 to $2400 a year at $1800 to $2000. Janitors throughout are fixed at $900.

During debate on the measure, Secretary of State Becker and Adjutant-General Raupp appeared on the floor, Becker admitting that he was there to oppose the bill. Becker's salary is not affected by the bill though that of Raupp is cut $500 a year.

Suspension Effort Defeated.

An effort by Representative Freeland, Republican, to have the changes effected by the bill suspended until 1925, when a change in administration will have occurred, most of the offices now being held by Republicans, was voted down.

Twenty separate offices are affected by the act, which, although a salary reduction move in the main, provides for a few increases.

Instead of five members of the the Public Service Commission at $5500 each, this bill would create two at $4500 each. Adjutant-General Raupp would be cut from $3500 to $3000. J. D. Allen, clerk of the Supreme Court, would be decreased from $4000 to $3500. Charles Prather, Pure Food and Drug Commissioner, would be decreased from $3500 to $3000. Commissioner Millspaugh of the Department of Finance from $5000 to $4000, and T. J. Hedrick, Grain and Warehouse Commissioner, from $4500 to $4000.

TEMPORARY WRIT AGAINST MURDER TRIAL

William Nelson Contends State Has Forfeited Right to Try Him.

The State Supreme Court, en banc, yesterday issued a temporary writ of prohibition to prevent William Nelson from being brought to trial for murder in Judge Grimm's court, where it is docketed. The writ is returnable in 30 days.

Nelson, charged with the murder of Louis Cieff with a hatchet in a rooming house at 1108 South Sixteenth street, in May, 1921, contends that the State has forfeited its right to try him. A State statute provides that a defendant shall be entitled to his discharge if no effort is made by the State, at three successive terms of court, to bring him to trial. Nelson, held in jail for 18 months, asserts the State continued his case at the April, June, October and December terms last year.

Circuit Attorney Sidener said to a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday that while the case had been continued many times, several of the continuances had been at the request of Nelson's attorney and some had been made by the Court because of congested dockets. He said he was certain the State had not asked that the case be continued for three consecutive terms, as contended by Nelson.

Another man was accused jointly with Nelson of the murder of Cieff, but took a severance and was acquitted. A confession, in which this man was said to have declared that Nelson and he killed Cieff because Cieff refused Nelson a $500 loan, was repudiated by the defendant as having been obtained from him under blows from a hose. Nelson was reported to have confessed at about the same time.

HARDING'S PLAN FOR VISIT TO ALASKA OUTLINED IN HOUSE

Expects to Leave Washington After Going to Florida With Mrs. Harding.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—Plans of President Harding to visit Alaska this summer were outlined to the House last night by Chairman Madden of the Appropriations Committee, in an address supporting an amendment to the deficiency appropriation bill, which would make a valuable fund for the President's use during the fiscal year beginning July 1, with the unexpended balance of his $25,000 fund to meet traveling expenses during the current fiscal year.

Madden said that because of the illness of Mrs. Harding the President in recent months had been unable to do any traveling. After going to Florida to enable Mrs. Harding to recuperate, the President, Madden said, intended to return to Washington, leaving here at some later date for a trip across the continent and to Alaska, where he hoped to obtain first hand information on conditions there.

SUPREME COURT HALTS HEARINGS IN LAUMEIER PATERNITY SUIT

Issues Temporary Writ of Prohibition to Prevent Proceeding Here.

A temporary writ of prohibition, returnable in 30 days, was issued by the State Supreme Court, en banc, at Jefferson City yesterday, preventing Circuit Judge Hall from proceeding with hearings to determine the paternity of the 3-year-old son of Mrs. Byrd Shoemaker, former wife of Herman Henry Laumeier, wealthy real estate man. Attorneys for Mrs. Shoemaker filed the writ application Feb. 26, alleging the court here is without purisdiction.

Mrs. Shoemaker sued Laumeier in the New York courts for money for the child's care, but since the courts there have declined to accept jurisdiction, she has resisted Laumeier's attempts to have the child's paternity determined here.

She obtained a divorce and restoration of her maiden name here in June, 1919, and the child was born six months later.

Frank Greathouse, a confectioner with a shop at 1817 East Broadway, East St. Louis, last night reported to the East St. Louis police that he was robbed of a purse containing $300 and a check for $100 and a revolver by two men who assaulted him in front of his shop as he was locking up for the night about 9 o'clock.

ILLEGAL SEIZURE KILLS CASE

Officers Had No Warrant When They Took Beer From Stand.

A charge of possession of intoxicating liquor against Joseph Schmidt, a bartender of 2700 Glasgow avenue, was dismissed by Provisional Judge Goldman in the Court of Criminal Correction yesterday on the ground that the police, in confiscating the evidence in the case without a search warrant, had made an unlawful seizure.

Schmidt was arrested Jan. 28 when tending bar in a soft drink stand at 3610 Finney avenue, when police found three per cent beer on tap. The police, in testimony before Judge Goldman Thursday, admitted having no search warrant authorizing their search of the place. The case was taken under advisement at that time. A quart bottle of the beer was produced in evidence.

Buick 23—Six—49 Seven-Passenger Touring Car $1545 Delivered St. Louis

A Million Buicks!

Buick production has now reached the "million-car" mark. Buick is the only car in the industry to reach this mark—except one well-known make of standard, low-priced fours. It is an achievement in automobile production, but this high total has a greater significance.

It means that people have found in Buick the happy mean between two extremes—between the cheap cars and the high-priced cars. The man of moderate income finds in Buick a car of marked power, endurance and long life with a low cost of operation. The man who can pay more for a car finds in Buick all that he requires in beauty, convenience and easy riding comfort.

Buick has reached the million mark because it gives discriminating buyers what they want in a car.

KLAN REPUDIATES 'K. K. K.' WARNINGS SENT TO NEGROES

Handbills Distributed in Pemiscot County Offering $100 Reward for Identification of Writers of Letters

REPORTS OF TROUBLE LARGELY UNFOUNDED

Some Instances in Southeast Missouri Where Negroes Were Intimidated—Some Departed Through Fear.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CARUTHERSVILLE, Mo., March 3.—The organizer for the Ku Klux Klan in Southeast Missouri, H. S. Ahrens, today distributed 1000 handbills about Pemiscot County offering a reward of $100 for identification of any persons issuing letters or literature tending to intimidate negroes signed with the name of the Ku Klux Klan.

Ahrens said that, with the better class of citizens in the county, members of the Klan recognized that negroes were necessary to cultivate and pick cotton crops and that the Klan was not participating in anything to disturb the peace of mind of the negroes.

He said, however, that exagerated newspaper reports had given the negroes some fear of the Klan and the Klan desired to allay the fear. He said that about six weegs ago some warnings sent to negroes were signed with the letters, "K.K.K."

Isolated Cases Found.

The correspondent today toured Pemiscot County and conversed by telephone with the sheriffs of Dunklin, New Madrid, Mississippi and Scott Counties, in an effort to learn how many reports of shooting at negroes' homes, burning of their houses and warnings to leave could be authenticated.

In general each community told of a minimum of cases of the sort among negroes residing in them, but cited aggravated cases in other parts of the county, which did not bear up under investigation.

It was learned that six weeks ago two negro homes near Sanford's store, three miles west of Holland, had been fired upon by men in automobiles who left warnings that the occupants of the houses must depart. They did depart. Two days later six other negro families on adjacent farms departed.

Four Negroes Warned.

At Micola, were it was reported that three homes of negroes had been burned, it was found that the settlement consisted of a store and two houses and that none of these had been burned. In fact, the correspondent was unable to learn that any homes in the county had been burned. The solitary disturbance at Micola was the warning of four negroes to depart. Three obeyed and one remained. Nothing has happened to the one who remained.

Denton, which is the town named by prosecuting officials as one of two towns from which large numbers of negroes fled, consists of two stores and three houses. No negroes have lived in the village, although about 100 are employed in cotton picking season on farms in the neighborhood. No resident of Denton could recall that any negroes had been warned, but they volunteered the information that there had been a "terrible time" at Sanford's store. It already has been recounted that the trouble at Sanford's store appears to have been exaggerated.

Negroes Became Alarmed.

Holland is a town of 200 to 300 persons. No warning to negroes have been given in the town and none in the surrounding country, residents said. They said, however, that negroes became alarmed at reports from other parts of the county and six weeks ago considerable numbers had left. The station agent for the Frisco Railroad estimated that about 200 had left. About 45 departed on one train following a report of "terrible things" at Sanford's store.

No other town in the southern part of the county could be found in which it was admitted that there had been warnings. The chief disturbance seems to have occurred at Barnes Ridge, three miles west of Haywood, in the northern part of the county. Six weeks ago a negro's home was fired upon during the night. Windows were broken and a negro girl and negro man in the house were superficially wounded by buckshot. Next morning the marks of 36 shots were found on the house exterior. Five men were arrested. One recently was killed in a saloon brawl, one was bound over to the grand jury and the other three were released because of failure of the negro residents of the house to identify them.

Another House Fired Into.

It is estimated that 100 negroes left that vicinity after the shooting. One other house at Barnes Ridge was fired into, but no one was hurt.

The Sheriff of Dunklin County said over the telephone that theer were only about 200 negroes in the county and there had been no disturbance. The Sheriff of Mississippi County said that some negroes had left the community upon receipt of reports of warnings in Pemiscot County. The only incident in his county, he said, was the placing of a stick of dynamite on the steps of a negro's home. A man was arrested and fined $50 for this. He is serving out his fine in jail.

The Sheriff of New Madrid County said nothing had occurred there except that some negroes had gone away as a consequence of reports of occurrences in Pemiscot. Scott County has had no trouble.

MRS. HUCK TO MAKE NO CONTEST

Congresswoman Says She May Run For Place in Next Congress.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—Representative Winifred Mason Huck will not contest the nomination of Morton D. Hull, her opponent in the recent Republican Congressional primary in the Second Illinois district, she announced today. She declared however, that a fight for "improved election conditions" would be taken directly to the people in a campaign of publicity.

Mrs. Huck said she had under consideration plans either for opposing Mr. Hull for a place in the next Congress or for making another fight for nomination as Representative-at-large, a position she now holds.

The reason he believes he can is because he has a large acquaintance among persons who can afford a comparatively inexpensive car, the product of the largest manufacturers of motor cars in the world. It is a standard make and the 1923 models are unbeatable. The man who can qualify must have a likeable personality, know something about selling, a large acquaintance and an aggressive, never-say-die spirit. To such a man we can make an interesting proposition.

Miss Irma E. Eisenhart of Waterloo, Germany, has sent to the Post-Dispatch on conditions there today. She is living in the various states since her arrival in unusual interest because it deals frequently of life that do not often get into the news

I HAVE been in Germany for the past six months and have had unusual opportunities to observe the economical, political and social conditions in this country today.

The moment you cross their border line you become conscious of the hostile spirit toward Auslander (foreigners), regardless of the country from which you hail. The Germans resent the entrance of those from countries whose money value is high today. They profess to regard the Americans a bit more leniently because they buy the luxuries which the Germans cannot even consider purchasing, but deplore the fact that the innumerable Norwegians and Swedes purchase the woolens and warm wearing apparel which they themselves so greatly need and claim that the Russians, Galicians and Czechs are ruining the morale of their cities. Most of all, they lament the presence of so many Japanese and Chinese men, who, owing to the present financial distress among all families, succeed in marrying many German girls. Their intense hatred of the French caused Berlin hotels to come to an agreement last week that no rooms will be given to people of that nationality, and I noticed today in one of the largest and best-known restaurants, that all French wines had been crossed out of the menu.

Heavy Taxes on Rooms.

Berlin is undoubtedly the most crowded city in Europe today. It is more international in atmosphere than other German cities. It is almost impossible to secure a room in any hotel or pension. There are two German words which greet you on every side: "Alles besetzt," meaning "All rooms are taken." Owing to these crowded conditions, the law allows every German family to have only a certain number of rooms, and if the number of persons in the household does not warrant the number of rooms registered in its name, they are forced to take boarders and rent out the remaining rooms. The latest rule in Wilmersdorf, which is the finest and most desirable section of Berlin, is that no Auslander may rent a room or board in a private family, but may still live in pensions or hotels. This rule will very soon be applied to other residence sections.

All Auslander, whether in hotel or pension, must pay a Beherbergsteuer, an 80 per cent tax on the price of your room, a city tax of 5 per cent on your entire pension bill and a luxury tax of 2 per cent. It is now almost impossible for any foreigner to enter Southern Germany, known as Bavaria. Munich permits one to remain only three days and demands a very high tax for your brief presence there.

"Auslander" Really Godsend.

Although there is so much objection to the presence of the Auslander, yet this so-termed "menace" is, in some instances, a real godsend to them. With great inconsistency, pension owners and all others having rooms to rent, advertise that they want Auslander, preferably Americans, with the hope of receiving (and in some cases really stipulating) that payment be made in dollar bills.

In many public squares, placards have been posted requesting the stores not to sell articles to Auslander, but the merchant is not apt to heed this sort of public admonition, since the stores could not exist very well today, were it not for the Auslander.

For the first, and perhaps only, time in our lives we count our wealth in millionaire's figures. The uppermost thought in every mind and first question on everyone's lips is "What is the dollar today?" We are exchanging much skill in repair

Germany Today, as Seen by an Illinois Girl Who Is in That Country

Berlin Crowded, With Heavy Tax on Rooms —Opera Goers Pull Out Rye Bread and Sausage Between the Acts.

Miss Irma E. Eisenhart of Waterloo, Ill., who is studying music in Germany, has sent to the Post-Dispatch the following interesting letter on conditions there today. She is living in Berlin, but has traveled much in the various states since her arrival in that country. Her letter is of unusual interest because it deals frequently with the more homely phases of life that do not often get into the news.

I HAVE been in Germany for the past six months and have had unusual opportunities to observe the economical, political and social conditions in this country today.

The moment you cross their border line you become conscious of the hostile spirit toward Auslander (foreigners), regardless of the country from which you hail. The Germans resent the entrance of those from countries whose money value is high today. They profess to regard the Americans a bit more leniently because they buy the luxuries which the Germans cannot even consider purchasing, but deplore the fact that the innumerable Norwegians and Swedes purchase the woolens and warm wearing apparel which they themselves so greatly need and claim that the Russians, Galicians and Czechs are ruining the morale of their cities. Most of all, they lament the presence of so many Japanese and Chinese men, who, owing to the present financial distress among all families, succeed in marrying many German girls. Their intense hatred of the French caused Berlin hotels to come to an agreement last week that no rooms will be given to people of that nationality, and I noticed today in one of the largest and best-known restaurants, that all French wines had been crossed out of the menu.

Heavy Taxes on Rooms.

Berlin is undoubtedly the most crowded city in Europe today. It is more international in atmosphere than other German cities. It is almost impossible to secure a room in any hotel or pension. There are two German words which greet you on every side: "Alles besetzt," meaning "All rooms are taken." Owing to these crowded conditions, the law allows every German family to have only a certain number of rooms, and if the number of persons in the household does not warrant the number of rooms registered in its name, they are forced to take boarders and rent out the remaining rooms. The latest rule in Wilmersdorf, which is the finest and most desirable section of Berlin, is that no Auslander may rent a room or board in a private family, but may still live in pensions or hotels. This rule will very soon be applied to other residence sections.

All Auslander, whether in hotel or pension, must pay a Beherbergsteuer, an 80 per cent tax on the price of your room, a city tax of 5 per cent on your entire pension bill and a luxury tax of 2 per cent. It is now almost impossible for any foreigner to enter Southern Germany, known as Bavaria. Munich permits one to remain only three days and demands a very high tax for your brief presence there.

"Auslander" Really Godsend.

Although there is so much objection to the presence of the Auslander, yet this so-termed "menace" is, in some instances, a real godsend to them. With great inconsistency, pension owners and all others having rooms to rent, advertise that they want Auslander, preferably Americans, with the hope of receiving (and in some cases really stipulating) that payment be made in dollar bills.

In many public squares, placards have been posted requesting the stores not to sell articles to Auslander, but the merchant is not apt to heed this sort of public admonition, since the stores could not exist very well today, were it not for the Auslander.

For the first, and perhaps only, time in our lives we count our wealth in millionaire's figures. The uppermost thought in every mind and first question on everyone's lips is "What is the dollar today?" We are acquiring much skill in rapid mental arithmetic, for prices are raised so frequently and suddenly that they are apt to double during the time required to find and count out your change.

When Minutes Mean Dollars.

I walked into the American Express office one day to exchange a $50 check, and asked the rate of exchange that minute. The cashier replied: "Eleven thousand 700 marks," and I wildly tried to calculate mentally if $50 was sufficient and just how many times 11,700 is contained in 526,500 (which is the amount I needed). I multiplied, divided and subtracted just one minute too long. Within those two minute the rate of exchange decreased to 9500 and I had lost 2200 marks on each dollar, making a total of 110,000 marks, or approximately $10 on my $50 check. Yes, fortunes are made and lost within a few minutes.

New paper money of larger denominations is being manufactured daily. We now receive 10,000-mark bills, but very often have to accept small change. Imagine receiving several hundred thousand marks in 20, 50, 100 or 500 mark denominations! We stuff our coat pockets, our bags, our purses and then have still several thousand left over. We buy newspapers in which to wrap the remainder of our fat money roll, in order to hide the shocking evidence of our great wealth from the eyes of the hostile German public.

Meal With Wine for 40 Cents.

We continue to pay Auslander prices on all purchases—which is many times the price listed on all articles. We strive to conceal our identity as Auslander by speaking German, but betray it instead, for frequently questions asked by us in German are replied to in English. Even if our speech did not betray us, our shoes would, for while these people are wearing flat, low-heeled, short, broad, round-tipped shoes, we are gaily tiptoeing around in our ridiculously high-heeled, pointy-toed slippers. One hesitates to wear pretty clothes brought along from America, not only because the unkind, appraising glances of the natives are very disagreeable, but also because by comparison with their last century's styles, our apparel is appallingly futuristic in design.

Germany today would delight the heart of every American bargain hunter. All articles can be bought ridiculously cheap if the exchange is carefully watched and purchases made on the day the value of the mark drops very suddenly and before the shopkeepers have had time to raise their prices. Beautiful table linens may be bought for one-fourth of the normal price; a good meal, including everything from soup and caviar to meat, vegetables, dessert and a bottle of wine for 40 cents; car fare amounts to half a cent in our money; and one can purchase a pair of fine kid gloves for 20 cents. Eggs cost 12 cents a dozen. I know an American gentleman who bought material of finest woolen quality for four suits and had them made by a tailor, the total cost being $50.

Cost of Hearing Opera.

A ticket to the Staadtsopern Haus costs 27,000 marks for all foreigners and about 2000 for Germans. All Germans must present their passes, containing a small photograph of themselves, to attest their identity as German-born citizens and thus prove their legitimacy to cheaper entrance ticket. Concert tickets can be bought for 165 to 800 marks, which means that we Americans can hear the Philharmonic Orchestra under such splendid conductors as Furtwangler, Schneevoight and Bruno Walter and the beautiful art of Kreisler, Joseph Schwarz, Elly Ney and Friedman for less than 5 cents—artists whom we pay several dollars a seat to hear in America. The greatest expense (if it may be so called) is not the ticket, but other items that must be paid for, such as programs, checking of hat and wraps, which, together with the car or taxi fare, far exceeds the price of the ticket.

It is a revelation to observe the conduct of European concert audiences compared with our American audiences. Such unconventionality! At a recent concert of a very much beloved German pianist, the audience was so delighted that it rose with one accord after several numbers and rewarded the artist with deafening applause and cheering; a woman left her seat and rushed up the aisle to hand him a rose which she had been wearing; a man ran up and insisted upon shaking his hand across the footlights; and another, in his boundless, unrestrained enthusiasm, leaped upon the stage and kissed him. Can you picture an American audience losing its dignity and sense of decorum or evincing impulsive rapture to that extent?

Hisses Pro and Con.

At another concert where a well-known pianist dared to deviate a bit, in Chopin Etude from the traditional interpretation usually given, part of the audience sent forth a violent hiss in the midst of his playing, to make known their disapproval. The appearing pianist had many warm friends and admirers in the audience who resented this hiss, and sent forth another directed toward the offenders, to be quiet. This resulted in such constant retaliating of hiss for hiss, that in the general excitement it became difficult to discriminate which hissing party had gained the ascendancy—the pros or cons—and it ended by the disatisfied members of the audience leaving the hall while the friends remained, demanding repeated encores.

It is wonderful to note the wide knowledge of music here among all classes of people. In almost every home they are familiar with the works of all the great composers and know the themes of all the fine old symphonies. There is such evident interest, such a spirit of following knowingly every note in the work produced, that it must be very gratifying to the performer to sense the interested thought present.

Sausage Between the Acts.

It is not unusual to see men and women in evening dress at the operas and concerts, between the numbers, unwrap immense paper bags and proceed to munch huge

Lloyd George Says France Apparently Has Turned from Reparations to Loot

Judging from Speeches of French Statesmen, Writes Former British Premier, "France Means to Stick to the Ruhr. Not by Way of Annexation, but by Hanging On to the Industries There Until Reparations Are Paid."

By DAVID LLOYD GEORGE,
War Time Premier of Great Britain

(Copyright, 1923, by United Feature Syndicate. Copyright in Great Britain by London Chronicle. Copyright in Australasia by Australian Press Association. Exclusive World Rights Held by United Feature Syndicate. Reproduction in Whole or in Part Prohibited. All Rights Reserved.)

LONDON, March 3.

"FRENCH troops occupying fresh German territory."

"Further advance into Germany."

"Reinforcements."

"French cut off British bridgehead on Rhine."

Proposals for new coinage in Ruhr."

What is it all leading to? Is it really reparations?

The eminent Italian statesman Signor Nitti, who has made a thorough study of all documents bearing on French designs upon Germany has come definitely to the conclusion that these measures have no reference to the recovery of damages for the devastated area, but that they were all taken in the execution of a vast project for securing French control over all the coal and iron of continental Europe. He supplies chapter and verse for his theory.

Something has undoubtedly roused the suspicions of Signor Mussolini. They come rather late in the day to be effective. He naturally does not relish the idea of an Italy whose coal and steel supplies are placed at the mercy of a gigantic trust directed from Paris. Italy has no coal or iron of her own. Her interest is therefore in a free market. Hence Signor Mussolini's alarm. Is there any ground for it? Let those who imagine that Italian statesmen are unnecessarily disturbed read the discussion in the French press leading up to speeches recently delivered by Messrs. Millerand, Barthou and Poincare.

With regard to M. Barthou's intervention, I feel I must, as one of the founders of the Reparations Commission, say a word. There were important questions of amount and time which could not be determined before the signature of the peace treaty, and could not be settled at all without giving Germany full opportunity for being heard. Hence the appointment of the Reparations Commission. It was called into existence to settle these questions after hearing evidence and deliberating its effect. Of this commission M. Barthou is now chairman. He therefore presides over the body which had committed to its charge judicial functions of a momentous character.

He has to adjudicate from time to time on cases presented by Germany under a multitude of different heads. Inflammatory speeches on the very subjects he has to preserve judicial calm upon are quite incompatible with his position. When he occupied the same post, Poincare ultimately recognized that he could not continue to write controversial articles on questions which might come before him for decision as a Judge. He therefore very properly resigned his commissionership.

France's Apparent Intention.

But to revert to the speeches delivered by these eminent statesmen. If they mean what actual words convey, then France means to stick to the Ruhr. Not by way of annexation. Oh, no! That, according to M. Barthou, is a "foolish, mendacious and stupid" lie. But France means to hang on to the "gages" until reparation is paid. What are the "gages"? The industries of Ruhr. If the French Government is to control industries which represent the life of this prosperous area for 30 years, it assumes greater authority over the district than it exercises over the mining area of Pas de Calais.

In its own districts no Government takes upon itself—except during war—to give directions as to the destination and distribution of coal produced. But there are indications that control over the Ruhr industries is to be of a much more far-reaching character than this. And this is where the hints—broad hints—thrown out by the French press come in. France, in order to secure payment of the reparation installments in future, is to be given shares in these great mines and industries.

What proportion of shares? Amongst the "gages" demanded by Poincare in August last year were 60 per cent of the shares in certain pivotal German industries in the Rhine area. Now the Ruhr industries are clearly to be included within the scope of the demand. France has the iron ore of Lorraine and the coal of the Sarre Valley. Her financiers have been engaged in buying up coal mines in Silesia. If she can secure the controlling interest in the Rhur mines and Belgium and Poland can be persuaded to join in the deal, then the continent of Europe will be at the mercy of this immense coal and iron combine.

I said last week that the ports were still open. So long as they are Central Europe can protect itself to a certain extent against this gigantic trust, for the products of Britain and America will be available. But that possibility is to be provided against. Nothing is to be left to chance. One of the "gages" is to be control over German customs. How can Germany balance a budget without a revenue? How can she raise a revenue without a tariff? What more productive tariff than duty on foreign coal, metal and manufactures? And thus all competitive products will be excluded from the German markets. The combine will thus be supreme.

An End of Reparations.

It is true that if this cynical scheme comes off there is an end of reparations—for the independence of German industry is strangled and its life will soon languish. But there are signs that French enterprise has abandoned all idea of recovering reparations and that it is now brooding upon loot—on an immense scale. For discussions in the French press contemplate even wider and more far-reaching developments than those involved in control of German industries.

Italy, Poland and even Russia are to be brought in. The high line taken for years by Parisian papers about "no traffic with murder" is being given up. Instead we have much sentimental twaddle about restoring old friendly relations between France and Russia. Of course, for a consideration. Russia is to buy; Germany is to manufacture; France is to profit.

These proposals, which for some time have been in the air, are now actually in type. Now the type is ordinary black—later on it may be red. Twenty lives already have been lost over the preliminaries of their execution. I fear there will be many more as difficulties become more apparent.

It is not without significance that the terms which Germany is to be called upon to accept in the event of her submission have never been formulated. No ultimatum was issued before the invasion. If Germany were tomorrow to throw up her hands, what conditions would she have to comply with? Who can tell? Germany clearly does not know. The British Government does not know. They were never discussed at the Paris conference. Monsieur Poincare has only asserted with emphasis that he "will not accept promises."

If the Ruhr is to be evacuated promises must be accepted at some stage, for Germany cannot deliver 10 years of coal installments in advance and cannot pay fifty milliards of gold marks over the counter. So if Poincare's statement means anything, then control of the Ruhr industries must be vested in France until the whole of the mortgage has been redeemed. Hence the vast plan for the exploitation of Germany and, through Germany, Europe.

Says Scheme Is Bound to Fail.

A pretty scheme, but, like most plans which make no allowance for human nature, bound to fail. How long would Italy and Russia consent to be exploited for the enrichment of French capitalists? Italy already has made it clear she has no intention of walking into a trap. Russia may or may not have been approached. It is not improbable there have been informal soundings. It is not easy to reckon what the bolshevists may or may not do under any circumstance. But one can be fairly assured they will not place their heads in the jaws of a rapacious capitalistic crocodile of this character. Brigands are not made of that simple stuff.

Will German statesmen consent to sell their country into political and economic bondage for an indefinite period? It is incredible. No doubt there had been feelers between French and German capitalists some time before the Ruhr invasion. Mr. Loucheur and Mr. Stinnes are credited with having had conversations on the subject of amalgamating interests in Lorraine iron ore and Ruhr coal. But the Ruhr invasion has awakened from its stupor the patriotism of Germany. There has therefore been introduced a potent new element into the calculations. This element does not mix well with international finance. It may be depended upon to resist to the last any effort to put German industry under foreign control, and without control the "gage" is worthless.

Then there's the German workman who must be taken into account. The miner and engineer in all countries are proverbially independent. They take no orders even from their own Governments. During the war they have to be reasoned with before they could be persuaded to take the course urged upon them by the Government of the day in the interests of the country. They will view the commands of a syndicate controlled by foreign Governments with suspicion and repugnance. Should disputes arise—and they are more likely than ever to arise constantly under these conditions—who will be responsible for the protection of life, liberty and property? Will foreign troops operate? Or will the German army police act practically under orders given from Paris? Popular sympathy will be with the strikers. It is a fantastic idea, born of failure, and therefore bound itself to be a failure.

D Lloyd George

French Scheme, Born of Failure, Bound to Fail, Lloyd George Declares

"AMONGST the 'gages' demanded by Poincare in August last year were 60 per cent of the shares in certain pivotal German industries in the Rhine area. Now the Ruhr industries are clearly to be included within the scope of the demand. France has the iron ore of Lorraine and the coal of the Sarre Valley. "A pretty scheme, but like most plans which make no allowance for human nature—bound to fail. How long would Italy and Russia consent to be exploited for the enrichment of French capitalists? Italy already has made it clear she has no intention of walking into a trap. * * * It is not easy to reckon what the Bolshevists may or may not do under any circumstances. But one can be fairly assured they will not place their heads in the jaws of a rapacious capitalistic crocodile of this character. Brigands are not made of that simple stuff."

"It is a fantastic idea born of failure and therefore bound itself to be a failure."

"If She Can Control Ruhr Mines and Belgium and Poland Can Be Persuaded to Join in the Deal, Then Europe Will Be at the Mercy of This Immense Coal and Iron Combine—Italian Statesmen Are Alarmed."

Hilaire Belloc Scouts Notion He's a "Jew Baiter" and Asks That Books, Not Reviews, Be Read

English Writer Blandly Confesses a Toryism in Literature Without Defense of Classical Leanings; Terms Wells a Poor Prophet.

By Lawrence Stallings.
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 3.

"A FRIEND of mine," I said to Hilaire Belloc, "calls you a Jew baiter."

Belloc waved his hand airily. "A typical instance," he said, "of which we had just been discussing. Men have ceased to read books; they read reviews instead and they accept any misstatement as facts. I will wager your young friend has never read my book on Semitism."

"My friend said that he had not," I told him.

"Say to him for me, then," smiled Belloc, "to read the book and to cite me the paragraph he finds to substantiate this opinion of me. Also tell him to beware of footnotes in anything he reads. I have looked up and overthrown references that had gone unchallenged a hundred years. One man twists the truth of another's book to lend force to his own, the falsehood is taken as a fact by successive reviewers and a century of readers accept the lie as fact. I am always surprised to meet a man who has read one of my books."

I told Belloc that one meets a great many Americans who have read his books, essays, histories, verse, tracts and satires. And that some said he was a first rate stylist and historian of note, while others cried "Wolf!" at the mention of his name.

"If a writer goes after the facts," he said, growing serious at once, "two things will surely befall h'm. He will never be a best seller; and the populace will hate him for printing a truth they do not care to be reminded of. I wrote a book on the problems arising when one race lives within another race. I did not advocate any laws to regulate this contact—that would have been absurd; would have bred injustice, persecution—but I sought to get at the bottom of the differences between the two races, hoping that mutual recognition of facts might increase amity. And now I am damned for my pains by a man who has never read the book.

"When you begin writing the truth about a problem, there is always a man to look over your shoulder and shout untruths to the populace."

One might go on interviewing Hilaire Belloc indefinitely. Poke him anywhere and there is resistance and immediate response to the slightest mental stimuli. I forget how many languages it was that Caesar was wont to dictate in, but Belloc might certainly be interviewed in all of them simultaneously without batting a controversial eyelash. Cardinal O'Connell has recently characterized him as "The greatest lay Catholic mind in the world today." Now just what is a "lay Catholic mind?"

"Lay Catholic Mind."

Read Belloc's essays, or, better still, his fascinating "High Lights on the French Revolution," and if you say that you recognize a "lay Catholic mind," either you have great penetration or have fallen into the habit of the present method of attacking the writer. A talk with the man settled the issue, however. A lay Catholic mind, most assuredly, is one reared high upon tradition, one with as many frowning traceries and abutments as a Gothic cathedral—with panes of high, mellowed lights and mystic spaces and comic gargoyles thrusting into air. Surely His Eminence was thinking of a cathedral built up out of ages when he said that of Hilaire Belloc.

The Englishman gives the impression that he is not disturbed over the situation in Europe and that he has spent few nights in distress over what may or may not happen in this world. Rather he radiates the sensation of being keenly alive to the good in life and is filled with a devotion to a God who permeates everywhere, even to Hilaire Belloc. But for his Oxford accent he might be mistaken for Monsieur le Cure of some French parish, with his rational blue eyes and his stiff, grayish hair, cut en bresse.

He is not alarmed over the estrangement of England from France. He doesn't even care to warm up to the subject, for he thinks the breach will heal quickly. "England might be playing a stronger hand in world politics," he said, "but the Ministers know that the British populace won't fight any more. The boys are home to stay."

Justifies Ruhr Invasion.

"France," he said, "is morally justified in her invasion of the Ruhr. France, with Italy and Poland, is enforcing the peace of Europe. She is holding down the lid. Germany and Russia would like nothing better than to join hands and swarm across the continent, with all the little blighter states joining in to take a slice of Polish territory. The French have reached a point where they cannot go on without the German indemnity payments, and it is necessary for the peace of Europe that France exact her due. She has given the German profiteer time enough to yield his surplus that is being diverted to other ways. Morally, she had every right to invade."

"What about the economic rights?" I asked him.

"France will be economically vindicated," he said, "if she brings out of Germany the material and money which are due her. If she forces the reparations payments, all will be well and you will see economic justification for every move she has made."

"And if she doesn't?——"

"Then the peace is hopeless. France cannot withdraw her troops now that she is within the Ruhr unless they bring back the things they went in for. France has gone to pot if her troops return empty handed." And Belloc finished the paragraph with the air of a man who has never had the slightest idea of seeing France go to pot.

The Near East doesn't begin to alarm Belloc as it does other visitors to our shores. He cannot see that it is playing the supposedly tremendous part in the European game. England may possibly have a little private war with Turkey, but he doesn't expect it. He was asked whence came his optimism as to the future of Europe.

"Right Men in Control."

"The right men are in control," he said. "The best thing that came with the peace was the change from the hands of half-civilized to civilized control in the West." When he said the word "control" his eyes twinkled. "Democracy," said Belloc roguishly, "is for angels."

"And what," I asked, "is a civilized man?"

"The man with the most tradition and with the most vivid background of orderly civilization. For 30 years preceding the war Europe had been in the hands of the barbarian with a smattering of the arts. The older man, with deeper memories of civilization, had been pushed into the background by the skeptic, the intellectual upstart. Imagine the Prussian dictating the life and interest of the German from the Western cities, in towns grown old in tradition and the beauty of life before his King began. Europe is back in the hands of the man equipped to govern."

Here Belloc, pushed by questions, went into the matter of education. "A man may receive a college degree," he said, "without a knowledge of the life of the Romans and of the Greeks. He will receive a certificate, but he will not receive an education. Of course, you hear all the modern arguments to the contrary; that it is no use going back to the springs of civilization for an education. Anatole France loves to say, when chided for refusing to learn languages, that the Greeks knew no Latin, so why should he. That's

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles, that it will always fight for progress and reform, never condone injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news, always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

In Defense of the Jew.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

YOU published a letter, by Mr. Gorfan, entitled "Lewishn and Americanism." Could anyone tell me just what are the virtues characteristic of the typical American? I've heard the word "Americanism" used for so great a variety of purposes that I become confused every time I try to define it.

Before the acceptance of Christianity by the state the words "Christian" and "Jew" were synonymous in so far as the Roman was concerned. What could the list of the Jew have been at that time? Why were the Christians martyred? The answer is obvious. Yet, while the Christian martyr is held up to our view as a shining example of self-sacrifice, his contemporary, the Jewish martyr, is kept in oblivion. That is accounted for by the fact that the atrocities of the Romans were completely overshadowed by the vastly more horrible cruelties received by the Jew at the hand of his dear brother in misery, but later master in power, the "Christian." Bigotry and fanaticism, travelling in the guise of religious zeal, held sway over the ignorant mind of the populace.

It was nothing to have a whole ghetto exterminated at one stroke, so to speak. The men were burnt at the stakes, their women were raped, then thrown into the fires, their families were scattered and separated beyond reunion.

Let it not be forgotten that the Jews learn their lessons. They have suffered too much, through religious and national intolerance, not to know that in adhering to the Golden Rule, what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander. The fact that they never affected mission, that they never attempted to convert others, that they attended to nobody's but their own spiritual welfare, is ample proof of their tolerance to the views of the rest of mankind.

Clean Up the Dairies.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I NOTICE a letter from a correspondent to your columns complaining about unhealthy conditions prevailing in some of the dairies supplying milk to the populace of St. Louis. The writer says that cows often are left knee deep in manure, that their bags are seldom washed, and that the hands of the milkers are not washed before milking. This is a sweeping indictment against the dairies and something ought to be done to remedy this condition.

The food value of milk is well known and its therapeutic value is indicated in so many malignant diseases which befall the human race that no stone should be left unturned to insure pure milk. But it is only pure milk free from bacteria that is of value. The people should see to it that proper laws are passed and when passed that they are rigidly enforced. This is one of the most effective ways to render a service to humanity.

Engineers for Executives.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

SPRING elections are approaching in many small cities, and the question of the type of man for Mayor comes up as usual. Lawyers are always available for that office, because it gives them prestige for a higher office. But the majority of them have proven that their sphere of usefulness is mostly in the courtroom. Merchants would be the best fitted for that office, but they usually decline to run for that office for fear that if not re-elected after a term in office it would break into their life work as merchants.

There is still another choice left from a class of men who have often made good in our industrial works, management of railroads, municipal work and as city managers in many cities. Sixty-five per cent of the city managers in cities that have the commission or city manager form of government are professional engineers. An engineer's training and education are along the lines of efficiency and economy. So why not elect a professional civil engineer for that office?

By the way, every city should hold its municipal elections in November, so that the elected officials can take office in January. The planning of any work can then be begun early and completed during the year.

Workmen's Compensation.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

YOUR editorial of yesterday concerning the Sommer case was certainly a very forceful argument for workmen's compensation, and is but another instance of the injustice being done to our people by the failure of our State to enact progressive legislation. So long as damage suit lawyers are permitted to make their own terms for handling injury cases, they will naturally oppose any attempt to pass a compensation law in Missouri. They will see to it that their harvest field remains fertile through the flow of money taken from the wives and children of the unfortunate workman, whose only recourse under existing laws is the ambulance chaser and his many shameful methods of bleeding his victim.

Let us hope that the people of Missouri will insist upon a just compensation law that will forever prevent the suffering and humiliation experienced by Mr. Sommer during the last six years.

HARDING IN MIDSTREAM.

Two years ago today Mr. Harding was inaugurated. The administration is, therefore, at the half-way post chronologically. Morally it is at low tide. It has not met expectations. Possibly no administration could have. In as far as expectation implies a definite desire on the public's part that condition did not exist. The public mind two years ago was sore, disgruntled, unhappy. It wanted a change. Further than that it did not know what it wanted. And as a candidate Mr. Harding made no specific promises. He talked in generalities. The normalcy which he bespoke was at best a vague hope. The clock was to be turned back. The good old days before the cataclysm were to be restored. The rest of the world was in grievous straits. But the rest of the world would have to work out its own salvation. We were not heartlessly indifferent to the grief and poverty and tragic bewilderment of the Old World, but first of all we were concerned with retrieving our own prosperity and contentment and we were going to do it, somehow.

That was the condition of the world in 1920 and that was the theory of Mr. Harding. The condition persists. The theory is dead and buried.

From whatever angle the last two years are viewed it is evident now that normalcy is an iridescent dream and that America, sooner or later, must put its shoulder to the wheel and, with its material and moral resources, must help a prostrate world to its feet. The administration, sensing this fact, already has given some help. The conference on limitation of armament is the administration's outstanding achievement. Its actual accomplishment have been challenged, to be sure, but if that conference had done nothing other than establish the probity, honor and trustworthiness of Japan it would remain an important contribution to progress.

The recent agreement for the payment of Great Britain's war debt on terms believed practicable for the debtor has been pronounced a transaction of far-reaching moral consequences in that it has re-established internationally the validity of contract. A debt between nations is a debt to be paid. Had that moral fundamental gone to smash—and undoubtedly it was in jeopardy—the nations surely would have undergone a dreary ordeal before trade and commerce could securely operate.

And there is the President's proposal that the United States enter into the jurisdiction of the International Court of Justice and join with the other nations in submitting differences to reason and law instead of appealing to force. There are reservations and conditions attached to the proposal which other nations have not imposed, but it is a step forward, an acknowledgment of the fact that we are a member of the family of nations. As such it has been gratefully received by Europe and has inspired hope in American citizens of vision.

In its domestic policies the administration has not been fortunate, vigorous or foreseeing. The tariff act has already been passed upon at the polls, as has also the ship subsidy measure which the President unwisely tried and failed to force through a discredited Congress. The inability to meet a crisis courageously and constructively was demonstrated in the coal and railroad strikes.

Yet, Mr. Harding, we believe, does command a certain popular affection. The general judgment is, we believe, that he is a man of kindly impulses, who dislikes unpleasantness or friction of any kind. In static days he would have been a graceful, dignified Chief Magistrate. The flux of today calls for daring, sterner qualities. Mr. Harding, of course, realizes that if the second half of his administration is a repetition of the first his party will be swept out of power. The November election of last year prophesies that result. What will he undertake to do to revive the popular sentiment of 1920?

No one can say, but this much seems to be clear. The things of striking merit in his administration thus far are found in the departures from his philosophy of normalcy and his policy of isolation. Where he has taken his courage in his hands and tried to better world conditions by co-operation with other nations he has been commended. The one truth that stands out boldly from the experience of the last two years is the need of a brave, vigorous foreign policy. The Fabianism that marks time will not do. A courageous foreign policy might involve Mr. Harding and his party in political disaster. A cowardly policy most certainly will.

With Harry New to take his place, retiring Postmaster-General Work's declaration against political Postmaster appointments is fine rhetoric.

A GRADUATE SCHOOL OF CRIME.

If the testimony of Penal Commissioner Al G. Blakey before a Senate committee is true, the State is maintaining at Jefferson City a college of crime and degeneracy that produces hardened criminals from youths, possibly first offenders, who may have been committed for an act of recklessness rather than of evil intent. Three hundred boys and young men, 16 to 30 years old, in the State Penitentiary, says the Commissioner, are learning to use drugs, are being forced into vicious practices and are becoming dangerous criminals. Mr. Blakey has resigned his post because of his unwillingness longer to take responsibility for conditions in the State Reformatory for Boys at Boonville.

It is utterly impossible, says Blakey, to keep a sufficiently close supervision over 2100 convicts to stop the drug traffic and habits of vice. Whether we accept this verdict or not, Blakey's proposal of an intermediate reformatory for youths on a State prison farm east of Jefferson City, where first offenders could be taken for reform rather than to be schooled in crime, appeals to reason. Certainly the State cannot afford the stigma of making offenders or criminals worse than they are. It cannot afford the inhumanity of ruining lives nor to maintain a cesspool of crime whose inmates are turned out to prey upon the State and infect perhaps thousands of other youths.

Our penal system at best is a failure. If it can be improved by measures plainly within the power of the State neither conscience nor expediency can tolerate the continuance of the present condition.

A TARDY ALARM.

While the free people of Utah slept on their freedom a bunch of antitobacco cranks captured the State Legislature and fasten on them an anticigarette law. The cranks did not confine themselves to a prohibition of cigarette smoking for children, but included every man, woman and child in the State. The arrest of several prominent men followed, and now the Freeman's League of Salt Lake City has held a mass meeting, packed to the doors, to protest. Also, the steam whistles of the city's factories have sounded an alarm as an aid to this protest.

And so it has always gone. It was so in Puritan times. The intolerant minority acted, while the free people lounged nonchalantly about and let their liberties be stolen. Then, too late, they sounded the alarm.

So it will be in Missouri and everywhere else if citizens sleep on their rights. The enemies of liberty are restless, always articulate, and by their incessant noise double or treble their apparent numbers. They can again prohibit whistling on Sunday or any other innocent pleasure, as long as they are left unopposed.

DECADENT STATE GOVERNMENTS.

There are several reasons why governing powers which belong inherently to the states are gravitating to Washington. One reason is a matter of legislative economy. It is a simpler and cheaper task to lobby Congress than the Legislatures of 48 states. Another reason is that suppressive and other legislation by separate states is sometimes futile unless other states join. A third reason is the weakness and unreliability of state governments.

The last-named reason is in process of demonstration in Missouri at the present time. The biennial meeting of the Legislature has come to be an ordeal for the State. Instead of affording an opportunity for the improvement of our laws it has become an open season for attack on the good laws we have. If St. Louis prevents the enactment of certain laws now pending it will be only at the cost of effort and anxiety. Public schools, the university and good roads have been under fire. Legislators either themselves have engaged in petty graft by introducing "sandbagging" bills for the purpose of extorting money from interests opposed to the bills or have become the tools of lobbyists playing that game.

Other state Legislatures are equally susceptible and perhaps more ignorant than that of Missouri. Bills prohibiting the teaching of the evolutionary theory in the public schools have received favorable votes in both the Arkansas and Oklahoma Legislatures and last year came near becoming law in Kentucky.

State governments might become the very heart and strength of American democracy. They are essential to the preservation of local sovereignty. Under competent leadership, such as that of former Gov. La Follette of Wisconsin, they can fulfill the destiny to which they were dedicated by the founders of the Government. In lieu of this quality of leadership their salvation is to be found only in closer interest and vigilance on the part of the voters or by any simplification in form which will contribute to this end.

PANETELA.

YES, Luella,
Mr. Harding
Having done
So well before,
Seems to have
The call
For cutting
In twenty-four.
Anyway,
The other fellows,
Seeing how
The matter stands,
Aren't disposed
To take the honor
Hands.

Politicians,
Little dearie,
Being mostly High of mind,
Value all Considerations
Of an altruistic
Kind.
Nothing truly
Could be further
From their motives
Than that might
Should prevail
In any matter
Over anybody's
Right.

So it is
With Mr. Harding:
Did he not,
When hope was dim,
Bid the flying
Hosts of freedom
Turn about
And follow him?
Was it not
His voice of courage,
When the land
Was most distressed,
Called us,
Sore of heart
And weary,
Back to normalcy
The blest?

Sure it was,
My sweet Luella:
Wherefore,
Now the chance
Is good,
Mr. Harding
Cops the bacon,
An he peradventure
Would.
Fortune,
As it has
Been stated
Somewhere in
An olden stave,
Or political Or social,
Helps consistently
The brave.

Let us therefore,
Out of plenty
And the bliss
Of things repaired,
Mark the rich
Rewards of fortune
Unto him
Whose courage dared,
In the new-found
Peace of nations
And the banished
Fear of reds,
Hail Gamaliel
The Second,
Mighty slayer
Of our dreads!

THE CREATION.
(Old Chinese.)

"In the Gardens of Heaven dwells the Lord of the Universe and His companions are the Song Birds."

Thus spake K'ung Fu, poet and sage, in the days before men wrote; and from the time of the reign of the good prince Chau of Sung, even unto the present day, the story is told to the children of China just as I relate it here.

In the beginning, when God had willed the Earth into being, and the glittering stars and the mellow moon gave to it its first light, He looked upon it and was not content.

He saw there huge granite stones which we call Mountains, under which dwells the Mighty Chinese Dragon, and the valleys and deserts, and great stretches of undulating land, and daylight and darkness, and calm and tempest.

Yet there was neither sea nor stream, tree nor shrub, no voices to echo, no blossoms to gladden, and as He looked upon it and saw it grim, silent and uncolored, it pleased Him not.

I shall send the birds from Heaven to people it, and to lend their soft voices to awaken it, and their bright plumage to color it and make it glad and cheerful.

Then He called about Him His Heavenly companions, and opened the gates of the Gardens and bade them flutter down to Earth to make their abode thereon.

And thus came the Birds first to Earth.

The Pea-fowl and the Pheasant in their stately Mandarin-like grandeur, the Cardinal in his blood-red robe, the Blue Bird with a covering lent him by the dome of the Sky, the Oriole with its golden coat, the Parrots in their gaudy vesture, the Doves and Finches, and all of the Song Birds in their many colors.

Only the Ravens and the Vulture Birds came not then, nor came they at all, until a long time after.

After Man and Inhumanity came, then came the Raven and the Vulture Birds.

But they found no place whereon to rest, no trees wherein to build their nests, nor food nor drink, and finding the Earth without comfort and cheer, they returned again to Heaven.

Then the Prince of Heaven created the Trees of the Forest and the Grass in the Valleys and the Flowers in the Gardens.

First created He the budding Fruit Trees with their blossoms and perfume, then the towering Pine Tree with its dangling cones like miniature Pagodas, then the rugged Oak and the stately Fir, and the graceful Sycamore, the Cedar and the Willow Tree then made He.

The Grass in the Valleys brought forth grain, and the budding trees bore fruit, and when the birds of Heaven returned to Earth again they found there rest, shelter and food.

And thus they builded their nests in the Trees and sang songs, and the Earth echoed with the sound of their gentle voices.

But the boughs of the Willow Tree were slender and frail, and the birds of Heaven built their nests there not at all.

The Willow Trees lamented and grieved, and the tears that they shed formed the clear streams, and the rivers, and the sea.

And to this very day by every stream the Willow Tree is still lamenting, still grieving, still weeping.

Then came Man.

And after him the Ravens and the Vulture Birds, and the wild Beasts of the Forests, and the stinging Insects, the venomed Serpents, and the poisoned Creepers.

But in the Gardens of Heaven dwell there of these not any. There dwell God and the Song Birds.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

This column is designed to reproduce without bias the latest comment by the leading publicists, newspapers and periodicals on the questions of the day.

THE BRITISH LOAN.
From the San Francisco Bulletin.

ALL things considered, the Senate has been prompt and businesslike in approving the scheme for payment of the British debt due to the United States. A few irreconcilables and some disgruntled Democrats—13 in all—put up a perfunctory opposition, but their fractiousness had no effect on the 70 Senators that voted approval. There remain some differences between the Senate and the House of Representatives, but an early adjustment is promised, and in any case they are more concerned with the machinery of management at this end than with the conditions as they affect our debtor. The net return in interest is something less than was expected when the loans were made, but we are to get the principal over a period of 62 years with interest at 3 per cent for the first 10 years and 3½ per cent thereafter. It is the first and thus far the only undertaking to repay our loans, but as Britain proceeds with her payments and benefits by so doing, as undoubtedly she will, her example may be followed by the other countries. There is no other way back to sound business conditions save along the path of full recognition of all foreign financial obligations. The nations that are not prepared to pay us must continue to labor under the disadvantage of a demoralized credit.

PROHIBITION IN MASSACHUSETTS.
From the Boston Post.

WE have learned much in the last four years. The Post believes that only a negligible few wish the old saloons back. Whatever else happens, they are gone forever. But the legalized sale of light wines and beer, without any bars, is quite another matter. Many believe that a modification of the Volstead act, which would make legal the sale of light wines and beer, would satisfy the populace as a whole. Extreme care would be necessary in putting the question or questions properly before the people in order that the true sentiment might be learned. A bill now in is in process of working its way through the Massachusetts Legislature, providing that the people of this commonwealth be given the opportunity of expressing their opinion, through a referendum, on this momentous question. The Post approves such a measure and advocates similar action in every other state of the Union.

PROTECTING MIGRATORY BIRDS.
From the New York World.

IN defeating the bill to provide Federal refuges for migratory birds it pleased some members of the House of Representatives to make merry at the expense of the measure. States rights proved the ostensible stumbling block. The real obstacle was that rural members feared the verdict of the town-pump wifenagemot, the anger of the shotgun artist who insists on his sacred right to slaughter birds, even to extermination. A Congress that has stood for so many onslaughts on State rights could not have been serious in advancing the argument which defeated the bill.

It happens that bird protection is one thing the State cannot adequately deal with. Migratory birds cannot see the dozen or more State lines they may cross twice a year, nor are all States equally ready to protect them. For this reason the Department of Agriculture, representing the farmer, as well as the Audubon and other societies, have necessarily turned for help to the Federal Government. Nor need they despair of success later; but a saner verdict should not be delayed until valuable species of bird life are extinct.

hulks of rye bread with sausage and cheese. No matter how poor a family may be or how loudly they may lament the present hard times, they always seem to have enough marks with which to buy their daily beer. They are perfectly aghast at the idea of America's prohibition law. Germany is full of wineerooms, beer gardens and liquor stores of all sorts—a sight to quicken the thirst of many an American gentleman. The German women smoke far more freely than American women.

Living conditions are really very unsettled and distressing here, far worse than during the war. There is much suffering among the middle classes—those people who previously depended chiefly upon comfortable incomes for their existence. The sources of these incomes, of course, have had to be forfeited and this condition has necessitated finding some means of earning a living. Many, with a knowledge of several foreign languages, have taken to tutoring Auslander privately.

Varying Living Conditions.

I have been living in the home of one of Germany's fine old families, bearing an old, well-known name—a truly aristocratic Prussian family who were intimate friends of the ex-Kaiser as well as several other European Kings and members of royalty. This family formerly lived in a castle in great ease and elegance. Today, they have only a moderate-sized apartment and run what is called a private pension, as a means of livelihood. They have managed, so far, to retain their fine paintings, rare porcelain, silver and some of the handsome furniture. Many families, formerly quite wealthy, have had to sell all their silverware and jewels in order to buy coal for the winter. Therefore, one can buy priceless articles very cheaply in the antique shops now.

Then I have also visited in several very humble homes, where the people were very hospitable and kind, but where every piece of bread and every 100-mark piece was carefully accounted for in each day's expenditures. In these homes, only one room was heated (although the and his defense. But you won't have an education until you go back to them.

"I cannot read the moderns—the modern fiction writers," he said. This was admitted with the slightly apologetic air of a man who did not regret one jot that he doesn't keep abreast of the realist swarms, but that he owed it to the young men to be polite in dismissing them.

Modern Writers.

"Modern writers are all obsessed with the images coming and going in their own minds," he laughed. "They write volumes on the shape of their own heads. Unless I am reading history and economics or the weeklies I prefer a good story. You won't find many good stories written today. I am not at all interested in what is going on in those fellows' heads. How many of them have ever read, for example, Machiavelli's 'The Prince'?"

The striking thing about Hilaire Belloc is the bland manner in which he confesses a Toryism in literature. Tags, jingles and snappy paragraphs suffice for a dismissal of the stuff he obviously considers to be half-baked writing. There is no faltering, professorial defense of his classical leanings—the cathedral looks down upon the steam-heated hall, secure in the grandeur of the ages.

"Now, Wells is a jolly fellow," he said, 'and one who has an ordinary talent for seeing things vividly and putting them down on paper for others to see. Yet why must Wells try to be a prophet? He does it rather badly. When you shout old truth to the populace it follows you devotedly, as it does Wells. That's one way of leading the people; walking behind them. Become truly prophetic and you lose your following. Think of how many prophets there are and how long it was before anyone believed them! Wells is no good as a prophet, and he shouldn't pose as one.

"He never has discovered the real God. Of course, he has seen lots of little gods come and go—including those from Moscow—and he has shouted about them."

Here Belloc sang a bit of doggerel about H. G. Wells, lampooning his hatred of the gentry and his nausea at the sight of a guardsman's spurs. When I tried to jot it down he refused to give me the rhymes. "Chesterton and I made it up to jolly Wells along, but it really wouldn't be fair to print it as serious verse," he explained.

Sings Rhymes.

Belloc has decided to end serious conversation for the day. He sang rhyme after rhyme from that vast unofficial collection that is a collaboration of two English wits, himself and G. K. Chesterton. He told stories of London. He harked back to the Hotel Metz at Toul, where as a boy in a French training camp he had dined.

"In the diary of Wilfred Scawen Blunt," I said, "you certainly are almost libeled for your insistence in July, 1914, that there could be no war with Germany."

He roared with laughter.

"Blunt," he chuckled, "was taking his revenge on life—a perfectly human revenge. You see, he was awfully hulks of rye bread with sausage and cheese. No matter how poor a family may be or how loudly they may lament the present hard times, they always seem to have enough marks with which to buy their daily beer. They are perfectly aghast at the idea of America's prohibition law. Germany is full of winerooms, beer gardens and liquor stores of all sorts—a sight to quicken the thirst of many an American gentleman. The German women smoke far more freely than American women.

Living conditions are really very unsettled and distressing here, far worse than during the war. There is much suffering among the middle classes—those people who previously depended chiefly upon comfortable incomes for their existence. The sources of these incomes, of course, have had to be forfeited and this condition has necessitated finding some means of earning a living. Many, with a knowledge of several foreign languages, have taken to tutoring Auslander privately.

Varying Living Conditions.

I have been living in the home of one of Germany's fine old families, bearing an old, well-known name—a truly aristocratic Prussian family who were intimate friends of the ex-Kaiser as well as several other European Kings and members of royalty. This family formerly lived in a castle in great ease and elegance. Today, they have only a moderate-sized apartment and run what is called a private pension, as a means of livelihood. They have managed, so far, to retain their fine paintings, rare porcelain, silver and some of the handsome furniture. Many families, formerly quite wealthy, have had to sell all their silverware and jewels in order to buy coal for the winter. Therefore, one can buy priceless articles very cheaply in the antique shops now.

Then I have also visited in several very humble homes, where the people were very hospitable and kind, but where every piece of bread and every 100-mark piece was carefully accounted for in each day's expenditures. In these homes, only one room was heated (although the weather is very cold) in order to save coal. Heavy black bread and potatoes chiefly formed every meal. So I have had the opportunity to hear the varied opinions and observe the actual prevailing conditions under many and varied circumstances.

Attitude on Ruhr Occupation.

There was great consternation in Germany when the news first spread that the French had occupied the Ruhr district, the chief source of Germany's coal supply. The following Sunday, a great demonstration took place in Postdamer Platz, in Berlin—in the nature of a protest mass meeting. Police were called to guard the French embassy, but the day passed without serious trouble. I read occasionally in foreign newspapers reports to the effect that Germany is quietly preparing to fight again, but these reports are not founded on facts. Germany is practically defenseless and cannot fight again, for, as a well-known German aptly expressed to me one day, "Can one shoot with chocolate drops?" Most of all, they lament the fact that the French are occupying the Rhine, which has always been the chief pride, evident in song and verse, of Germany.

On every side it is a tale of lamentation. Everyone with whom you speak, every conversation overheard on street corner or in street car is upon the one subject of the hard times and expensive living conditions of today. The people will not be cheered; they refuse to dismiss the unhappy subject from their minds. They persist in entertaining the most dismal outlook imaginable. One wearies of the endless tales of woe, even though appreciating the causes of such depression.

Cafes Well Filled.

Yet, despite conditions, it is puzzling to note that the music halls and opera houses are always crowded. True, many are "auslander," but a great percentage I know to be Germans. The cafes are always filled with people at the tea hour, when crowds leisurely gather for their cups of coffee and "conditorei" and sit comfortably around the small tables smoking and talking for several hours—quite different from our American tea rooms, where we rush in for our daily ice cream sodas and fruit salads and then hasten away instead of prolonging aimlessly our social half hour. All stores, except a few of the largest department stores downtown, close up from 2 to 4:30 p. m., to allow the storekeeper time to eat dinner and perhaps take his daily nap.

The universal German breakfast in all hotels and pensions consists of two bread rolls, a bit of butter and a cup of coffee. Last week it was decreed that hotel breakfasts be butterless henceforth. All cafes, winerooms and dance halls must now close at 11 p. m., in order to conserve heat and light.

Everywhere the order of things is so informal—so unconventional. Women appear on the streets wearing evening wraps; others are carrying shoes, unwrapped laundry or loaves of bread in their arms. The extensive delivery system of our American stores does not prevail here. Everyone carries all purchases with him, even unto pine trees, large and small, at Christmas time. If you meet a man wearing a tall black silk hat you always know that he is going to a funeral. We have tramped the streets in vain, but cannot find a banana or a soda cracker.

The German Movies.

The movies here cannot be compared with the highly perfected and elaborate productions in America. There is too much restless action on the part of the actors. Their plays are not continuous. There is a pause between each reel during which the lights are switched on.

The German people are great fighters—verbally as well as physically. Daily quarrels and arguments take place on street corners, in cars and trains. There seem to be absolutely no traffic laws abroad. Cars, carriages and people dart across the streets in all directions, and there results a general riot of confusion far exceeding the busiest street corner of any American city, where the amount of traffic and number of cars is hundreds of times greater than here, but regulated by its systematic street rules. The great outstanding difference which we Americans note in the appearance of large foreign cities, compared with those of our own country, is the scarcity of private cars. The rate of locomotion is so low that there is little danger of an accident ever occurring. This slow pace is descriptive of all moving things—trains, cars, droschkes and even elevators.

One of the most exciting and inconvenient features of a trip abroad is foreign travel, in their slow, little trains with their first, second and third-class coaches, known as wagons.

In the Bavarian Alps.

We were fascinated by the Old World quaintness of the people of the Bavarian Alps. When arriving in the tiny village of Oberammergau, one feels as though he had been magically transferred to another world. The inhabitants seem to live and think only in the time of the action of the Passion Play itself.

Much has been written about the number of smaller European opera houses. It is, of course, an advantage for the young singer to get a start and to afford opera for the masses at comparatively small prices; but the fact remains that the quality of the performances here given are not good. We heard a most wretched performance of "Tristan and Isolde" at one of these small opera houses. The performance started at 6 p. m. and lasted until 11:30 p. m. The performers shrieked nobly for five and a half hours and it took Tristan fully an hour and a half to die. Five times he carefully threw himself down and yelled "Gestorben," but he always revived and we began to fear that he never would die. The Wagnerian operas are never cut short here, no matter how long the scene or how little action may take place in these scenes.

Hilaire Belloc Denies He Is an Anti-Semitist

his defense. But you won't have an education until you go back to them.

"I cannot read the moderns—the modern fiction writers," he said. This was admitted with the slightly apologetic air of a man who did not regret one jot that he doesn't keep abreast of the realist swarms, but that he owed it to the young men to be polite in dismissing them.

Modern Writers.

"Modern writers are all obsessed with the images coming and going in their own minds," he laughed. "They write volumes on the shape of their own heads. Unless I am reading history and economics or the weeklies I prefer a good story. You won't find many good stories written today. I am not at all interested in what is going on in those fellows' heads. How many of them have ever read, for example, Machiavelli's 'The Prince'?"

The striking thing about Hilaire Belloc is the bland manner in which he confesses a Toryism in literature. Tags, jingles and snappy paragraphs suffice for a dismissal of the stuff he obviously considers to be half-baked writing. There is no faltering, professorial defense of his classical leanings—the cathedral looks down upon the steam-heated hall, secure in the grandeur of the ages.

"Now, Wells is a jolly fellow," he said, 'and one who has an ordinary talent for seeing things vividly and putting them down on paper for others to see. Yet why must Wells try to be a prophet? He does it rather badly. When you shout old truth to the populace it follows you devotedly, as it does Wells. That's one way of leading the people; walking behind them. Become truly prophetic and you lose your following. Think of how many prophets there are and how long it was before anyone believed them! Wells is no good as a prophet, and he shouldn't pose as one.

"He never has discovered the real God. Of course, he has seen lots of little gods come and go—including those from Moscow—and he has shouted about them."

Here Belloc sang a bit of doggerel about H. G. Wells, lampooning his hatred of the gentry and his nausea at the sight of a guardsman's spurs. When I tried to jot it down he refused to give me the rhymes. "Chesterton and I made it up to jolly Wells along, but it really wouldn't be fair to print it as serious verse," he explained.

Sings Rhymes.

Belloc has decided to end serious conversation for the day. He sang rhyme after rhyme from that vast unofficial collection that is a collaboration of two English wits, himself and G. K. Chesterton. He told stories of London. He harked back to the Hotel Metz at Toul, where as a boy in a French training camp he had dined.

"In the diary of Wilfred Scawen Blunt," I said, "you certainly are almost libeled for your insistence in July, 1914, that there could be no war with Germany."

He roared with laughter.

"Blunt," he chuckled, "was taking his revenge on life—a posthumous revenge. You see, he was awfully lonely in the latter years of his life, and he resented it. Therefore he set down all manner of falsehoods as facts. When the book was published there were recriminations among us every day. 'What made you say that about me,' a man would ask me 'at Blunt's house that night?' and then he would be furious about something that issued from Blunt's imagination. Blunt had his revenge on us all."

There are two questions that form the basis of the stock collection of every reporter. One is "What do you think of prohibition?" for all English visitors. I passed the query up, for Belloc was sipping a tall Scotch and soda with the air of a man going about a familiar ritual. He probably will not encounter the Volstead law while in the hands of his hundreds of friends in the United States.

"The greatest fun a man can have," said Belloc, "is to overthrow footnotes. It combines with it a quest of truth. Paschal's attack on the Jesuits in 'Provincials' is a case in point. Here was a brilliant advocate writing just as a lawyer might argue a case. I investigated every footnote, looked them up with no end of trouble, and they were all wrong."

"Is writing a tract really the best fun of all?"

"No," he said, mock-seriously. "I will give you a tag that I once wrote for a lady who now has it painted on the wall of her house:

"I am tired of love; I am still more tired of rhyme;
"But money gives me pleasure all the time."

Spring Exposition and Sale of New Apparel

TOMORROW marks the opening of our Annual Spring event in the Mirror of Fashion. Intriguing glimpses are here reflected of the new styles; forecasts of modes that will dominate the Spring and Summer fashions; novel fabrics; new colors, with their fascinating appellations; what the shops in Paris and New York have to say about the last word in Women's Clothes; important accessories so dear to the feminine heart; every little whimsy. Here are the finest of Spring style intimations in early displays unpacked.

Ross Crane Says:

"Every homemaker should be an artist and paint pictures. Not necessarily with pigments on canvas, but with the furnishings of the home.

¶ "It's easy, madame—and fascinating. Try this: Take a table, some books, a picture and a chair—all simple, familiar objects—and group them together to form a charming, decorative composition and which at the same time provides for the best use of all articles.

¶ "Or combine a screen, a table, a lamp or vase (vazz or vawz) to form another. Anyone can do it.

FILMS OF WILD LIFE TO BE EXHIBITED IN ST. LOUIS

Moving pictures of wild birds and animals made for the Associated Audubon Societies of America by William L. Finley, of Portland, Ore., will be exhibited in St. Louis by Finley on Wednesday, March 7, first before the Wednesday Club at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and then at the City Club at 8 o'clock in the evening, before the annual dinner of the Missouri Fish and Game League. The exhibit at the City Club will be free to anyone wishing to come in after the dinner.

It is the custom of Finley to spend part of the year in the field photographing wild things and the rest of the year exhibiting his pictures. He has been coming to St. Louis for several years, always exhibiting things he had not shown before. It has been said of him that he reflects in his pictures the patience of Job, since to show how a nesting wild duck lines her nest with the down from her breast he has spent patient days in the marsh and to get near enough to the great California condor to photograph it he has followed that rarest of the soaring birds for weeks.

While in St. Louis, Finley will be the guest of Clark McAdams, with whom he is associated in the U. S. Department of Agriculture upon the Advisory Board under the migratory bird treaty act.

POLICE WANT A GUN-TOTING LAW WITH TEETH IN IT

Brockman Asks Hyde to Help Get Legislature to Amend Present "Scrap of Paper."

GANGSTERS KNOW HOW TO EVADE IT

Requirement of Proof of Concealment on Persons Held to Make Convictions Impossible.

Convinced the law making gun-toting a penitentiary offense, which has been in effect for 13 years, although no one from St. Louis was ever sent to prison for violating it, is inadequate as a means of preventing gangsters and gunmen from carrying weapons, the police have asked Gov. Hyde to help them get the Legislature to put some "teeth" into the law.

Gangsters, as is known, have been going about killing each other ever since the law was passed. They have been riding around in automobiles heavily armed in readiness for hostilities, and have suffered little inconvenience from the efforts of the State to gain conviction on charges of carrying concealed weapons.

The law is too specific, the police say. It provides no one, other than officers of the law, shall have a weapon concealed upon the person. In order to gain a conviction it is necessary to prove the defendant actually had the weapon concealed from view at the time of the arrest.

What the Gangsters Know.

Gangsters and crooks know the law. They know a jury cannot convict if the weapon happens to be in an automobile at the time of arrest. They also know that if they throw the weapon away or hand it to the policeman as he approaches to arrest, they cannot be convicted. The weapon is not concealed at the time of arrest and, therefore, the State cannot make a case.

The police have tried time and again to obtain convictions under these circumstances, but have failed to get a jury to look at the case from their point of view. The jury must be convinced beyond a reasonable doubt, and the evidence does not seem to be at all convincing.

Recently William (Dinty) Colbeck, Democratic City Committeeman and leader of "Egan's Rats," and Edward J. (Jelly Roll) Hogan, former member of the State Legislature and leader of the rival Hogan gang, were tried by juries. They had been arrested at different times for having loaded automatic pistols in their automobiles. Both pleaded that the weapons were not concealed and each was found "not guilty."

A few days ago three members of the Hogan gang threw their pistols away in a public bathhouse when policemen approached them. They were arrested but warrants were refused because the weapons were not concealed upon their persons.

A "Scrap of Paper."

Circuit Attorney Sidener yesterday said that the present concealed weapon law is a "mere scrap of paper" and that if somebody would suggest amendments that will make it effective he would go to Jefferson City and lobby for their adoption.

"The present law is no better than the old city ordinance which provided a fine for carrying weapons," said he. "Under the law now in force a man can be fined $50 in lieu of being sent to the penitentiary. We frequently accept pleas and recommend fines because we know how impossible it is to obtain conviction by jury. No one would plead guilty and take a penitentiary sentence."

President Brockman of the Police Board yesterday wrote to Gov. Hyde calling attention to the fact that it is impossible to stop gun-toting with the present law, and urging amendments that would permit liberal interpretation by the State. There is no provision in the present law, the letter stated, that prohibits the carrying of sawed-off shotguns, which is the common weapon of warring Italian "bootleggers."

FAILED TO INDICT SLAYER

It was erroneously stated in the Post-Dispatch Friday that Estelle Penix, 24, a blind negress, of 1410 Morgan street, who confessed to having killed Crawford Parker, a negro, with a knife in a room at 708 North Sixteenth street, Jan. 15, was released because the Coroner and the Circuit Attorney refused to take action in the case.

The facts in the killing were presented to the grand jury last Thursday, and that body's failure to indict because of evidence that woman acted in defense of her person resulted in her release from the Carr Street Station.

ACCIDENT VERDICT IN AUTO DEATH

Peter Decker, 72, Walked Into Path of Machine, Witnesses Says.

A Coroner's verdict of accident was returned yesterday in the death of Peter Decker, 72 years old of 1535 Lyndhurst avenue, St. Louis County, who died Thursday from injuries suffered Feb. 17 when struck by an automobile at the street car loop in Wellston.

John Booth Jr. of Thomas Station, St. Louis County, driver of the automobile, his father and another man who were in the machine at the time, testified that Decker had walked into the path of the automobile.

STEINWAY

THE INSTRUMENT OF THE IMMORTALS

Josef Hofmann at his Steinway—Carnegie Hall, New York

All things considered

The factors which must be considered in the selection of a piano are different according to the needs of different purchasers.

The master pianist makes demands upon his instrument that test perfection to the utmost. A tone that is sonorous and pure, a carrying power that makes practicable the most delicate pianissimo, an action that combines power, lightness and elasticity—these are but a part of all the qualities which the artist seeks. And it seems conclusive that, for the past fifty years, nearly every pianist of the first rank has preferred the Steinway.

There are users of the piano other than the masters whose needs must be considered. In musical conservatories the lasting qualities of the piano are of extreme importance. Here, too, the Steinway is supreme. The director of a great conservatory has said, "The Steinway, in addition to its singing qualities, its unlimited power, and an action that is more than perfect, possesses an astonishing durability."

In the homes of music lovers the lasting qualities of tone and action that delight the masters are equally important. Where there are children the tone of the piano exerts an undeniable influence in the development of musical culture. It is for these reasons that the Steinway is made in styles and sizes suitable for every type of home.

Steinway & Sons have made it conveniently possible for every music lover to own a Steinway piano. Their prices probably are less than you imagine. Your old piano will be accepted as partial payment. And convenient terms of payment may be arranged that will relieve the purchase of embarrassment.

All things considered—is there a single reason why you should longer delay the purchase of your Steinway?

You may purchase a new Steinway piano from us with a cash deposit of 10%, and the balance will be extended over a period of two years. Used pianos accepted in partial exchange.

Prices $875 and Up

WANT SEPARATE VALUATION OF OLD SUBURBAN LINES

Holders of Bonds Due in April and October File Application With Public Service Commission.

READY TO TAKE LINES FROM U. R.

Applicants Would Accept Interest in Merged Systems —Would Value Suburban at $12,000,000.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 3.—Application for separate valuation of the lines and property of the old Suburban Railway Co., which went into the United Railways system, was filed with the State Public Service Commission today by holders of $6,500,000 of bonds issued by the Suburban and by the St. Louis & Meramec line, which had been taken over by the Suburban prior to the United Railways consolidation.

Applicants seek to have the Suburban property valued at $12,000,000.

This development may delay final adjudication of the United Railways valuation case, in which all of the testimony was completed last fall, and which was set for argument for next Thursday. If the record in the general valuation case is in such shape that the application of the Suburban bondholders can be granted without taking of further testimony, no delay will ensue. Otherwise, the whole case will have to be held up pending hearings.

75 Per Cent of Bondholders.

The application, received today, was filed by Sam B. Jeffries and Marion Early, as attorneys for Herman C. Stifel, Craig MacQuaid, A. C. Meyer, John L. Johnston and John H. Longmier, with the statement that these men represented 75 per cent of the Suburban bondholders.

Their petition states that $4,500,000 of Suburban bonds, issued in April, 1903, and covered by a general mortgage to the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. as trustee, and $2,000,000 of bonds of the St. Louis & Meramec, deposited with the Mississippi Valley as collateral of the other bonds, are outstanding. The $2,000,000 known as "consolidated bonds" were due in February, 1921, but an extension was granted until Oct. 1 next and the $4,500,000 bonds are due April 1 next.

The Suburban lines bought over by the United Railways were those from Fourth and Elm streets to Florissant; the Ferguson line, the Union Boulevard line, the Brentwood line and the St. Louis and Kirkwood line.

Ready to Take Lines Over.

The applicants state that they are ready either to take an interest in the reorganized United Railways in proportion to the property controlled by them through their holdings of Suburban securities, or are willing to take over the properties and operate them as a separate company in competition with the United Railways.

E. G. Connett, president of the United Gas and Electrical Engineering Co. of New York, and James T. Allison have appraised the lines in which they are interested, the petition declares, as a result of which they ask for a valuation of $12,000,000.

The applicants do not state why they had not filed their request earlier during the several years the valuation case has been pending, instead of waiting until the matter is ready for decision.

INDICTED CONSTABLE DENIES OWNING ANY TAN COAT

Witness of Fatal Accident Has Testified Driver Wore Tan Gabardine.

Edward L. Stanton, Constable for Central Township, St. Louis County, who was indicted Thursday for manslaughter in the death Feb. 5 of Louis Hine, 69, of 1346 Bayard avenue, yesterday declared that he did not appear at the inquest Feb. 9 wearing a tan gabardine coat, as stated in the Post-Dispatch, both on that date and again when the indictment was returned.

Robert Hynek, a postoffice chauffeur, who saw Hine knocked down at Easton and Bayard avenues by an automobile which sped rapidly away, testified the driver of the machine wore a brown fedora and a tan gabardine coat. When Stanton appeared at the inquest Hynek identified him. In denying he had on such a coat, Stanton declared he owned no tan coat of any description, said he was garbed in a black overcoat at the inquest, and declared he would be able to produce numerous witnesses who could account for his movements the entire evening on which Hine met death.

Woman to Address M. U. Alumni.

OUTLOOK FOR CUT IN CAR FARE POOR, FIGURES INDICATE

Data in Commission's Hands Shows Only Forced Economy in U. R. Operation Can Bring Back 5-Cent Rate.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 3.—St. Louisans may as well resign themselves to indefinite continuation of the 7-cent fare, or a higher one, unless more economical operation of the United Railways is forced," figures and other information obtained from the Missouri Public Service Commission indicate. As for a 5-cent fare, that is even more remote in the future than in the past, even should the city succeed in persuading the Public Service Commission to fix the valuation of the railways property as low as $29,805,956, the figure demanded by Henry S. Caulfield, Special City Counselor in the valuation case. Should the company prevail on the commission to adopt its views of valuation, which would rate the property at 70 to 100 million dollars, the fare will range somewhere between 8 and 10 cents.

Expenditures $16,702,400 in 1922.

The company under the management of Receiver Rolla Wells, spent approximately $16,702,400 in operating the system and administering its business in 1922, according to figures prepared for the Public Service Commissioners which left a net income of $3,465,486 available to pay return on investment out of the total revenue for the period of approximately $20,167,506 (which includes both operating and non-operating revenue).

This was a return of 6.93 per cent on the approximately $50,000,000 valuation on the property, fixed by the commission's engineers, as against at least seven per cent which the commission seeks to allow utilities to earn at the present time. This income would have meant only 6.30 per cent return on an investment of $55,000,000 or 5.78 on $60,000,000. On $30,000,000 it would have meant 11 per cent.

Had a six-cent fare been in effect in 1922, with the same operating conditions and the same expenses permitted by the commission, the company would have had left for income only $896,635, for a one-cent cut in fare would have meant a decrease of $2,568,851 in revenue. This $896,635 would have enabled a return of 1.97 on $50,000,000, and of slightly less than 3 per cent on $30,000,000.

Would Have Cut Revenue $5,137,702

Had the fare been cut to five cents, a decrease in revenue of $5,137,702 and a deficit of $1,672,212 would have been created, which, of course, would have meant that no return whatever could have been paid on any valuation.

Should the commission go as low as $30,000,000 in valuing the property, it is an outside possibility that a fare decrease of one-fourth cent might be allowed, if the operating conditions of 1922 still prevail.

The only deduction from these figures, which are authoritative, is that the margin between expenses and revenue will have to be increased by the company before the commission will order a fare decrease. But how can this margin be created?

Members of the commission decline to discuss this matter analytically in advance of determination of the valuation case, which is set for argument next Thursday. No movement to force more economical operation, or which would bring about any other fare reduction development is in progress or incubating around the commission. The atmosphere thereabouts is not very conducive to hope for relief. For the impression is unmistakable that anything approaching a five-cent fare is regarded as beyond all realm of immediate possibility.

Company's Figures Accepted.

The commissioners accept the figures of the company's books, with certain minor corrections, as telling a true story of its opeations, and regard operation of the company as reasonably efficient, in the absence of direct charges to the contrary.

Both the commissioners and representatives of the receivers have indignantly resented the charge, freely made in certain quarters, that operation of the railways will continue to consume the bulk of the revenue as long as the receivership continues, and that the receivership is being used as a screen behind which high fares can be obtained with which to create a gilt-edge property to turn over to the reorganizers instead of straining toward economy as a means to cheapen the burden of the car-rider.

An analysis of disposition of the 7-cent fare shows that the largest item in the list is for wages of motormen and conductors, who get 2 of the 7 cents. Their salaries now are said to range from $90 to $156 a month, according to the commission with their highest paid platform men receiving 65 cents an hour. Once or twice when it has appeared that the commission might order a reduction in fare, which might have been followed by a wage reduction by the company the motormen and conductors have hired attorneys and organized delegations to attend meetings of the commission, to protest against any such action. On one recent occasion they sent Edward W. Foristel, Republican politician and lawyer, here to that end, flanked by other labor leaders of more or less political activity.

Power absorbs 7 mills, taxes 6, depreciation $1,500,000 a year, 5, maintenance of way labor 3.6, general labor 2½, general offices, a like proportion, material 2, maintenance of material and equipment, 1.7, addition of other smaller items leaves slightly more than 1 cent for return.

Attaches of the commission see likelihood of sufficient decrease in cost of coal or material, to lower the power and material cost items in the near future, and the company has shown no disposition to reduce wages.

And why should it risk the worry and trouble of the strike which a wage reduction likely would bring, when the commission will allow it to earn an income which will obviate that unpleasant contingency.

When the city asked for a fare reduction last November, it predicted that fuel costs would decrease this year, that traffic will increase and suggested that the company could operate more efficiently by rerouting cars to shorten mileage, by inaugurating a skip stop system and by using more improved methods of fare collection. It also was urged that $1,500,000 a year is too great an allowance for depreciation, a reduction of $500,000 per year on that item.

The commission's order being asked for on that item, in December, continuing the 7-cent fare, scouted the suggested avenues of economy, rejecting all.

EVEN LEGAL POINT IS IMPOSSIBLE WITH LOADED DICE

ELECTRIC MAGNET USED WITH TABLE

However, Court Decides the Point Is Gumberts' Liquor Was Seized Illegally and Orders It Returned.

With loaded dice it is just as hard to score a legal point as it is to score a "craps" point. This was demonstrated in Circuit Judge Wurdeman's court at Clayton yesterday when Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Stanton tried to prove that the "crooked" dice and the electric magnet, taken in a recent raid at Mark Gumberts' Fauna Flora resort on Manchester road, did not constitute gambling paraphernalia.

"You see, your honor," pleaded Stanton, customers of Gumberts who thought they were gambling were merely contributing to a 'sure-thing' proposition. There was no element of chance involved as there is in gambling."

"I don't understand your point," said the Judge. "Perhaps I am not well enough versed in the art of craps shooting."

"Bones Rolled" in Court.

Thereupon the Assistant Prosecuting Attorney produced in court the dice outfit taken in the raid. He attached the magnet to the under side of the top of a table, attached an electric battery rigged up with a button so that the wire running into the button touched the floor, and then threw a pair of bone dice across the table.

"You see, my point is 'eight,'" he said. "Now watch how impossible it is for me to make that point."

He placed his foot upon the button, which caused the battery to charge the magnet with electricity, and once more "rolled the bones." The dice rolled to where the magnet was concealed and stopped suddenly on double six, which, in the vernacular of the dice gambler, is "craps." Then he rolled them again, his foot still upon the button, and rolled "two," which likewise is craps. Then he rolled a "seven," indicating that he was just absolutely not "right."

Judge Sees the Point.

"Now watch," continued Stanton, as he removed his foot from the button and rolled the dice once more. "See? I rolled an 'eight,' and that happens to be my point. Do you get me?"

"I see your point," said the Judge.

But Stanton failed to score, his legal point, because that was not an issue of the case. Gumberts' place had been raided and the dice and liquor confiscated on a search warrant describing gambling paraphernalia. The raiders had taken the dice and magnet along because they had heard reports that many persons from St. Louis had been losing large sums of money at "craps" in the resort.

Thomas Rowe Sr., counsel for Gumberts, had asked for an order of court returning the liquors to Gumberts on the ground that they were not specified in the search warrant.

Liquor Ordered Returned.

The question of the "loaded" dice was brought up when Attorney Rowe declared that the only dice used at the Gumberts place were transparent ones, a sample of which he produced. He said the bone dice were not used for gambling, but merely for amusement. He expressed the opinion that persons who rolled dice for money would not use the bone variety. The transparent ones were the regulation kind used in "craps" games, he contended.

However, as the search warrant did not mention anything about liquor the Judge ordered the 40 bottles of so-called home brew and two partly filled wine bottles, taken in the raid, returned to Gumberts.

Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Stanton still has under advisement the issuance of a warrant charging Gumberts' with setting up a gambling device.

STRENGTH SHOWN BY SECURITIES ON STOCK EXCHANGE

Plentiful Supplies of Money Have Remained Available Despite Recent Moderate Increase in Rates—Cotton Upturn.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 3.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted weekly financial review says:

"Continued reports of great industrial activity and further advances in commodity prices coincide with fresh demonstrations of strength in securities. It has been apparent, meanwhile, that plentiful supplies of money have remained available despite recent moderate increases in rates. Whatever the basis may be for current security values, it is clear that the industrial improvement is most impressive. Thus the Federal Reserve Board points out that its index of production in basic industries was 6 per cent higher in January than in December and that it reached a point exceeded only in May, 1917. The gains have been, furthermore, comprehensive, including such activities as steel production and the consumption of cotton by the country's factories. Lumber shipments have reached the highest figure on record, thus confirming other evidences of the maintenance of building construction at an extraordinarily high rate. In addition the current reports indicate further gains, steel output still proceeding on the increase and railroad car loadings still exceeding all previous performances for this season of the year.

Strength of Cotton.

"Firmness in commodity prices is the result both of increased demand and diminished stocks. Thus in the case of copper it is clear that the post-armistice supplies of the metal have been greatly reduced, while the demand for the metal on account of building construction and the mechanical and electrical industries has been markedly increased. In cotton, the high rate of domestic consumption has emphasized the effects of the small carryover and the small crop, thus lending strength to the conclusion that supplies will be scanty before deliveries can be made from the new crop. This situation explains, of course, the relatively greater strength in the old crop months. October of the new crop reaching only about 26 cents during the past week, while May of the old crop touched 30 2-3 cents. In wheat the situation is somewhat different, the spread between the old and new crop months diminishing. The explanation lies in the fact that reports of crop damage which are now coming in from the Southwest are encouraging bull opinion in the new crop, while the existing statistical position acts as a restraint on the bear deliveries.

"As spring approaches with employment full, more is being heard of a prospective shortage of labor. There are those who hold that the advent open weather will result in a drawing off of labor from the steel and allied industries, and that competition for help and advancing wages will be the result. Certainly there is much to be said in support of such a conclusion. Other observers feel that the condition can be met if attention is given to improvements in the production methods and plans are taken to explain the situation to employees. They maintain, in other words, that the solution of the difficulty may be found in better management. It is true that industrial history offers many examples of higher labor costs absorbed by improved methods. One favorable factor with the situation is the comparatively low rate at which the cost of living has been rising.

The Foreign Situation.

"Coming developments in the foreign situation continue to e anyone's guess. Little can be said with regard to the outlook in the Ruhr other than that the trial of strength is still in progress. One unfortunate feature of the matter is that several of the countries of Central Europe are making real efforts to restore a sound financial basis, but can obtain only limited outside help because of the uncertainty over restorations. Poland and Czecho-Slovakia both have notified this country of their desire to refund their debts, while Austria has succeeded in floating an issues of Treasury bills at London and is proceeding with a program of financial reforms. These instances reveal, however, an underlying tendency and show what might be expected if a settlement with Germany could be obtained. Negotiations with the Turks continue to drag along and to furnish a puzzle to everyone. Strength in sterling has been well maintained.

"Activities and strength in the railroad shares, long overdue, in the opinion of many observers, was the feature of an unusually active short session. Gains of a point or more were common. Much of this activity in the rails was attributed to the feeling among traders that for a period of nine months at least the carriers will operate free from the menace of congressional adverse legislation. Whatever the cause, there was unmistakable evidence of a shifting of interest from the industrial into the aforementioned group. Industrials were subjected to considerable profit-taking, especially those issues which have been bid up briskly within the last few days, such as the coppers and steels. For the most part net changes were, however, confined to small fractions. Bonds were active and firmer.

French Exchange Active.

"The French exchange market shook off some of its lethargy this morning and with respect to French francs and allied currencies, at least, showed considerable activity. Little business was transacted in the London market, but good local buying of francs brought an advance of 5 points to 4.12 cents after which the price receded ¼ a point. Belgian francs and Italian lire were also firmer, but sterling continued dull and practically unchanged at 4.70¾. German marks also were unchanged at .0045 of a cent. Other continental rates were generally firmer.

"Another strong market for cotton brought further new high records for practically every active future contract traded in. May contracts, which closed at 30.59 cents yesterday opened at 30.80 cents, but later declined a few points on profit-taking over the week-end. At a late price of 30.70 cents May was 11 points higher. Wheat, on the other hand, moved in the opposite direction. There was scattered liquidation and bear pressure in anticipation of an unfavorable Government report of grain in farmers' hands, to be issued next week. At a late price of $1.17 the May future was 1¼ cents lower.

"The weekly statement of the Clearing House shows a deficit in reserve of $835,660; aggregate reserve standing at $527,070,360. This compares however, with a deficit of $17,628,000 last week. The improvement in the reserve was brought about by a decrease of $23,476,000 in loans and discounts together with a reduction of $11,121,000 in demand deposits. Reserve bank credit increased $16,544,000 to a total of $509,644,000.

SPOT COTTON 30.90c AT CLOSE OF WEEK

NEW YORK, March 3.—While all months made new high records for the season in the cotton market today, the feature was the increasing activity and relative strength of new crop deliveries. This was attributed to covering by shorts, trade buying and a shifting of commission house interest from the old to the earlier new crop months owing to the recent increase in their discounts and prospects for further rains in the Southwest. October contracts sold up 26.82, or 91 points net higher, and closed at 26.77, with the general market closing firm at net advance of 15 to 67 points. Old crop months were 15 to 31 points and the active new crop positions about 64 to 67 points net higher.

The market opened firm at an advance of 7 to 26 points on bullish overnight spot advices from the South, favorable week-end reviews of the cotton goods situation, and reports that private returns indicated a total ginning for the season of only 9,700,000 bales. After showing net advances of about 20 to 25 points for the old crop months, the market eased under realizing for over the week end and scattered Southern selling accompanied by rather conflicting reports from the spot markets. There were reactions in consequence, but offerings of new crop deliveries were quickly absorbed and the strength of October and December contracts had a sustaining influence on the general list. The reported small private cotton figures were considered an emphasizing the probability of a very strong statistical position at the end of this season which should be felt by early new crop deliveries, in case there should be any delay in new crop receipts. Trade interests were credited with selling May and July against purchases of October, while there was active covering by both October and December shorts. May sold as high as 30.84 and July touched 29.85, but the close was a few points off from the best on the old crop deliveries. Some of the private reports reaching here from the South this morning said that more cotton was offering and that ginning was high. But most of them reported scarcity of supplies and firm prices.

Foreign Exchange

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 3.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly foreign exchange review today, says:

"Sterling moved within an extremely narrow range all through the past week with the exception of a period of weakness on Monday, when demand was under pressure and sold down on $4.69½. Later sterling had rate during the remainder of the week when variations were extremely narrow and for this year. There was a display of strength in French exchange when sterling was weak. French exchange in the later trading was under moderate pressure, although its recession was only slight and without importance. Italian exchange moved in an extremely narrow range, being in sufficient supply to meet business requirements. There was a display of strength in Norwegian exchange attributed to the payment of obligations due by this Government, but doubt was expressed as to the balance of this year's reason and the later movement seemed to confirm the doubt generally. The market showed a reactionary tendency after Monday. Silver exchange was strong features during the greater part of the week, but it also receded at the end of the week. Canadian after a dull week again became lively.

"The foreign exchange market shook off some of its lethargy this morning and with respect to French francs and allied currencies at least, showed considerable activity. Little business was transacted in the London market, but good local buying of francs brought an advance of 5 points to 6.12 cents, after which the price receded one-half point. Belgian francs and Italian lire were also firmer, sterling continued dull and practically unchanged at $4.70¾. German marks also were unchanged at .0045 of a cent. Other continental rates were generally firmer."

MINING STOCKS FEATURE OF SESSION ON THE CURB

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 3.—Copper stocks and the mining stocks generally came in for the bulk of attention during today's short session on the curb exchange.

The demand for the copper shares was keener than at any other time during the week and new high records were frequent. Ohio Copper was exceptionally strong, advancing almost 10 points, and Arizona Globe reached 60, against the close price of 52. New Dominican Copper class A was heavily traded in and Independence Lead crossed 40.

Household Products reached a new high above 38. Schulte Stores, although somewhat lower on the day, was up nearly two points from the close last week.

WHEAT PRICES DOWN ON LOCAL EXCHANGE

Grain prices broke at the week-end session on the Merchants' Exchange, wheat loss extending to approximately 2c and corn to 1c. Precipitation in section of winter wheat belt where drought has prevailed was said to be the prime motive behind the decline.

In the local cash grain market Saturday No. 2 red wheat was 1c lower, No. 3 red 1c to 2c off and No. 4 was steady. Buyers waited until near the close, but with the market finally established, offerings were cleaned up fairly well, the demand coming from shippers, local mills and reshanders. Hard wheat was offered 1c lower. There were only a few scattered cars of yellow and off grades but the demand was light. Cash corn was 1c to 1c off, being influenced by plentiful supplies and declines in futures. Mills and the local trade bought yellow but there was little inquiry otherwise. Demand for oats was narrow and prices ranged off ½c to 1¼c. Receipts were light. Rye steady and local trade nearly cleaned up everything.

A sharp setback in wheat and also corn took place in the early period. The decline was credited in part at least to the bearish interpretation of statistical wheat situation made by the head of a large Chicago grain house yesterday. Liverpool opened ¼@½d higher and closed ½@¾d lower. Rain was reported in winter wheat belt and this was said to have prompted selling.

May wheat opened at the low point of the day, $1.11⅛. Sent wheat $1.10⅛. May corn 76½c. July corn, 75¾c. and Sept. corn 76⅜c.

The three Northwestern markets combined Saturday had 770 cars of wheat, compared with 353 a week ago and 596 last year. Minneapolis today receiving 275 cars, Duluth 62 and Winnipeg 40.

Local wheat receipts, which were 94,800 bushels, compared with 79,200 a week ago and 108,000 last year, included 36 cars local and 43 through. Corn receipts, which were 1,180,000 bushels, compared with 94,900 a week ago and 65,000 last year, included 63 cars local and 23 through. Oats receipts, which were 666,000 bushels, compared with 46,000 a week ago and 60,000 last year, included 6 cars local and 13 through. Hay receipts were 212 tons local and 122 through.

Stocks in St. Louis public elevators Saturday were 646,244 bushels of wheat, 1,653,653 bushels of corn, 645,830 bushels of oats, 1,000 bushels of barley and 1,000 bushels of rye.

Primary receipts of wheat were lighter than a week ago and 1,420,000 bushels lighter than a year ago, being 701,000 bushels.

Primary shipments of wheat were lighter than a week ago and 1,420,000 bushels lighter than a year ago, being 418,000 bushels. SPECIAL SESSION AT MANILA

(Copyright, 1923.)

MANILA, March 3.—The Philippine Legislature having adjourned after two special sessions and one 100-day regular session without having provided $3,000,000 gold for more revenues for projects included in the appropriation bill, Governor General Leonard Wood has decided to call another special session of that body for May or June, prior to his departure for China.

Only econimic measures will be submitted at the proposed special session, according to the announcement. The list of measures will include the granting of several 40-year rubber plantation franchises on public lands on the Mandino peninsula, where half the lands are suitable for rubber production and where will grow the entire rubber needs of the world. The proposed plantation franchises will be 50,000 acres each and island capital only will be engaged in the enterprise.

LECTURER TELLS OF THE WONDERS OF MALAY

Bamboo Grows an Inch an Hour—Snakes, Lizards and Pests Fall From Ceilings of Huts.

Carveth Wells, a British railroad engineer who spent six years in Malay building railroads, and who says he finds he can make more money talking about his profession than practicing it, told members of the Wednesday Club and a number of young school children yesterday at the club auditorium, 506 Westminster place, that bamboo grows an inch an hour in the torrid jungles of Java and that before shaving in the morning one first has to shave the mold off the mirror, for it grows several inches in the night.

Wells spoke for more than an hour to his predominantly juvenile audience, explaining to them the customs, geography, dress, religion and incidental pecularities of the Malay people. He illustrated his talk with slides, and his manner, jocular but convincing, held the interest of the boys and girls, whose unusual silence and an occasional murmur of appreciation indicated comprehension.

"We had difficulty in getting men to go with us into the jungle," Wells said in starting his talk on "My Six Years' Experience in the Jungle of Malay." "The natives fear ghosts. We got them together at a bull fight, however, and after offering them enormous wages—about 20 cents a day—got our crew together." A bull fight in Java is not like a bull fight, in Spain. In Java two bulls fight instead of a bull and a man.

Wells said in Java, which is the largest island in the group, there was a population of more than 36,000,000, and explained that it took five weeks to get there from San Francisco. The religion is Mohammedanism, he said.

Tales of this land where everything is topsy-turvy were told, which include a story of birds that thrive on a diet of strychnine and deer which never grow to a height of more than seven inches. "You can eat a deer or two at a meal," he said. "White is the mourning color, and the male bird usually hatches the eggs."

The Malays wear many bright colors, and Wells demonstrated their fashions, trying several costumes on a number of the boys and girls. Several garments of hand-made batik work of intricate Oriental design were donned by the grinning youngsters, and Wells dressed in the costumes of a Beau Brummel.

"Mohammedans believe they won't go to heaven if they are nude," he said, "and so they undress and dress without undressing." He showed how this was done by slipping one garment on over the head while the other was being dropped and stepped out of. "They even bathe in their clothes," he said.

Bride's Teeth Filed.

Wells told of a Malay custom of filing the bride's teeth the day before her marriage. "One came to me with a terrible toothache," he said. "I got quite a reputation as a doctor by rendering first aid from my medicine chest."

Life was lonesome, Wells said, up the river away from even the Malay villages. "For nine months I didn't see the sky, so dense was the jungle," he said. "I lived in a thatched hut, but it was necessary to erect a tent inside the hut to prevent the snakes, lizards, roaches and other pests, some very dangerous, from falling out of the leafy roofing onto our beds or dining tables."

Wells is in St. Louis at the invitation of the Community Forum, and will speak on the same subject at Sheldon Memorial, 3648 Washington boulevard, tonight.

OPEN VERDICT ON SHOOTING OF JAMES KIELY IN HIS HOME

Wife of Slain Man Unable to Give a Description or Tell Number of Assailants.

A Coroner's jury investigating the case of James Kiely, 87 years old, of 2301 North Fourteenth street, a saloon keeper, who was shot to death by robbers as he and his wife entered their home last Wednesday night, returned a verdict yesterday of homicide by parties unknown.

Besides Mrs. Kiely, Mathias Besch, a baker of 814 Lesperance street, was the only witness who could throw light on the crime. He said that he had rushed from his shop upon hearing a number of pistol shots and had seen four men leave the Kiely garage. Mrs. Kiely, who was rendered unconscious by blows, said she could not give a description of her husband's slayers and did not know how many men had been in the house.

Poet in Prison for Debt.

THE Massinger comedy was written in 1625 and performed in 1632. Its author became Fletcher's chief partner after Beaumont retired from playwriting. According to some ingenious critics, Massinger and Fletcher were the true authors of two plays once attributed to Shakspeare—"Henry VIII" and "Two Noble Kinsmen." Massinger was not unacquainted with the subject of debts, for the first notice we have of him after he left Oxford in 1606 is a petition begging the manager Henslowe for five pounds on account, to get the poet and two friends out of prison.

According to the story, Frank Wellborn, a prodigal, has been ruined by the machinations of his uncle, Sir Giles Overreach. This, "cruel extortioner," to quote from the playbill, has robbed and plundered ruthlessly to gain a fortune with which to buy a nobleman in marriage for his daughter, Margaret. Wellborn plots with a wealthy widow, Lady Allworth, to make Sir Giles believe they are to be married; with the prospect of eventually looting the Allworth estates, Sir Giles pays Wellborn's debts and sets him up afresh. At the end Lady Allworth marries Lord Lovell, whom Sir Giles had picked for his son-in-law, and Margaret elopes with a page. By fighting the devil with fire, the miser is robbed of the papers which place Wellborn at his mercy, whereupon Sir Giles goes insane.

Comedy relief is supplied by the characters of Greedy, a hungry Justice of the Peace; Marrall, a term driver; Furnace, a cook; Tapwell, an alehouse keeper; Froth, his wife, and many others. In Mr. Hampden's company are Mary Hall, Mabel Moore, Elsie Herndon Kearns, Ernest Rowan, William Sauter, Edwin Cushman, Allen Thomas, P. J. Kelly, C. Normand Hammond, Charles Brokaw, LeRoi Operti, Reynolds Evans, Margaret Barnstead and Ruth Chorpenning.

W. C. Fields, Lester Allen.

TWO acts of 20 scenes are comprised in the present version of the "Scandals," for the cast of which have been recruited Paul Whiteman's Cafe de Paris Orchestra, W. C. Fields, Lester Allen, the Lightner Girls and Alexander, Richard Bold... Pearl Legay, Charlie Wilkens, the Argentine Dancers, the Temple Quartet, Olive Vaughn, Myra Cullen, Edna May Reed, Peggy Dolan and numerous others, besides a chorus which the press agent celebrates as "an ensemble of young beauties."

This show was produced on Aug... 28 last at the Globe Theater in New York. Whenever anything of humorous intent falls flat, said the New York World reviewer on that occasion, "there is almost always a relief expedition ready to dance in and save the day." The lyrics are by Budd de Sylva and E. Ray Goetz, the music by George Gershwin, and the sketches and dialogue by George White, Andy Rice and W. C. Fields.

One of the most successful of musical comedies, "Tangerine," with Julia Sanderson, is due next week at the Shubert-Jefferson. If Willie Hedge can escape from Chicago he will appear there the following week and then will come, on March 25, Eddie Cantor and his Winter Garden show "Make It Snappy," Thurston, who does tricks of magic, holds forth next week at the American, and will be followed in order by "Shuffle Along," an all-negro musical comedy which will remain two weeks; Jobyna Golden's comedy, "Thank U;" George M. Cohan's comedy, "So This Is London;" Frank Craven's "The First Year," and Booth Tarkington's "Mirlitor Antonia," with Otis Skinner.

DRAMA AND THE MOVIES

PART FOUR. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, MARCH 4, 1928. PAGES 1—12

Massinger's "New Way to Pay Old Debts," One of Seven Plays in Week's Series—George White's "Scandals" at American.

THAT extortioner of magnificent villainy, Sir Giles Overreach, hero of Philip Massinger's Jacobean drama, "A New Way to Pay Old Debts," was clapped back within the covers of a book after Edwin Booth played the role in 1886. This season the famous usurer is once more at large, thanks to the enterprise of Walter Hampden, who will present the blank-verse comedy Wednesday night at the Shubert-Jefferson. The part of Sir Giles was a favorite one with Edmund Kean, whose emotional tempest, in the concluding mad-scene, is said to have terrified not only the audience but the members of his company. This is one of seven different plays, five of them Shakspeare's, which Mr. Hampden and his company will offer during the week.

The American's production is George White's "Scandals of 1922," fourth of the series of revues established by the diminutive dancer in 1919. It is described as a dancing show which travels almost entirely on its feet. The Woodward Players, at the Garrick, are undertaking that bloodcurdling melodrama, "The Thirteenth Chair," by Bayard Veiller. The Orpheum's bill includes not only Gus Van and Joe Schenk, for several seasons featured as singers in Ziegfeld's "Follies," but Bessie Barriscale, screen star, in a playlet called "Picking Peaches," and May Wirth, a famous equestrienne.

The repertory for Mr. Hampden's second visit to St. Louis is announced as follows: Tonight, "The Taming of the Shrew;" tomorrow, Thursday and Saturday nights, "Hamlet"; Tuesday night, "Macbeth," Wednesday matinee, "The Merchant of Venice;" Wednesday night, "A New Way to Pay Old Debts;" Friday night, Charles Rann Kennedy's "A Servant in the House," and Saturday matinee, "Romeo and Juliet."

Laurette Taylor's Fine Acting in "Humoresque"

New YORK, March 3.

CRITICAL comment on Fannie Hurst's "Humoresque," produced Tuesday night at the Vanderbilt Theater, with Laurette Taylor in the principal role, is that here is emotional acting incomparably subtle and beautiful, in a play that has a moving first act, an excellent second one, and a third that turned the audience away cold.

The scene is in the downtown Jewish quarter—a single room that did for kitchen, dining room and bedroom, with social life mainly via the fire escape. Sarah Kantor, played by Miss Taylor, is the mother of four, overflowing with love for her own and all other children, and with ambition for little Leon, already destined in her prophetic heart to be a great violinist.

Miss Taylor's is a creation of great virtuosity and of far greater spirit. Her walk and gestures are racial. Cooking a birthday cake, humorously scolding her unruly brood, of fighting for the musician's future she is the eternal Madonna. Most notable of all is the maternal courage, which finds no obstacle too great, no sacrifice too deep.

Sixteen years later Leon has won fame and fortune, and Sarah is still the loyal, humorous and astutely managing mother. It is now wartime, and Leon feels the call to service. But Sarah is not moved to heroism. She fights with abundant resource to bind her son over to a fiddling tour—but he goes to Plattsburg.

In the third act Leon is called to the steamer to embark for France, and Sarah is stricken with fear. But it is too painfully craven, when one remembers the woman of the first act. One feels that the play as Miss Hurst has written it goes wrong. Miss Taylor's performance should be seen by every lover of subtle character acting. When a production has so much to offer, what does it matter if there is no play—or, worse, a bad one?

No Dramatic Openings This Week; Decline in Attendance Responsible.

FOR the first time this season New York faces a week with no openings in the theaters. A falling off in attendance has been instrumental in scaring away the contenders. Theater rentals have tumbled since the business slump, and several shows have succeeded in extracting reductions from lessors and owners who have been forced to cut the percentage or have dark houses on their hands.

Forest Emerson Browne's new play, first tried out under the name of "Ladies for Sale," has been renamed "Sold." Frank Conroy and Robert Strange play two men who make a deal for a starving Viennese lady, impersonated by Carlotta Monterey. "Partners Again," by Montague Glass, is showing in London, with Bobby Leonard and Paul White as Potash and Perlmutter. George M. Cohan's "Two Men and a Girl" will open in Chicago March 11, with Alan Dinehart, Ruth Shepley and

What They Are Doing in the Movie Studios

THAT remarkable film, "The Mystery Box," which explains the fundamental principles of radio and which shows Post-Dispatch Radio Station K S D in moving pictures is on the programs this week at the Columbia Theater in St. Louis and the Majestic Theater, East St. Louis. It has just terminated a most successful run at the Missouri. The workings of the mysterious forces of radio are shown in most interesting moving diagrams. After seeing these no radio fan need any longer be mystified as to how the broadcast programs are received on his home set. The pictures of K S D station show every phase of the broadcasting operations in the power plant on the roof and in the studio from which concerts are sent out on the second floor of the Post-Dispatch Building.

Richard Barthelmess has finished "The Bright Shawl." His next vehicle, "The Fighting Blade," will be commenced soon. This is a romantic story of the Cromwellian period by Beulah Marie Dix. Barthelmess originally planned to go to England to do the exteriors of "The Fighting Blade," but this plan was finally called off. Most of the dashing tale of swashbuckling adventure will be done in a New York studio.

There has been considerable conjecture in film circles as to whether or not Hugo Ballin will stick to costume plays. He has just completed an elaborate film version of Thackeray's "Vanity Fair," using an all star cast headed by his wife, Mabel Ballin. Mr. Ballin has also produced "Jane Eyre" and other costume plays recently. The fact that he is a painter—and was for years one of the most prominent in this line—leads film critics to believe he will continue to go to the colorful old romances for his screen offerings. Ballin, as a painter, won the Prix de Rome and various other Continental and American artistic honors. His "Vanity Fair" is soon to be released by Goldwyn.

Mary Alden, character actress, has just received a letter and photograph from a deaf mute, who states that he is an ardent Mary Alden fan, and has been lip-reading her spoken titles in pictures for years. He adds that he believes the screen holds many possibilities for properly equipped deaf mutes. "The silent drama," he states, "should be the place for the silent thinker."

Ruth Roland, known as "the serial queen," is to abandon this type of offering for a time, and will do regular feature productions. She recently completed her Pathe serial, "Ruth's Millions."

Having completed his hunchback role in the Aric von Stroheim picture, "Merry Go Round," George Hackathorne, character actor, is to do his first straight part in some time. He will play one of the featured roles in "The Atonement." Hackathorne's last four roles have had to do with crippled characters. He says he will be glad to walk erectly on two good sturdy legs again.

Hedda Hopper will return to the United States soon, to resume her motion picture activities, probably in Hollywood. She sends word that she is bringing several new gowns from Paris. Her tour has included London, Paris, St. Moritz, Nice and the Riviera.

'Java Head,' 'The Flirt,' 'Mad Love,' 'Robin Hood' on Local Screen Bills

"The Custard Cup" and Martin Johnson's Latest Jungle Pictures Are Also Among the Week's Attractions.

"Java Head," a picturization of a Joseph Hergesheimer novel, is the week's feature at the Missouri Theater. The scenes are laid in old Salem Town and in China, and the story deals with the trials and fortunes of a young sea captain and a Chinese girl of high station, whom he marries in order to save her from assassins. He brings his bride to his home town, where his old sweetheart is awaiting him. His interest in his Chinese wife lapses, and when the latter awakens love in the heart of an opium smoker, dramatic developments ensue.

Leatrice Joy plays the colorful role of Taou Yen, the Chinese wife. Jacqueline Logan is seen as Nettie Vollar and Albert Roscoe plays Gerit Ammidon, the leading masculine role. Raymond Hatton and George Fawcett have important parts.

Yerkes' Flotilla Band is held over for another week and will take its place as the headliner on the musical end of the program.

"The Flirt," Universal's widely-heralded super-production, adapted to the screen from Booth Tarkington's story of the same name, is the leading attraction at the Rivoli. Booth Tarkington enjoys the unique distinction of winning two Pulitzer prizes in succession, the first for the "Magnificent Ambersons," the second for "Alice Adams," his latest book.

"The Flirt" is about folks—typical American folks of the kind who ask a blessing at the dinner table and dress up on Sunday and laugh with life through tears. Cora, "The Flirt," begins her conquest for hearts and her quest for power. Eileen Percy interprets the role. Laura, her sister, is established as the sacrificing girl of hidden emotions. Helen Jerome Eddy has this part. George Nichols is the father. The unfolding of the story finds him battling against Cora's selfish greed and brutal pride for enough money to keep his home together and his name clean. Buddy Messenger, a 12-year-old youngster, in the part of "Hedrick," the impish little pest, has an important role.

Pola Negri in "Mad Love" is the attraction at the Delmonte Theater for the week.

In this picture, it is said, Pola Negri gathers up into one strand, in her impersonation of Sappho, all the wiles and lures that centuries of practice have taught to womankind and spreads the net successfully over two brothers. Of the first she tires and drives him out of his mind. The second comes to mean the whole world to her and she strives to hold him even when she learns that she was the cause of his brother's mental condition. Her lover flees from her and marries the innocent girl to whom he was engaged, but the lure of Sappho brings him back to her, even from the wedding feast, like a moth to a candle.

The St. Louis Club Orchestra is held over for another week.

Douglas Fairbanks in "Robin Hood" has its St. Louis premiere at regular prices at the Grand Central, West End Lyric and Capitol this week. The picture was first shown here at advanced prices at the Pershing, where it ran three weeks.

Few dramas in the history of the screen have enjoyed the popularity of Fairbanks' classic, as is evidenced in the case of Los Angeles. The picture is now well into its fifth month in that city.

The musical score authorized by Fairbanks is played at all three theaters and the presentation otherwise is identical with that introduced at the Pershing. At the Grand Central only, James Stevens, Municipal Opera baritone, sings "Oh, Promise Me," from Reginald de Koven's operetta, "Robin Hood." With the exception of Stevens' offering, all short film subjects and specialties are eliminated at the three houses, owing to the unusual

Easy Way to Remove Freckles and Eruptions
Some women have skin of such texture they occasionally are annoyed by the sudden appearance of freckles, slight eruptions or fine lines. March winds usually play havoc with such skins. If one will procure an ounce of ordinary mercolized wax at any drug store, apply a little before retiring, like cold cream, she can easily overcome the trouble. When the wax is washed off next morning, almost invisible flaky skin particles come with it. The entire outer cuticle soon is removed in this way, with all its defects. No bleach could so effectually remove freckles or blemishes. The entire surface is smooth, clear, fresh looking. No harm or inconvenience accompanies this treatment.

This Laxative Works Fine on Old People

Thousands have kept themselves healthy with Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin

ADVANCING age with its subdued ambitions and strivings could be made very happy if only good health accompanied it, and the basis of good health; as everyone learns upon reaching the age of 60, is the regular daily movement of the bowels. If it can be effected through the food you eat, the water you drink and the exercise you take, so much the better. But if nature will not operate it must be assisted or sickness will follow. Neglected constipation causes the blood pressure to go up 28 per cent, and that is the forerunner of hardening of the arteries. It makes rheumatism and gout worse, too.

The ideal constipation remedy for people of advancing years is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a vegetable compound of Egyptian senna and pepsin with pleasant-tasting aromatics. It is gentle and mild, and does not cramp or gripe. It is a mistake to think you need a violent salt or powder or pill, calomel, coal-tar drugs and such things. They purge and weaken you, and their reaction tends to make you more constipated than before.

Now try the milder method. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin does not lose its good effect with repeated use, and increased doses are unnecessary. Mrs. E. M. Burgess of Enfield, N. C., who is 73, keeps herself in good health with it, and Mr. Charles Chorman of Stapleton, Staten Island, N. Y., wasted fifteen years and considerable money on other remedies before finding steady relief with Syrup Pepsin.

Use Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin yourself the next time you suffer from constipation, biliousness, headache, sleeplessness, indigestion, piles or night cramps. Many thousands of elderly people use nothing else, and it costs them less than a cent a dose. Druggists have sold it successfully for 30 years, and it is the most widely bought family laxative in the world.

ANY FAMILY MAY TRY IT FREE
Thousands of parents are asking themselves, "Where can I find a trustworthy laxative that anyone in the family can use when constipated?" I urge you to try Syrup Pepsin. I will gladly provide a liberal free sample bottle, sufficient for an adequate test. Write me where to send it. Address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 515 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois. Do it now!

Warbled Between Trips.

IT is said that Van and Schenk, headliners at the Orpheum, began their careers as warblers while working as motorman and conductor on the same street car in Brooklyn. They will be heard here in familiar bits of close harmony. Miss Barriscale's act was written by her husband, Howard Hickman, who appears in it. She impersonates a Southern belle of the Civil War, a slangy and red-headed telephone girl, a Spanish coquette and a girl of today. Miss Wirth, representing the fifth generation of an Australian circus family, will perform feats of the tanbark ring. Others on this bill are "D. D. H.," a monologist; Les Gellis, French gymnasts; Joe Bennett and Hector. Theodore Roberts, noted actor of "old man" character parts on the screen, will appear in person next week at the Orpheum in a playlet called "The Man Higher Up."

"The Thirteenth Chair" was the precursor and probably the best of the present crop of mystery thrillers. Few who saw the seance scene have forgotten the scream in the dark and the discovery that one of the party of 13 has been killed by a knife wound in the back. Hazel Whitmore plays the part of Rosalie le Grange, a medium, and other roles are taken by John Warner, Virginia Springer, Laura Lovett and J. Raymond Brown.

The Rialto's opening bill includes Jimmy Carr and his jazz orchestra, Leo Beers, raconteur, pianist and singer; Harold Elliott, Ann Waters and Jacob Kingsbury in "The Letter Writer," a comedy playlet by S. Jay Kaufman and Edwin Burke; George and Paul Hickman, blackface entertainers; Jessie Reed, vocalist, and McGood, Lenzen and their troupe, gymnasts. The program opening Thursday will offer Franklyn Charles and his company, Edith Crawford, the famous Aeroplane Girls, and others.

THIS is "Radio Week" at the Columbia, with a picture, "The Mystery Box," showing the Post-Dispatch broadcasting station, K S D, in action. The vaudeville bill for the first half of the week will include "Harpland," an act with four girl musicians; Moore and Shy, comedians, one being six feet tall and weighing 400 pounds, while the other is four feet tall and weighs 87; Ada Weber, singer of "blues" and jazz; Cole and Smith, and Teddy, a wrestling bear. The bill starting Thursday will be headed by Grindell and Esther, besides Cleveland and Dowry, Wright and Sidelli, and others. The feature films are "Flesh and Blood," with Lon Chaney, and "Good Bye Girls," with William Russell.

The program at the Grand Opera House is led by a revue, casting Bob Earle, Gertrude Rial, George Browning, Berenice St. John, Manny Kohn and Jim Depinto; and will include the Great Lester, ventriloquist; Ca. Dean Dewey, Lee Fort and a company, in a miniature musical comedy; Milton and Pollock, in George Ade's comedy, "Speaking to Father," Green and Burnett, Harry Gilbert, Jack and Jessie Gibson, Joe and Clara Gibson, and Sealo. A feature of next week's bill will be the first installment of a movie serial, "Around the World in Eighteen Days," with William Desmond.

The Gayety announces Joe Hurtig's Bowery Burlesquers in "Here, There and Everywhere," with Billy Foster, Frank Harcourt, Mildred Cecil, Libbie Hart, Estelle Nack, Fay and Florence and "Princess" Dramas, in a measure called "The Dance of Love." The German Theater Stock Co. will give a benefit tonight for its comedian, Felix Marz, at Eagle Auditorium, and will play Leo Fall's operetta, "Der Fidele Bauer." The cast will include two children, Lottie and Richard Anschuetz.

"WHISTLER" PAINTING PROVED TO BE WORK OF FRENCHMAN

Court Finds Paris Artist Painted in One Day, on a Bet, Picture Described to Famous American and Held at 150,000 Francs.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, March 3.—A still-life painting ascribed to Whistler and priced at 150,000 francs, has been declared by the courts to be in reality the work of a French painter, Stanny Stassy. The Frenchman is said to have painted it 18 years ago in one day, on a bet; then he sold it for 80 francs and next saw it as a famous picture with Whistler's name in the corner. It was the reproduction of the picture in a book on Whistler, in which it was learnedly commented upon as revealing Whistler's peculiar genius, that brought about the expose. M. Stassy and a fellow-painter named Bebin, it was shown in court, painted the same group of flowers, a plate, a jug and a glass of wine, on a wager, with two of their pretty models as judges.

Some time ago, when Bebin sold his copy, the dealer indignantly charged that it was merely a copy of Whistler's, and for proof showed him the photograph in the book. Bebin told Stassy of his experience and the latter searched until he found the picture, which had traveled at increasing prices from dealer to dealer.

Stassy filed suit to recover the picture and have the signature changed, and asked for damages. Experts supported his contention and the court now has upheld it to the extent of ordering Stassy's signature to replace that of Whistler.

The dealer who last bought the picture, paying for it 100,000 francs, says he will seek redress from the dealer who sold it to him, and continuous litigation on down the line may result.

ELLEN TERRY 75 YEARS OLD

Actress Still a London Favorite, Though She Appears Rarely.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, March 3.—This has been a week of congratulatory messages for Ellen Terry. The famous actress celebrated her seventy-fifth birthday on Tuesday and was showered with telegrams, letters and flowers. Although Miss Terry appears on the stage only in occasional charitable productions, she remains the most popular figure connected with the British theater. She attends all important first-night performances and her appearance in the playhouse, whether behind the footlights or in the audience, is the signal for an ovation. Terry and Mrs. Kendal are about the only survivors of one of the greatest periods of the English stage, a day that knew Irving, Tree, Alexander and others.

Cyril Maude and company sailed on the Majestic last Wednesday for an American tour in "If Winter Comes."

Blackheads Go Quick By This Simple Method

Blackheads—big ones or little ones—soft ones or hard ones—on any part of the body, go quick by a simple method that just dissolves them. To do this, get about two ounces of calonite powder from your druggist—sprinkle a little bit on a hot, wet cloth—rub over the blackheads briskly for a few seconds—and wash off. You'll wonder where the blackheads have gone. Pinching and squeezing blackheads only open the pores of the skin and leave them large and unsightly—while the simple application of calonite powder and the water dissolves them right out, leaving the skin soft and the pores in their natural condition.

Glands Used to Restore Hair Growth

Science of Gland Therapy Relieves Baldness—New Treatment Restores Health and Growth.

Baldness in both men and women is now generally ascribed by scientists to defective functioning of endocrine glands. Hair growth is dependent upon the secretions of these glands—these secretions making possible the assimilation of those elements in the blood which are vital to a luxurious growth of hair.

Now it is possible for any bald person to have a full, luxuriant growth of hair through the discovery of E. R. Alexander, nationally known scientist. Dr. Alexander, through the concentration of glands, can supply the deficiency of gland secretion and produce a full growth of hair.

This discovery may be easily used in the privacy of your own home. Within a few weeks you will notice new, vigorous hair beginning to come in and with the growth you can gradually restore your hair to its former bright, healthy color.

So confident is Dr. Alexander that you can be relieved of the embarrassment of baldness and regain the normal hair growth by this method that he offers to send a regular $4 treatment for only $2 to anyone who will write for it. Use it according to directions, and if at the end of a month you do not find your hair returning with all its former vigor, the treatment does not cost a cent.

SEND NO MONEY—just your name and address to Alexander Laboratories, 477 Gateway Station, Kansas City, Mo., and this treatment will be mailed at once in plain wrapper. Try it according to directions and if at the end of 4 month you are not more than satisfied with results, your money will be refunded at once. A Big Kansas City bank guarantees that Dr. Alexander is reliable and holds $1000 cash as a guarantee to return your money if you wish.

Sidelights on the Paris Theater of Today.

(Staff Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.)

PARIS, Feb. 13.

THEATRICAL titles in Paris are as misleading as anywhere else in the world. At the Vaudeville Theater, "The Dressmaker at Luneville" might lead you to expect a display • • • but the piece is a penetrating study of a sophisticated bachelor who falls finally and seriously in love with the dressmaker and discovers some qualities of affection he had never known to exist.

"The Vineyard of the Lord" is a social satire, in which the epigrams pop like champagne corks.

"The Alarm Bell" brings a timid country girl to Paris and has her evolve during the course of the piece into a finished and veneered Parisienne.

Sacha Guitry's "A Romantic Subject" concerns the difficulties of staying married rather than of getting married.

The music halls are less obscure in their titles. The prize goes to the Concert Mayol, which advertises "Oh, How Bare!" and below the French title, "Oh, Quel Nu!" lest some American or Englishman miss the meaning, the English words are inserted: "Ladies shirt off!"

Oppose Animal Acts.

THE Paris equivalent of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (which is located aptly at 28 Rue des Martyrs) has started a campaign against trained animal acts in public amusement halls. It is circulating accounts of the way in which dogs are taught to dance by putting them on a sheet iron floor into which electricity may be turned —and similar stories of the tortures by which apparently intelligent tricks are impressed on dumb animals.

All the members of the Prevention Society are asked to pledge themselves to leave their seats in a body whenever a trained animal act appears on the stage or screen at any public amusement establishment and to wait in the corridor until the act is finished. Then they are to return to their seats in a body. The society hopes eventually that the numbers who leave their seats will attract the notice of theatrical managers and lead them to abandon trained animal acts.

A Sensitive Playwright.

A PLAY was withdrawn by its author last week because too many of the Paris reviewers labeled it a social satire, whereas the author had intended it simply as a fantasy. The play was "Le Moulin de la Galette" and the author, Andre Pascal, explained in a letter to the producer requesting permission to withdraw it:

"I had not the slightest intention of pamphleteering, and I should have thought that the exaggerated situations in which I presented my characters would clearly indicate my piece is nothing but a fantastic and sentimental cartoon. I prefer to withdraw it."

Blow at Rapacious Agents.

THE French Minister of Labor has just opened a theatrical placement agency through which actors and actresses may find engagements free of charge. The establishment of this public agency was made necessary by the increasing demands of the private theatrical agents. They insisted upon 10 or 15 per cent of the actor's salary during the entire period of any engagement they procured for him. And recently, instead of recommending actors to producing managers on accouht of their artistic ability they began to recommend those who paid their exorbitant charges with the most docility.

The Chamber of Deputies has just passed a law relieving provincial theaters in France of 50 per cent of the taxes which are imposed on theaters in Paris. All the theaters in France heretofore have been paying uniform taxes amounting to about 21 per cent of the gross receipts. Before the war, instead of paying any taxes at all, the theaters outside of Paris received a subsidy from the state in recognition of the social and educational value of their public service.

A license survey made by the police shows that there are at present in Paris in the service of its 3,500,000 inhabitants 657 theaters, cabarets, music halls and other establishments classified as "spectacles" and 757 dancing establishments.

Low Standard of Humor.

THE theater-going public in France since the war looks for something to laugh at rather than something to sympathize with, and subtle humor seems to have less general attraction now than ever before—according to the opinions just collected from the most important French actors and actresses by the theatrical daily, Comoedia.

Mlle. Dussane of the Comedie Francaise says: "It is the rude public of a rough epoch. They laugh cruelly at sentimental complications that would once have wrung their feelings."

The actors and actresses of all the important theaters have independently contributed a similar opinion to the symposium: "The mental alertness of the audience is below the pre-war level; the comedy that catches them is grosser and the laugh is coarser."

On the other hand, the music hall and burlesque actors and actresses insist that the level of their audiences has risen since the war. "There must be more humor and meaning in the songs and less pornography."

THE unanimity of opinion within each class of actors and actresses and the contradiction between the two classes leads Comoedia to this conclusion: "The war has intensified and fixed the characteristics of two audiences that were formerly separate—the music hall audience and the dramatic audience. The resulting average of taste and interest appears as a lowering of standards in the theater proper and as a raising of standards in the music halls."

A HOME-MADE GRAY HAIR REMEDY

You Can Make a Better Gray Hair Remedy Than You Can Buy.

Gray, streaked or faded hair is not only unbecoming, but unnecessary.

Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home that will darken gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, to small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ ounce of glycerine.

These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost, or the druggist will put it up for you. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It is easy to use, does not color the scalp, is not sticky and greasy and does not rub off.

Miss Rambeau to Play Rosalind.

MARJORIE RAMBEAU'S "Goldfish" company closed tonight in Detroit, and she is coming to New York to begin rehearsals as Rosalind in the production of "As You Like It," which will serve as the initial offering of the newly incorporated American National Theater. • • • Frank Craven, while on tour with "The First Year," has written a new play, "Early to Bed." • • • Fred Stone, who has not played in California since the days of "The Wizard of Oz," will be welcomed with special ceremonies when he opens in "Tip Top" at Los Angeles on April 8.

The Moscow Art Theater players, for whom a special performance of Eugene G. O'Neill's "The Hairy Ape" was given on a recent evening, pronounced it an amateurish interpretation of an ineffective, mediocre play. They were dismayed, also, by the John Barrymore production of "Hamlet," and declared there was "a disharmony between the scenery and the impersonation."

Mlle. Sorel and M. Lambert of the Comedie-Francaise were promptly and severely fined by the administrator of that company for overstaying their leave in the United States, but the Minister of Public Instruction remitted the burden. • • • George Arliss, who has not played for 20 years in England, his native land, is to present "The Green Goddess" in London next September. Never before has a piece by William Archer been seen in his own country. • • • Mr. O'Neill is reported to have completed a play called "Welded," which is described as "a study of marriage in strata far removed from the lower depths." • • • The principal obstacle to the American tour projected for Eleanore Duse is said to be her firm refusal to act more than three times a week. • • • Ethel Barrymore is minded to tour next autumn in her present piece, "The Laughing Lady."

Miss Chatterton Wants a Play.

FOR two whole days Ruth Chatterton rehearsed "William's Wife" before casting it into the discard. She is looking for a new play. . . . A cloudburst of plays dealing with Italian historical personages is threatening. Mrs. Abram Poole's "Botticelli" is soon to be produced at the Provincetown Theater; Ben Hecht is hammering out a play called "Benvenuto Cellini" for Leo Ditrichstein, and Gilbert Miller is preparing to do a Spanish play on Casanova, possibly with Lowell Sherman in the title part. . . . Julian Eltinge is expected to head a big revue next season.

Sarah Bernhardt is not only fast recovering her health, according to reports from Paris, but has already announced her return to the stage in a play called "Le Sphinx," written especially for her by Maurice Rostand. . . . The final performance of Clemence Dane's "Will Shakspeare" at the National Theater occurred last Saturday night. . . . During the off week of March 11 the Theater Guild will present "The Race With the Shadow," by Wilhelm von Scholz, at the Garrick, for subscribers only.

The robot play, "R. U. R." will close its run next Saturday night at the Frazee Theater, and go on tour. It will be succeeded at the Frazee by "Barnum Was Right." . . . Sasha Guitry's "Pasteur," now in rehearsal with Henry Miller in the name part, is unique in that it has only male characters. . . . Ed Wynn will spend still another season in "The Perfect Fool." . . . When Mitzi Hajos played her closing performance of "Lady Billy" last Saturday night in Allentown, Pa., she had appeared 1231 times in that melodious opus.

"The Comedian" on March 11.

THE closing performance of David Warfield in "The Merchant of Venice," will be given next Saturday night at the Lyceum Theater. On the following evening Sacha Guitry's "The Comedian," with Lionel Atwill, will open at this playhouse. In the cast will be H. Cooper Cliffe, A. P. Kaye, Albert Gran, H. Paul Doucet, Harold Seton, William Lorenz, Will Hindson, Jacques de Wolfe, Elsie Mackay, Evelyn Gosnell, Rose Winter, Maquita Dwight, Marguerite Denys, Myra Florian and Edmonia Nolley. . . . Lenore Ulric played her 525th performance in "Kiki" tonight at the Belasco Theater.

Schnitzler's "Reigen" will be presented for the first time in English a week from tomorrow night by the Green Room Club, under the direction of Rollo Lloyd and Robert Milton. The gross takings will be sent to the dramatist. . . . "Morton of the Movies" will be presented in London during April. . . . "The Adding Machine," which the Theater Guild will produce at the Garrick on March 11, is an expressionist play about a bookkeeper, according to Elmer Rice, who wrote the piece. In the cast will be Dudley Digges, Helen Westley, Edgar Stehli, Irving Dillon and a leading woman not yet selected from six entrants.

The cast for the English production of "So This Is London" will include three Americans—Edward Robyns, Eleanor Woodruff and Raymond Hackett. . . . Reginald Pole, who was in the Barrymore "Hamlet," will play "King Lear" at a special matinee Friday at the Earl Carroll Theater.

Evangelistic Sermons.

The Rev. M. E. Todd of Shreveport, La., will deliver the first of a series of 15 evangelistic sermons at Third Baptist Church, Grand and Washington boulevards, this morning at 11 o'clock. He also will speak at the evening service at 7:30 o'clock. He will speak at afternoon and evening services for two weeks. He is accompanied by W. P. Martin, a singer.

Gusikoff to Play Glazounow Work at Symphony

THE last regular program but one of the Symphony Orchestra's season will be given Friday afternoon and Saturday evening, with Michel Gusikoff, concertmaster, playing his postponed engagement as soloist. He will present Glazounow's violin concerto, considered one of the most difficult compositions for that instrument. The orchestral numbers will be Chabrier's "Marche Joyeuse," Smetana's tone-poem, "The Moldau," and Schubert's Symphony No. 7, in C Major.

The soloist at this afternoons popular concert, at the Odeon, will be Miss Charlotte Demuth-Williams, head of the violin department of the Oberlin College Conservatory of Music. She will play Vieuxtemps' violin concerto in D Minor. The orchestral program will include the overture to Nicolai's "Merry Wives of Windsor," the second movement of Chausson's symphony in B-flat, Boccherini's Minuet, Beethoven's "Turkish March," Mendelssohn's Serenade in E, and the Rakoczy March from Berlioz's "The Damnation of Faust."

The last pair of regular concerts, on March 16 and 17, will present Sergei Rachmaninoff as soloist. The orchestra's home season will close with a gala "pop" concert on March 18, at which an all-Wagner program will be given. On March 20 the orchestra will leave for Mexico, Mo., for the first concert of a tour which will last eight weeks.

At next Sunday's popular concert, the Concordia Seminary chorus, directed by Frederick Fischer, will sing Christiansen's "Beautiful Savior," with orchestral accompaniment, and Mohr's "Creation's Hymn." Arthur Neeley, tenor, will be soloist.

Mischa Elman Tuesday Night.

THE program which Mischa Elman will present Tuesday evening at the Odeon consists of Handel's Sonata in D Major, Lalo's "Symphonie Espagnole," Korngold's suite, "Viel Larmen um Nichts" ("Much Ado About Nothing"), the Chopin-Wilhelmj Nocturne and Sarasate's "Jota." Elman's last appearance here was in joint recital with Ysaye, at the Coliseum. Korngold is the youthful Viennese composer whose opera, "Die Tote Stadt," has been given at the Metropolitan. His suite consists of four sections—"Maid in Bridal Array," "Grotesque Funeral," "Garden Scene" and "Hornpipe."

William Theodore Diebels will give an organ recital at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the New Cathedral, presenting as soloists George E. Muskens, tenor, and H. Naunheim, baritone. The organ numbers will be Capocci's "Prelude," Renard's "Andantino," Robert Franz's "Ave Maria," Gounod's "Scena," Diebels' "Gethsemane" and "Consummatum Est," and Lemaigre's "Mary at the Foot of the Cross."

Mrs. Howard Watson will read a paper on "The History of the Pipe Organ" before the Morning Etude Club Wednesday morning at Baldwin Hall. Musical numbers will be given by Mrs. W. K. Roth, Mrs. Elizabeth Brey Vater, Mrs. Lotta K. Bosse, Miss Adelaide Blase and Mrs. Emma Gesner Hart. . . . Before the St. Louis Tercentenary Shakspeare Society, Saturday morning at Vandervoort Hall, Mrs. Stuart Chambers will give vocal numbers, Mrs. T. K. Cooper will play piano selections and Prof. John Beverly Robinson will speak on "Elizabethan Architecture."

The program will be rendered by Elizabeth Morse, reader; Alice Pettingill, pianist; Mrs. Hector M. E. Pasmezoglu, soprano, and Blanche Herrick Hopkins, contralto. This will be the first of four Lenten musicales to be given on Monday mornings at the Chase.

Students of the St. Louis Grand Opera School, directed by L. M. Molino, gave a concert yesterday afternoon at Vandervoort Hall. The program included solos, duets and choruses from "Ernani," "La Forza del Destino," "La Traviata" and "Martha."

Gounod's "Redemption" will be sung by the Pageant Choral Society, under the direction of Frederick Fischer, on the evening of March 13, at the Odeon. The soloists will be Mrs. Karl Kimmel, soprano; Miss Thelma Hayman, contralto; Richard Crooks, tenor, and Richard Hale, baritone.

River Plate Wool Still Coming to United States.

By the Associated Press

BUENOS AIRES, March 3.—Predictions that the new American tariff on wool, which went into effect last September, would practically prohibit the exportation of River Plate wool to the United States have not been fulfilled, according to an article in "Comments on Argentine Trade," published by the American Chamber of Commerce here. On the contrary, says the writer, the United States has bought more wool in this market than any other country since the tariff of 31 cents a pound on clean content became effective.

The POST-DISPATCH is the only St. Louis evening newspaper giving Associated Press news service.

Voice of Union Labor and the Radical Press

The Post-Dispatch prints herewith extracts from editorial or other articles in the organs of labor unions and the Communist and the Socialist parties showing the tendency of thought on public questions among those bodies of citizens and indicating causes of social unrest.

PANAMA CANAL PAYING.
(From Labor, Organ of Railway Unions.)

Opponents of Government ownership and operation of great public utilities will get cold comfort out of the report on the Panama Canal recently submitted by Col. Jay Morrow, Governor of the Panama Canal Zone.

After private enterprise had been wrecked in an attempt to build the canal, the United States Government, under Roosevelt, took over the enterprise, and in the face of the most appalling difficulties succeeded in uniting the two oceans at an expenditure of approximately $300,000,000.

In addition to operating the canal, the Government conducts vast business enterprises in the Canal Zone and administers civil government over a country of nearly 500 square miles with a mixed population.

Nevertheless, according to Col. Morrow, "expenses for operation, maintenance and the manifold tasks of Governmental administration call for just about half as much money as we are turning into the treasury."

The Colonel assured the Washington Society of Civil Engineers that the canal was "almost" paying all expenses, including interest on the investment and the creation of a sinking fund to take care of the bonds issued by the Government. The receipts are increasing so rapidly that the qualifying "almost" may soon be eliminated.

When and where has private enterprise equaled this record? Who has ever suggested that, in addition to paying interest on securities issued, the railroads or other public utilities could set aside a sinking fund to take care of the original investment?

THE HUNGRY CRY FOR BREAD.
(From the Worker, Communist Organ.)

While great quantities of wheat rot in the open in the grain fields of the West, the poor starve in the cities, especially the children of the poor.

The condition confronting the farmers we know. Their spokesmen in the United States Congress tell of rapacious grain speculators on the boards of trade refusing to buy. That keeps the price up for stocks on hand and makes the farmer ready to accept lower prices for new stocks whenever needed. The farmer knows his problem, although he may be blind as to the remedy.

But there is no "hunger bloc" in the United States Congress. The hungry have no spokesman in Washington. But the hungry have spoken in Chicago in the price war between the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co. and the Piggly Wiggly Stores, as a result of which the latter, for a very short time, gave a 16-ounce loaf of bread with every purchase. The hungry have made it known they are in our midst. According to press reports, "hundreds of schoolboys, newsboys and kids of every description stormed the 88 Piggly Wiggly Stores" in Chicago. Out of well-nigh penniless homes they came, these hungry children, knowing that with every purchase of a few cents they would get a loaf of bread free! How many of them must have divided their meager purchases, coming again and again, to get two, three, four or more loaves of bread free! The Piggly Wiggly Stores gave away 150,000 loaves in one day and then the pressure became too great. Regular customers couldn't get near the stores.

Manager C. S. Wyatt closed the doors of his stores to the hungry hordes by the simple expedient of ruling that no free loaves be given away except with 50-cent purchases. Fifty-cent pieces are not numerous in the homes of the hungry. So the one day of free bread has become a thing of memory. The starving will crawl back into their retreats and hunger some more.

DESTROY THIS DIRTY BROOD.
(From the New York Call, Socialist.)

The grave charges made by Albert Ballin, as a former employe of the Thiel and Burns detective agencies, warrant an investigation by Congress. Burns heads a bureau in the Department of Justice. He was appointed by Daugherty in spite of evidence submitted of jury fixing. On these grounds a former President and Attorney-General held that Burns was unfit to hold a public office.

Now comes the Ballin story backed with documents charging what can only be considered as crimes by these detective agencies. He charges that he faked a document which was used to deport Martens, former head of the Soviet Bureau in New York. Ballin himself was arrested in New York and charged with complicity in the Wall street explosion. He was never tried. Ballin charges that he mailed a letter in New York threatening to blow up the Woolworth Building. Ballin was never prosecuted and he contends that the reason for this is that he had documents showing that he was acting under instructions of his employers.

If Ballin tells the truth, and there is much in his story tending to prove this, these detective agencies are shown to be nests of crime. If he is not telling the truth, the agencies are revealed as employing the lowest creatures imaginable. In either case these agencies are placed in the pillory. A congressional investigation of this foul business is in order. The spawning of this dirty brood warrants the destruction by Federal law of all these private agencies and the dismissal of Burns from the Federal payroll.

Careless Shampooing Spoils the Hair

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Many soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much free alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified in a cup or glass with a little warm water is sufficient to cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub the Mulsified in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any pharmacy, it is very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.

Matters of Current St. Louis Lover

Probably the most interesting and influential exhibition of any season is the international water color exhibition now in progress at the City Art Museum. It might be divided into some six or eight distinct assemblies of the art of various nations, each of these groups representing the height of water color art of that country. In the catalogue enumerating the 170 paintings in the show one sees the names of leading water color painters of France, America, Germany, England, Spain, Russia and even Japan and Norway. This is the first international exhibition of water colors held in St. Louis, and is the second to be held in the Middle West. The Chicago Art Institute some years ago held its first international water color show, which was not circulated as is this one. Visitors to the St. Louis museum will recollect having in the past seen various American water color shows and admired and commended the attainments in that difficult medium. Now, the European exhibits have given a new breadth and different character to this collection, making it most inclusive, comprehensive and truthfully representative of the present trend of modern water color art in America and Europe. It embraces all applications of that art, from advertising to pure artistic interest.

Superiority Is General.

In the majority of exhibitions, whatever their nature, one or several paintings stand out clearly as being the "piece de resistance" of the entire assembly, but in this collection the task of selecting these would be indeed difficult. The superiority is general and well distributed. The variety of styles represented makes the establishment of any one standard impossible, and almost every painting has to be considered separately from its own use and viewpoint. It is to be readily agreed, however, that the works of the French, English and American artists take front rank. In these we find evidenced the greatest skill with the medium of water color, the most originality and cleverness in subject, conception and application, beside highest artistic merit.

Nevertheless, the forceful painting, "Tuna Fishermen, Early Morning, Concarneau," by Sigurd Schou, claims wise consideration in contemplating its masterful tone handling and treatment of light. The swaying sails of small fisher-boats are seen huddled together, riding the motion of the rocking waters flecked with the brilliance of sunrise, while the fishermen busy themselves with the catch they have just brought in. The colors are in high key, and the various qualities and conditions of light are treated with refined surety. Schou, although a Norwegian, is at the present time in New York, where his works are meeting with success.

Works of French Painters.

The work of most of the French painters here represented is well known even in America. The originals of three "Vogue" cover designs are here exhibited. The "Blue Horse" is a softly colorful arrangement of a delicately azure-tinted lady seated upon a prancing blue spotted horse which plunges into a mass of conventionalized clouds in a mulberry sky. "My...." will be as easily remembered. Here Milady, in neatly flowered organdie gown, fountain pen in hand poised hesitatingly over the sheet of stationery before her, critically contemplates the second word of the letter to be written. "Snowballs" and "Jealousy" are also included.

Two water colors by Domergue shown here are characteristically French not only in spirit, but direct though delicate execution. In his "Venice," a lovely lady in a gown as blue and as deep as the Venetian night around her, stands against a railing overlooking a canal whence come darting gleams from distant lights. His "Lacquer Mirror" is strangely fascinating. Delighting in a voluminous silk hook-skirt with no bodice, a tall, lithe mademoiselle raises a bright feather far high above her head and pirouettes gaily before a great oval mirror in red lacquer frame. About this mirror, well known in Europe as Domergue's most cherished possession, is told the story of how the artist obtained the relic for a few francs and brought it to the small studio in Paris where he lived with two fellow artists before their present days of fame and prosperity. Here the dilapidated condition of the mirror was improved with a few nails and some glue, then painted a deep red, and finally established as the third article of furniture of the household. In recent and more prosperous times, the frame has received a new coat of lacquer, for to this day this mirror remains a vitally necessary adjunct in the temperamental life of Domergue and is one to which he attributes much of his success, artistically and otherwise.

De Mouvet's Work.

It is to be regretted that larger, more characteristic examples of the work of Boutet de Mouvel could not have been obtained for this exhibition. The two that are shown are small and comparatively unimportant examples, although they suggest the quality of the painter's fine work. One is called "The Prince Albert," in which are seen two figures drawn in regressed cubism. The other is "The Miniature," of which the most interesting factor is the composition. At the extreme left, facing left, the figure of a woman is drawn in single lines. Her gown is a deep yellow, while the wall against which she stands is in a lighter shade. The touch lines of paneling of the wall make an effective design.

Louise Simon, another of the well-known French painters, best known for his portrayals of the fisher-folk of Dunkirk, has two pictures in the group. One shows the "Ole Man

Lucien Simon, another of the well-known French painters, best known for his portrayals of the fisher-folk of Normandy, has two pictures in the exhibit. One shows the "Ole Merchantwomen" taking in their wares from the stand beside the road. Evening approaches, and already a light gleams from within their house-wagon. The other picture is a swift, direct study entitled "Sigondaine." It is a firm, sure sketch of a peasant girl.

Among the list of American artists represented are the names of Childe Hassam, George Luks, Joseph Pennell, Alice Schille, Charles H. Woodbury, John F. Carlson, etc. It is gratifying, indeed, to compare the work of our American artists with that of the Europeans. Next week a more complete review of the American water colorists' pictures will be made, followed by a consideration of those of the English and German artists.

Entries by St. Louis Artists.

In the 1923 exhibition of work by creative artists from the states of Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma held at the Kansas City Art Institute, 22 St. Louis artists and craftsmen have entries. In the 1922 exhibit, two prizes were awarded to St. Louis artists, the Silver Medal for Painting going to Oscar Berninghaus and the Gold Medal for Graphic Arts to Sheila Burlingame. This year that record is surpassed. The Gold Medal for Painting was awarded Mrs. Kathryn Cherry for her "Fish, Fruit and Flowers," the Gold Medal for Graphic Arts went to Mrs. Eloise Long Wells for her crayon drawing, "Little Mother," while Cornella Maury received honorable mention for pastels, Gisella Loeffler took honorable mention for water color and pastel, Mrs. Florence ver Steeg received honorable mention for painting and Ellen Ravencroft took both honorable mention for water color and the Kansas City Institute special prize for painting.

Another and perhaps greater tangible assertion of the wider recognition of the merit of St. Louis artists' works is the number of their creations which have been accepted into the Pennsylvania Academy show this year. Wuerple's "Missouri Hills," Barnett's "Call of the Sea" and "Lovers' Lane," Charles Galt's "Mother and Child" and portrait of Mrs. Truman P. Young, Mrs. Cherry's "The Green Bowl" and "Mums at Shaw's Garden," Dawson Dawson-Watson's "Awakening" and "Mystery," and Mrs. Eloise Long Wells' "Youth and Motion" are the paintings accepted. The sculpture includes Sheila Burlingame's "Study," Bert Dunn's "Indian Woman" and Victor Holm's "Job" and "Harland Frazer." These achievements are encouraging not only to the artists to whom the distinctions have been awarded, but to other painters and sculptors and to those who are interested in the artistic progress of the city.

'OLD HEIDELBERG' REVIVED WITH FRENCH NEAR HISTORIC TOWN

Great Crowds Attracted to Play in Germany Because of Nationalistic Character.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, March 3.—"King Lear" was being played at the theater in the Ruhr the night the French occupied the town of Recklinghausen. Gloster's son, Edgar, was wandering about alone on the heath at the opening of the fourth act. Gloster was approaching off stage and Edgar interrupted his soliloquy by exclaiming in a loud voice, "But who comes?"

At that very moment the audience was startled by the crack of riding whips and French soldiers who had forced their way into the auditorium hastily dispersed the crowd while the surprised actors watched the excitement from the stage.

"Old Heidelberg" is reappearing on the stage throughout Germany and attracting great crowds because of its nationalistic character and the nearness of the French occupation troops to Heidelberg and its historic castle, which was destroyed by the French in the 30 years' war.

A film of the life of Frederick the Great also is attracting great crowds and taking rank with "William Tell" as an inspiration for patriotic demonstration.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft luster and appearance of abundance which is so attractive.

Will Rogers the Cowboy Humorist Says—

By Will Rogers.

Copyright, 1923, by the McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

SINCE I wrote you all last week there has been an awful lot of fashion Shows and all their By Products held here in New York. All the out of Town buyers from all over have been here. So, on behalf of New York City, I had to help welcome them at their various Banquets. There was the retail Milliners' big fashion show at the Astor Ball Room, where they showed 500 Hats and me. Some of the hats were just as funny looking as I was.

Well, I settled the Hat and Dress business to the satisfaction of everybody but the Milliners. So the next night at the Commodore Hotel I mingled with those Princes of Brogans, the Leather and Shoe men, and in a later Article I want to tell all you people just how they operate. For we never paid more for our Shoes and were nearer barefooted than we are today, so don't think that I am bought off this week by those Pasteboard Highbinders; it's only that I want to talk to the Ladies today.

During this reign of Indigestion I was called on to speak at a big Banquet at the Waldorf to the Corset Manufacturers. Now that only shows you what a degrading thing this after Dinner speaking is. I want to get out of it in a few weeks and back to the Movies.

This speaking calls on a fellow to learn something about articles that a self respecting man has no business knowing about. So that's why I am going to get away. If a Man is called on to tell in a Public Banquet room what he knows about Corsets, there is no telling what other Ladies' wearing apparel he might be called on to discuss. So me back to the Morals of Hollywood before it's too late.

I was, at that, mighty glad to appear at a dinner given by an essential industry. Just imagine, if you can, if the flesh of this country were allowed to wander around promiscuously! Why, there ain't no telling where it would wind up. There has got to be a gathering or a get-together place for everything in this world, so, when our human bodies get beyond our control, why we have to call on some mechanical force to help assemble them and bring back what might be called the semblance of a human frame.

These Corset Builders, while they might not do a whole lot to help civilization, are a tremendous aid to the Eyesight. They have got what you would call a Herculean task as they really have to improve on nature. The same problem confronts them that does the people that run the subways in New York City. They both have to get so many pounds of human flesh into a given radius. The subway does it by having strong men to push and shove until they can just close the door with only the last man's foot out. But the Corset Carpenters arrive at the same thing by a series of strings.

The One-Man Corset.

They have what is known as the Back Lace. This is known as a One Man Corset.

Now the Front Lace can be operated without a confederate. By judiciously holding your breath and with a conservative intake on the Diaphragm you arrange yourself inside this. Then you tie the strings to the door knob and slowly back away. When your speedometer says you have arrived at exactly 36, why, haul in your lines and its off.

We have also the Side Lace that is made in case you are very fleshy, and need two accomplices to help you congregate yourself. You stand in the middle and they pull from both sides. This acts something in the nature of a vise. This style has been known to operate so successfully that the victims' buttons have popped off their shoes.

Of course, the fear of every fleshy lady is the broken Corset String. I sat next to a catastrophe of this nature once. We didn't know it at first, the deluge seemed so gradual, till finally the gentleman on the opposite side of her and myself were gradually pushed off our chairs. To show you what a wonderful thing this Corseting is, that lady had come to the dinner before the broken String episode in a small roadster. She was delivered home in a Bus.

They have also worked out a second line of control, or a place to park an extra string on the back. You can change a string now while you wait, and they have demountable strings.

Now, of course, not as many women wear Corsets as used to, but what they have lost in women they have made up with men. When corsets were a dollar a pair they used to be as alike as two Fords. A clerk just looked you over, decided on your circumference and wheel base and handed you out one. They come in long boxes and you were in doubt at first if it was a Corset or a Casket.

Nowadays with the Wraparound and the Diaphragm-Control, and all those things a Corset Manufacturer uses more rubber than a Tire Co.

Imagine me being asked to talk at a Corset Dinner, anyway; Me, who has been six years with Zeigfeld Follies and not a Corset in the Show.

Men have gone down in History for shaping the destinies of Nations, but I tell you this set of Corset Architects shape the Destinies of Women and that is a lot shaping that has been done on a more important than some of the lot of Nations that I can name offhand. Another thing makes me so strong for them, if it wasn't for the Corset Ads in Magazines men would never look at a Magazine.

From Corsets to the Senate.

NOW, to jump from Corsets to the U. S. Senate is quite a leap, for, since Ham Lewis left, there has not been a Corset seated there with the doubtful exception of Mr. Lodge. You see we jump directly from a necessity to a Luxury.

The reason I want to touch on the Senate today is that, as I am writing this, they are having what is called a Filibuster. The name is just as silly as the thing itself. It means that a Man can get up and talk for 15 or 20 hours at a time, then be relieved by another, just to keep some Bill from coming to a Vote, no matter about the merit of this particular bill, whether its good or bad.

The whole foundation of our Government is based on the majority rule, so they have done their duty when they merely vote against it or for it, whichever they like. There is no other Body of Lawmakers in the World that have a thing like that. Why, if a distinguished foreigner was to be taken around to see our Institutions and was taken into the Senate and not told what institution it was, and heard a man ramble on, talking that had been going for 10 or 12 hours, he would probably say, "You have lovely quarters here for your insane but have you no Warden to look after their health to see that they don't talk themselves to death?"

Why, if an inmate did that in an Asylum they would put him in solitary confinement. And, mind you, if any demented person spoke that long there would be something in his speech you would remember, for he, at least, had to be smart or he would never have gone crazy. These just mumble away on any subject.

Imagine a ball player standing at bat and not letting the other side play to keep from having the game called against him. Why, tor, the first one on in a Show, they would murder him; or an Actalking all night to keep the rest from going on. You know how long he would last. It's against all the laws of American Sportsmanship, never mind the Parliamentary part of it.

One Senator threatened to read the Bible into the record as part of his Speech. And I guess he would have done it if somebody in the Capitol had had a Bible. Now that would have been a good thing for it would have given a lot of them a chance to hear what it says. But, of course, that was even too sensible to go through.

Instead they just did their one act for 10 or 12 hours each which they thought would be better than anything they could find in the Bible. To imagine how horrible this thing is, did you ever attend a Dinner and hear a Senator speak for 50 minutes or an Hour? If you have, you remember what that did to you! Well, just imagine the same thing only 12 times worse.

Gentlemen: I feel that I should like to tell others what your Balmwort Tablets have done for me. It surely is a great medicine—A Godsend. Some years ago I had a bad spell of the grippe which was followed by terrible backaches and tenderness over the kidneys. I had no rest neither night nor day. After trying several different kinds of kidney medicine without getting any relief I found in the Sioux City Journal, a mention of the curative qualities of Balmwort Tablets. I sent to Dayton, Ohio, for a trial package. They did me so much good, I sent for more and after using two packages was entirely free of my trouble. I wish every one who is troubled this way would try Balmwort Tablets and I am sure they'll prove satisfactory.

The story of "Robin Hood," as conceived by Fairbanks for his purpose, is told in two parts, Doug playing the Duke of Huntingdon, favorite of Richard the Lion-Hearted, in the first half, and the role of Robin Hood, the bandit, who robbed the rich and helped the needy, in the last half. The first portion is devoted to the enormous settings and spectacular crowd groupings, while thrilling adventure and spirited action dominate the closing reels.

The Liberty's bill for the week includes the new Fox picture production, "The Custard Cup;" Martin Johnson's "Jungle Adventures," Andy Gump, a Fox Sunshine comedy called "Clothes and Oil," and a Fox News feature.

"The Custard Cup," taken from the novel of the same name, with Mary Carr as "Peanie," the cheerful little woman who is always ready to help her friends and neighbors, is a picture in which optimism is the keynote. The serious thread running through the story turns about the cheerful courage with which "Peanie" meets her own difficulties in life and helps her friends to solve theirs. Mary Carr is shown in a role entirely different from her famous "mother" roles.

Johnson's "Jungle Adventures" takes the audience into the interior of British North Borneo. Here the man never turns a hand to labor—save hunting—and for this he uses the prehistoric blow gun. The labor-by-women system has brought out a curious physical development among the natives. Johnson caught remarkable pictures of these aborigines in the very heart of the jungles. There are shots of the famous Tengarra tribe of natives at the headwaters of the Kinabatangan River, over 500 miles into the jungle interior of Borneo.

Wake Up! Help Your Kidneys!
Cheer Up! Bladder Troubles Go!

Get busy, quick—help your Kidneys and they will help you!

Quick acting, balmy Balmwort Tablets is the best friend you can find for "slow-working," tired kidneys and painful, suffering bladder trouble.

Thousands say so! Thousands have proved it! You prove it too—or back comes your money. But—if your trouble has been poorly treated and reached the stage of organic disease—don't try Balmwort—instead, consult the best medical specialist you know of, and feel lucky if saved.

The Kidneys' Duty Is To Filter Acids, Poisons and Impurities From the Blood.

Every drop of your blood passes through your kidneys once every seven minutes—poor, tired, overworked kidneys—no wonder they often need help!

When you catch cold, or get wet feet, or have "flu" or grip or work in damp places. No wonder they need help!

Over-eating, indigestion, over-drinking coffee, tea or liquor; constipation—all these give your kidneys extra duty, extra work. But the kidneys seldom "strike"—they just go on trying to do their best, until structural changes occur, when it is too late to mend them, and only careful living and skilled medical service avail.

If more people recognized this fact and knew how easy it is to correct improper functioning by taking it in hand early—there would be fewer premature deaths and a much healthier race.

A French scientist claims that "as the kidneys are, so are all the organs of the body."

Misery—Pain—Suffering—Exhaustion!

Why endure them?
You can be well! You can get your rest!
You must regain your health and strength!

For fifteen years Balmwort tablets have been helping kidney and bladder troubles for thousands. Their action is unusually prompt—they are mild, not drastic—they are soothing and gentle and contain no opiates or habit-forming drugs. Try them—obtain Regular Size, $1.26, or Trial Size, 60c, of all good druggists.

How a Really Innocent Man Was Sent to Prison for Life for Murder

"THIS COULD NOT HAPPEN AGAIN IN A THOUSAND YEARS," SAYS PRESIDING JUDGE

Roy McKinney, Positively Identified Through Error by the Walking Partner of the Murdered Officer Who Was Shot When He Surprised Burglars on a "Job," Further Injured His Case by Presenting a Manufactured Alibi to Hide His Bootlegging Operations, and, When This Collapsed Under Prosecutors' Cross-Examination, Case Against Him Looked Perfect—Now Freed After Few Months in Ohio Penitentiary When Actual Slayer Confesses He Killed Policeman.

innocent man, who was in prison serving a life term and without hope of regaining his liberty, when another man confessed to having committed the murder of which he was convicted.

WILMINGTON, O., March 3.

On a flashlight identification Leroy McKinney of Cincinnati was sent to the penitentiary for life, for a crime he did not commit.

By the confession of Louis Vandervoort he has been set free and Vandervoort has taken his place in prison.

Thus in true life has been enacted a story which in fiction would strain credulity—a story that, according to the presiding Judge, could not happen again in 1000 years.

And thus has been discredited the affirmation of criminologists that an innocent man could not possibly be convicted of murder. Outstanding among these was the late Warden McClaughery of Leavenworth (Kan.) Federal Prison, who was wont to strengthen his declaration to this effect by remarking that he had heard many tales of this sort, but not one ever survived investigation.

And Warden Thomas of the Ohio Penitentiary says it is the first time in the history of that prison that an innocent man, convicted of murder, has been freed and the guilty man has taken his place.

It was only the jury's recommendation of mercy that saved this innocent man from the electric chair, but under Ohio's rigorous law there was no mercy that the jury could recommend or the Judge show which would hold out even a hope of commutation or parole. Mercy's last word was spoken when he was spared the death penalty. When he was immured for life the barred doors were doubly locked, by the sentence of the Court and the prohibition of parole.

There was only one thing in the world that could swing wide the doubly barred doors to him and that was proof of his innocence. But with that proof supplied by another's confession, the doors opened and Leroy McKinney came forth into the arms of the bride from whom he had been torn five months before.

It was only an instant, in the glare of a flash lamp, that Henry Adams, Wilmington policeman, saw the face of the man who killed Emory McCreight, another policeman, in a Wilmington alon Valentine night last year. When Leroy McKinney was arrested and charged with the crime, Adams dressed him in sheepskin-lined coat and toboggan cap and placed him in the dark and shot the rays of his flash lamp into McKinney's face as he had done that night in the alley, and said: "That is the man."

Came then McKinney's days in court and Adams, in the witness box, pointed a finger at McKinney in the prisoner's dock and said: "That is the man."

Penalty of Not Going Straight

The gray-haired Judge gave his instructions. The jury, 11 men and one woman, found him guilty, with the recommendation of mercy which saved him from the chair. McKinney was sent to prison for the rest of his natural life. The community felt that justice had been done and approved. There was a moment's sympathy for the bride of two months, who had sat beside the man through the trial, but she went her way and was all but forgotten and McKinney, beginning his long, undeserved penance behind the prison walls, was in a fair way to be forgotten, too.

Leroy McKinney was not without blame. If he had been, it might have taken more than a flashlight identification to send him to prison for life. He had brought sorrow to his good parents by his reckless misdeeds and the hand of the law lay heavily upon him even when he was being tried for his life. The day the prison doors opened for him and he was returned to the Wilmington court for the final act of restoration to citizenship, Judge F. M. Clevenger, admonishing him to hereafter go straight, said: "If you had not been going bad you would not have got in bad here." It was that, everybody agrees, and the shady alibi, which made the flash-light identification more convincing than it might otherwise have been.

McKinney's parents, worthy people, live at Bluffton, Ind. A brother is a Presbyterian preacher. "Mack" went through the public schools and had a year or two of university work. But he was wild. His father got him out of one scrape and he was into another. At last he went away to Cincinnati. His associations there did not tend to improve his behavior. He traveled the adjacent counties ostensibly selling automobile accessories and buying eggs and butter for Cincinnati commission merchants.

How the Policeman Was Murdered

Then, at 11:30 o'clock on the night of Feb. 14, 1922, Emory McCreight and Henry Adams, policemen, perfunctorily patrolling while the 5000 residents of this old Quaker town slept, turned into the alley behind the main business block. Half way through they paused in the deeper shadow cast by the high roof and belfry of the old Methodist Church, facing the next intersecting street. They had heard a noise. Just in front of them was a jog in the alley. The angle was cluttered with goods boxes and odds and ends. As they rounded into the angle two figures moved quickly from the back door of the Murphy & Benham hardware store.

Adams half drew his revolver, but he had been a policeman only a month, a farmer before that, and he remembered that the Mayor had told him, when he was appointed, not to use his gun if he could help it, so he let it drop back.

He and McCreight approached warily, looking the other two over in the gloom, and Adams asked: "What are you doing here?"

"Looking for a dog," one of them answered.

"You're liable to get in bad," said McCreight.

Adams edged up to one and shot the rays of his flashlight into his face, or as much of it as he could see, with the turned-up collar almost meeting the tightly drawn "toboggan."

There was a glint of defiance in the eyes that met his, then a quick movement below the rim of the flashlight's radiance and two flashes from a revolver. One bullet went through McCreight, mortally wounding him. The other caught Adams in the shoulder.

The man who had fired the shots and the other ran to the mouth of the alley and jumped into an automobile and drove away. Adams assisted McCreight out of the alley and called help, but McCreight soon expired. The only description Adams gave was that the two men in the alley looked like college boys.

McKinney and a companion had been seen in Wilmington the evening before. His comings and goings, in a Ford runabout, had drawn suspicious attention to him. Bloodhounds trailed two miles, to the schoolhouse on the New Vienna pike.

Men Eye Each Other in Prison Before They Exchange Places

LEROY McKINNEY, convicted of a murder he did not commit, and Louis Vandervoort, whose confession righted the wrong, were both in the Ohio State Penitentiary two days, while McKinney was waiting for the unwinding of the red tape that would release him.

McKinney was permitted, just before his release, to see the man in whose place he had suffered. Both being convicts, they were not allowed to speak to each other, but guards questioned Vandervoort in McKinney's presence. He was sorry, he said, that an innocent man had been punished for his crime. They eyed each other, Vandervoort apologetic and McKinney forgiving, and then Vandervoort was led away and McKinney was taken to be dressed out.

In the dressing room was a cap. An official handed it to McKinney.

"It's Vandervoort's," he said. "He won't need it any more."

It seemed fitting to McKinney that, having been in Vandervoort's shoes for five months, he should go free wearing Vandervoort's cap, so he took it and wore it on the trip back home.

Arrested on Charge of Bootlegging

At 7 o'clock next morning Charley Smalley saw McKinney and his uncle, Jim ("Bill") Reno, on the Centerville-Sabina road, near Sharp's schoolhouse, about 10 miles from Wilmington. They had a flat tire and said they had been there three hours. Hooch hospitality was dispensed from the deck of the roadster.

McKinney and Reno were arrested Feb. 26 in Cincinnati on the charge of bootlegging. There was a clear case against them. They were convicted and each was fined $2000 under the Ohio enforcement law. They could not pay. The alternative was to serve out the fines in jail at the rate of 60 cents a day, which would have kept them there almost 10 years.

There was strong suspicion against them in connection with the killing of McCreight. Adams looked at McKinney, under ordinary conditions, and was not sure. Then one night he made what he called a test. McKinney was awakened. Sheriff Will Kirk handed him a sheepskin-lined coat and told him to put it on. He obeyed and was led into a dark corridor. A "toboggan" was placed on his head. Adams pulled the collar of the coat up around his face and stepped back and shot the rays of the flashlamp into his face. "That's the man," he said.

McKinney, on the strength of Adams' identification, supplemented by the statements of others who had seen him in the vicinity, was indicted. Although Adams did not undertake to identify Reno, it was clear that he had been with McKinney, and he, too, was indicted.

There was a severance of the cases and Mc-

NEW YORK, March 3.

WHO are the $100,000-a-year men in the United States? Who pays them such enormous salaries? How did they get their jobs and now that they have them, what do they do to earn their pay?

These are a few of the questions that are likely to occur to the average man who, at this time of year, is having troubles of his own trying to pay income tax on a salary of $3000 or less. The average man is pretty likely to answer his own questions by mentally placing the $100,000-a-year man in the motion picture industry or some other profession wherein reputation or a widely known name renders a value that may or may not be derived from actual services, and dismiss the matter from further consideration. At any rate, he is not likely to think of a plain, hard-working business man as being among those whose annual pay runs to six figures.

But the average man is apt to be slightly in error in his surmises, for salaries of such magnitude are by no means uncommon, even among business men who spend long hours over their desks. This was demonstrated recently by a Senate subcommittee's investigation of the oil industry in which it was disclosed that in one branch of the Standard Oil Co. (the New Jersey corporation) there are at least five men who draw $100,000 or more a year.

Of course, other industries may pay for their best brains just as handsomely as does the Standard Oil Co., but Senator La Follette and his fellow committee members confined their investigation to the oil industry, so attention here will be given to the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, which heads the list, and its officials who draw the most fabulous salaries. They are as follows:

Walter C. Teagle, president, $125,000.

A. C. Bedford, chairman of the board of directors, $125,000.

George H. Jones, vice president and manager of a special department, $100,000.

Seth B. Hunt, vice president in charge of crude oil production, $100,000.

F. D. Asche, vice president and head of the foreign sales department, $100,000.

How They Got Their Jobs

The list answers, to some extent, the question of who the $100,000 a year men are, in the oil industry at least. Now, how did they get their jobs? They didn't inherit them. They are not rich men's sons or the relatives of large stockholders. They are not fat paunched capitalists who spend three to six months of the year playing golf at Palm Beach or cruising on a yacht. The facts are, the men in high positions in the Standard Oil Co. are those who started work with the company some 30 years ago as office boys, tank drivers or clerks. They got to their present places through a course of apprenticeship rigorous enough to break all but the most determined of spirits and their present salaries are simply the reward of long service and efficient work.

The Standard Oil Co. has a well known habit of looking for its directors in its own personnel. Three of the present members of the board got part of their experience in the Canadian subsidiary of the New Jersey corporation, but as the methods of that company are so closely allied with the parent concern, all these men may be said to have received a typical Standard Oil training. The point is that no matter how spectacular a record a man has made in financial administration in other industries, he can rest assured that he will never get a chance to sit around the council table at 26 Broadway. To get there he has got to know oil from the ground up. The Standard Oil Co. demands a knowledge of the rougher phases of the business first and contents itself with the belief that when these phases are mastered there will be plenty of administration heads in the office without importing any. One of the extraordinary features of the recent disclosures at Washington was that there was scarcely a man on the board of directors who had ever been heard of by the general public as an important figure in high finance. They are not important figures in high finance as such. They are primarily oil experts who have devoted their lives to their jobs.

Money an Incidental Objective

None of these men looks upon his salary as anything remarkable. To them, money is an incidental objective. They have found the fascination of the industry greater than the monetary reward. Oil is literally in their blood and they would be willing, as one director is said to have remarked recently, to "play the game for nothing" because of its irresistible lure. That very man is among the $100,000 a year class and he does not consider himself a rich man. Instead, he works just as hard as any beginner struggling to keep his job.

As a matter of fact, there is no loafing anywhere along the line in the Standard Oil organization. Especially is there none in the offices of the $100,000 men. The company demands the entire time, devotion and energy of all its workers. It takes the best that its brainiest men can give throughout their years of preparation for the high places, then when they have reached middle age it rewards them with a salary that enables them to accumulate a handsome fortune so that they can retire in comfort and luxury at the end of a long, hard-working career.

And most of the men who reach the high places in the Standard Oil Co. are ready to retire at 50 for reasons other than their financial independence. As a general thing they are not able after that age to go on with the strain that is thrown upon officials and directors of the great corporation. Most of the directors are between 50 and 60 years of age. They are just rounding out their long terms of service with the highest, and, at the same time, the most exacting positions within the power of the company to bestow. In a few more years they will be played out as far as active service goes, but when they are no longer able to hold the pace they will have something to show for their labor.

Gulttons for Punishment

It is possible that few men would be willing to undergo the strain and the sacrifice of pleasure necessary to reaching the top of the Standard Oil Co.'s payroll, but men who become Standard Oil officials are not average men. They are like some prizefighters—gluttons for punishment. Among them there is a striking preponderance of the type of men who have risen from the humblest positions with no pull outside of sheer ability and who have received what education they have through the school of hard knocks rather than academies. They have always been accustomed to nothing but work and they wouldn't be satisfied doing anything else.

A man who is familiar with the Standard Oil organization and the habits of its officials recently emphasized their peculiar temperament in a remark something like this:

"Suppose someone would come to the average young man of today and tell him that if he sold himself body and mind for 30 years and be at beck and call any time of the day or night, and was prepared to work 10 to 15 hours a day, and at the end of that time he would be paid $100,000 a year, what would he say?

"He probably would say 'Go to hell. I'm going to enjoy myself while I am young.' There you have the difference between the Standard Oil men and the average men."

Now, what are these men like personally?

To begin with, there is George H. Jones. He is a typical Standard Oil official—tall, a little awkward when outside of his work and as unassuming as anyone could expect a George H. Jones to be. He began his business career at the age of 9 as a rag picker at 35 cents a day and has come steadily up the grade to his present job at $100,000 a year. His first job called for 10 hours' work a day and he has been working 10 hours a day ever since. He can't get out of the habit. In spite of his great salary nobody around the Standard Oil offices feels that he is overpaid and most of his fellow officials are convinced that the company could not get along without him.

"Never Learned to Play"

After an interview not long ago a reporter described Jones as a man who apparently had never had much fun in his life. When the subject of golf was mentioned, Jones had this to say:

"You know I have a theory that if a person doesn't learn to play when he is young he never learns. When I was young we worked hard and there wasn't much time for play. After a while you lose the habit of relaxation and you are happier at work. I have tried golf a few times, but my mind was on other things and I really didn't enjoy it.

"The life I led wouldn't have satisfied the young man of today. There was too much drudgery and routine in it and the advancement was too slow. No, I am not a very good example to set before the aspiring young fellow just entering the business world. The truth is, I have never felt secure in any job I have ever held; I have alway felt there was someone just behind me ready to grab it and do the work better than I could."

It was several years after Jones ended his rag-picking career until he finally entered the oil industry quite by accident. He had been clerking in the insurance business, selling typewriters and studying law at night over a considerable period when the opportunity came to get a job as a stenographer in the Standard branch offices at Oil City. That was in 1890. He relates that he had been so accustomed to long hours that on his first day he reported at the office at 7 o'clock and found the doors locked, with the watchman the only person in the building. He sat on the steps for two hours waiting for the door to open. "That wasn't ambition," he explained in relating this incident. "It was simply greenness."

He also tells how he profited by his early study of law.

"I probably read more law than most men in those early days, but I never practiced," he said. "When the dissolution suit came along I was placed on the special legal committee, and my training proved a great help. One Saturday afternoon, just after the Government had filed its suit, I thought I would spend the week-end at Asbury Park. I took along the Government document, and on the way down I made a list of the charges and memorized them. By the time I came back Monday morning I had the entire suit listed and docketed with answers and explanations in parallel lines. That was about my idea of a holiday in those days."

Rise Rapid, Once It Began

It was after Jones had been taken to the New York offices that his real rise in the organization began. He was showing such an aptitude for involved financial matters in his humble job as stenographer that when A. C. Bedford came to make up a "committee on pipe lines" he decided to try Jones out as secretary of it. The trial met with such success that Jones rose rapidly to the position of treasurer. He later was made vice president.

A. C. Bedford himself was a man who came up from a humble beginning just like Jones. Although he now gets $125,000 as chairman of the board, his first job was that of stock boy in a wholesale dry goods house, and he still works as hard as he ever did.

"All the boys," he said to a reporter, referring to the other members of the board, "came from the ranks and they are all hard-working members. We meet every day from 11 to 1 and in addition each member has his own particular job to look after. I don't believe there's a man on the board who doesn't take home a bulging portfolio of papers every night. Sometimes I wonder when some of the boys, like Jones, for instance, get time to sleep.

"We don't allow any of our men to engage in any other business. They have to be content with what we pay them or they can get out. And we don't take on financiers, capitalists or rich men's relations. They're all practical oil men."

The Foreign Sales Expert

Another one of the men who gets $100,000 and one who, his associates declare, earns it, is F. D. Asche, who is head of the foreign sales department as well as vice president of the company. The story of his beginning in business life is much like that of the others. He was first an office boy and then a bill collector for a leather company at the age of 16 and at a salary of $3 a week. Hard work and executive ability and his extensive knowledge of foreign sales territory put him where he is now.

His first experience in the oil industry came in 1892 and was gained in the old Pratt Manufacturing Co., which served as a training school for a large number of Standard Oil executives and which was later amalgamated with the Standard Oil Co. The company did a general oil business, including the manufacture of lubricating oils, and there were few details of operation of the concern that did not come within Asche's field. He worked his way up to the post of head salesman and later he became general manager. His clever work here in the distribution of products won the attention of the Standard Oil Co. and he was called upon to become secretary of the trade export board.

That position involved much traveling and Asche spent a great deal of his time in South America, the West Indies and Europe. He happened to be in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, when the first news of his promotion to the post of vice president reached him. He was so surprised at the news contained in the cablegram, he relates, that he had the message decoded several times to make sure that it had been read correctly and even then could hardly believe his eyes. It was the first inkling of it, he says, that he had received.

Asche also has the long hour habit. Ten hours constitute an ordinary working day and he works on Sundays and holidays during the period when he is traveling. He invariably carries a brief case packed to the bursting point.

Started as Tank Wagon Driver

Seth B. Hunt, who is now vice president and in charge of crude oil production at $100,000, is a man who got his start as a tank wagon driver and he is another who got into the oil business by a purely accidental turn of affairs when family circumstances forced him to abandon his plan to go to Yale University. Hunt was the son of a well-to-do family and had ambitions for a career as a scholar, but just after he finished preparatory school it became necessary to hunt for a job. The first one that offered was a place as errand boy for a bank at $3 a week. He was 16 then and $3 didn't look like a lot of money. He soon began to cast about for another job and he relates this story of the circumstances that attended his entry into the Standard Oil organization.

"There was a kindly gentleman," he said, "who lived in the same block with my family, and meeting him on the street one day I asked him if he could help me out. He proved to be John D. Archbold. He was head of the Standard Oil Co. at that time, but he lived so simply that I hadn't the slightest idea that he was a person of any importance.

"I heard he was in a good business and I thought I would take a chance. He told me to call at his office and I was surprised to find him in important surroundings. I told him I was willing to do anything, but I didn't want to work at 26 Broadway, because I didn't think I would learn anything about the business there.

"He told me he would communicate with me, but it was such a long time before I received word from him that I thought he had forgotten me. He asked me if I would like to go to Providence and work in a branch station. I told him I would and that I was ready to go the next night. I did everything there was to do in the place. My first job was driving a wagon and making deliveries to the small country stores. Later I was transferred to the Buffalo refinery and there I stoked boilers and did odd jobs around the shops.

"I began to pick up some knowledge of the technical side of the business, and when the company put up its refinery in Canada I went up there. Later on I handled all the materials and supplies for the refinery in Rumania. After 13 years at this work I was called to New York and put in charge of the Eagle refinery and appointed to the Committee on Manufacturing.

Built Up Crude Oil Production

Hunt was made treasurer of the company in 1917 and was in charge of its finances during the war. When he became vice president he took charge of crude oil production and during recent years has built the production up from 5,000,000 barrels a year to 50,000,000 barrels. That is one reason, perhaps, why Hunt draws $100,000 a year.

He does not consider his salary nor that of any other member of the board astonishing.

"I don't believe there is a member of the board," he said recently, "who could not go tomorrow and make more money than he is getting paid by the Standard Oil. All of these men have had vast experience in the oil business and possess invaluable funds of special knowledge. I think it would be an eye-opener to the public if it could witness one of our directors' meetings and see the amount of work that is accomplished within the short space of two hours.

"I haven't any doubt we are pictured in some people's minds as a group of fat paunched capitalists who attend a board meeting once a month and spend most of their time at Palm Beach. If there is any lesson to be drawn from the personnel of our board it is that the value of brains and capacity has a chance to rise from the ranks."

None of these men who draw such immense salaries attempts to expound an inspirational theory or to lay down any rules for the guidance of young men eager to succeed in business. Not one suggests that he was fired in his youth with an ambition to become an oil magnate or a $100,000-a-year man. Each came upon his job just as he might have come upon any other job in the pinch of necessity and probably would have succeeded in any other business just the same as in the oil trade.

Teagle a Man of Different Type

Teagle is a man of slightly different type from the others. He was a man who had grown up with the idea that some day he would be called upon to assume a position of importance in the oil business. He may be said to have inherited oil training from his family and to have carried on with the knowledge that his future was assured. EDMONTON, Alberta, Canada, March 3.

"YOU will be taken from the place of your confinement to the place of execution and will be hanged by your neck till you are dead. And may God have mercy on your soul," is the grim sentence of death pronounced by the Supreme Criminal Court of Alberta, Canada, upon two women slayers of men.

Ruthless and cold blooded, but arising out of the enforcement of the Alberta liquor laws, was the murder of Provincial Police Constable Steven O. Lawson by Florence Lassandra at Coleman in the southwestern part of the province in September, 1922.

Heartlessly and with cunning calculation Mrs. Irene May Christensen took the life of her husband as he was stooped, unlacing his shoes one night in the same month in their lonely shack in the wilderness in the northern part of the province.

These two women have been tried in the criminal courts for the killing of these two men. They have been found guilty of murder in the first degree. They have been sentenced to die on the gallows. Shall they expiate their heinous crime by giving life for life on the date fixed by law for their execution?

No woman in the history of Alberta as a province of the Dominion has yet paid the supreme penalty of the law for murder. There is a certain proportion of the population anxious that these two women shall not be hanged. Efforts are being made to get a new trial for the women in the hope of acquittal or at least to have the sentence changed from death to life imprisonment. Shall their lives be spared?

A meek woman, gentle in her ways, but now bearing unmistakable signs of deep sorrow and sad bereavement, widow of the dead Constable, says: "The Lassandra woman shot down my husband like a dog. Was to Have Died Feb. 21

The Lassandra woman, had the sentence of the Court been carried out, should have died on the gallows Feb. 21, but a reprieve of one month was allowed, during which time the Attorney-General of the Dominion will consider whether or not she has a right to a new trial.

The widow scorns the efforts of various women's organizations to have the Lassandra execution commuted to life imprisonment.

The shooting of Constable Lawson in cold blood in front of his barracks on Sept. 21, 1922, is definitely connected with the enforcement of the liquor act of the province and rum-running across the border into the U. S. A. Emil Picariello, "Emperor Pic," as he was called because he was king of the bootleggers, is associated with the woman in the crime and is also condemned to die for the murder of Lawson as both he and the woman were in the death car that drove up to the barracks and both did the shooting. Mrs. Lassandra, it is claimed, was housekeeper for Picariello and interested in his young son.

On the day of the tragedy the police had special instructions to keep a keen eye on rum runners and bootleggers. It was anticipated that there was to be a big rush in powerful cars full of booze out of the province. Picariello's son was observed going through Coleman with a load. Lawson intercepted him. He would not stop. The officer fired, but the car kept on. The driver was only slightly wounded in the arm.

Maddened by the false tidings that Lawson had shot and killed his son, Picariello the elder clutched his pistol, kissed it and placing another in the hands of Mrs. Lassandra, swore, "by —— I will get him," and set out for the barracks of the police in a motor car.

"There is no doubt that Mrs. Lassandra fired the first shot," says Widow Lawson. "'Pic' came to the door and I answered it. He wanted to see Mr. Lawson, so I called him to the door and went back to the kitchen. The next thing I knew the shots rang out and my husband was lying dead beside the house. Little Kathleen (her daughter) saw it all. When Mr. Lawson came out 'Pic' pulled his gun. My husband grabbed his hands and held them aloft. Then Mrs. Lassandra shot and Mr. Lawson ran for shelter at the side of the house. There they killed him like a dog. I have no sympathy with them. They should pay the penalty."

Pair Escaped in Motor Car

"Pic" and Mrs. Lassandra escaped through the village, their car running at terrific speed, causing consternation amongst those who saw them. The hills of the Crow's Nest pass concealed "Pic" for a night and a day. Soon the police of the province and a strong detachment from British Columbia were scouring the country for the gunman. Riddled with bullets the broken down car was found by the wayside, but "Pic" was in the mountains and the woman's whereabouts was unknown.

In a last grim effort to get through one of the strongest cordons of police ever thrown around the Crow's Nest pass, "Pic" failed ingloriously. His proverbial defiance gone, weak, nervous, exhausted and faint from hunger, he surrendered without fight, contrary to expectations.

Caught in the net, "Pic," the master bootlegger, no longer snapped his fingers at law enforcement, but meekly threw up the sponge when officers overtook him as he struggled up the mountain side.

"Don't be afraid, I won't hurt you! cried "Pic," as the officers apprehended him 21 hours after the murder of Constable Lawson.

"Is my son dead?" were the first words of the gunman to the officers.

"No, your son was only slightly wounded.

"And Lawson, how is he?" queried "Pic."

"Lawson's dead."

Bowing his head in a moment's silence at this news, he then murmured: "They told me Lawson had shot my boy."

"Where is the woman?" asked the Constable of "Pic."

"You know where the car was found," he answered. "I left her beside the car. She is in town somewhere."

They found her hiding in a small shack in the village, her pistols empty.

They arraigned them jointly, the man and the woman, for the murder of Constable Lawson.

A hostile mob thronged the courtroom when the trial opened. Many women were present. Feeling ran high. The Crown Prosecutor was cheered. Policemen were called to preserve order.

"Pic" showed nervousness and when the dead man's children appeared tears welled up in his eyes. He was pale and sad.

The woman prisoner displayed no emotion. She was smartly dressed in red, with silk hose and fine slippers. She chewed gum continuously and was cheerful as she left the court at an adjournment. Kissing her friends, she cried: "I'll soon be with you again."

Change in Attitude

Soon, however, there was a lowering of the countenances and a change in demeanor as children of the dead Lawson appeared in the court to tell what they knew of the tragedy. And when little Peggy Lawson, aged 13, told the court that a woman was in the death car in front of the barracks and fired at her daddy the prisoner groaned and crouched in her seat.

The little witness broke down and wept in telling what she saw and women in the court sobbed audibly as the Crown Prosecutor tried to soothe the child, whose pitiful story of the murder of her daddy was interrupted by her own grief.

"I was at the postoffice in the village when I first saw 'Pic' and the women that day," said the little witness. "They were in a great big car. 'Pic' put something in Mrs. Lassandra's lap. It was a gun. 'Pic' swore at the people to get out of the way. The car headed for my daddy's barracks. The car went very fast. In a minute I heard four shots. That's the woman who was in the big car."

Peggy pointed an accusing finger at the prisoner and Mrs. Lassandra sank low in her seat, clutching her hands nervously and her eyes were riveted on the floor. When the heavily veiled widow gave testimony and said that she saw the woman now in the prisoner's box in the car in front of her home, Mrs. Lassandra burst into tears.

Nine-year-old Pearl Lawson, daughter of Widow Lawson, was an eyewitness of the killing of her daddy and in her innocent way told the court what she saw. "I saw my daddy grab 'Pic' around the back, as if to hold him in the car. I saw the woman shoot. Then my daddy 'let go' and fell to the ground."

That unruly member, a woman's tongue, ran Mrs. Lassandra into a lot of trouble. Her downfall is traceable to her spoken words, but not on the witness stand, for her counsel did not place her there to give evidence, but it was what she said at the time of her arrest. In an unguarded moment after the murder she made a confession to the Constable. It was put in against her at her trial.

"I killed Lawson—I shot him in the stomach," she said. "I don't think 'Pic' fired any shots, because he was held by Lawson. I didn't fire until I saw a gun pointed at me. I liked young Steve 'Pic,' but don't tell Charley, my husband," said Mrs. Lassandra. Tears came to her eyes and she made the disclosure about her relationship to young "Pic."

Verdict Returned in 10 Minutes

The testimony of the children and her confession sealed her doom. The jury in 10 minutes returned a verdict of guilty of the murder of Lawson and the woman was condemned to die on Feb 21. Her solicitor secured the right to appeal, but the appellate division refused the application for a new trial. Notice of appeal was served on the Supreme Court of Canada. A month's reprieve was allowed pending a decision as to her right to appeal. It is not thought likely that she will escape the gallows.

Determination amounting almost to a fetish that "Pic" and Mrs. Florence Lassandra shall pay the death penalty is expressed lately by the Widow Lawson. To the Post-Dispatch correspondent she said today:

"Don't think for one minute that I want them spared, whatever the women's organizations tell you. They deserve the fullest punishment there is. There is no doubt that both of them shot my husband."

"But one of them is a woman," it was suggested.

"It does not matter in the slightest. Woman or man, she should hang. The woman is entitled to no consideration whatever because of her sex."

Case of Mrs. Christensen

Mrs. Irene May Christensen, condemned to die for the murder of her husband, goes down in the history of the Province of Alberta as a mystery woman. Little can be found out about her. The police are baffled. She appears to be a wanderer on the face of the earth. She tells little about herself and whatever information she gives is in the majority of instances afterwards found by the police to be unreliable. Authorities put her down as one of the greatest fabricators ever met with in Canadian criminal annals.

She has lived in many parts of the country. She says she does not know where she was born. She was twice married, but does not know where she was living when her first husband died and does not know where he was when he died. She is in the death cell at the provincial jail awaiting execution. Right to appeal the decision of the criminal court which found her guilty is being sought. However, this means little. Appeals from criminal verdicts in Canada, like appeals in the mother country, rarely are successful.

In their lonely farm home, 60 miles north of this city, in the vast Canadian wooded region, Fred Christensen was shot through the face and abdomen several times and died a few hours afterwards of the wounds. It was on the night of Sept. 29, 1922. Believing him to be dead, Mrs. Christensen left home and wandered forth in the night in the Canadian wilderness, a fugitive from justice, taking with her a lantern and a blanket.

Found Working As a Domestic

Though the provincial police scoured the countryside immediately after the crime was discovered, she was not found for several weeks and then under the very nose of constabulary headquarters, quietly working as a domestic under an assumed name in a fashionable West End home. She had come to the city by the same train which carried the body of her murdered husband for burial here. She made no statement when arrested and the police put her down as one of the cleverest women criminals they have met with for some time.

Presenting a stolid front and taking copious notes of police evidence throughout the preliminary trial, she showed no signs of nervousness over her predicament. She sat quietly and frequently called her counsel to her in consultation about certain evidence being presented by the prosecution.

Unmoved, Mrs. Christensen listened to the dying declaration of her husband, which he had made to the attending physician as it was read in court. This was a genuine and startling surprise to her, for she thought she had killed him outright. The declaration ran as follows, quoted by the doctor:

"Between 7 and 8 o'clock in the evening, after doing the chores, I went into the house and was taking off my shoes. My wife stood in front of me with a gun and asked me to teach her to shoot. I said: 'You better not know.' Then she shot me in the face. I got up and went out and fell just outside the door. I got up. She was outside. I walked away. She followed about 10 feet. Then she shot me in the stomach as I turned round. Then, a few steps further, she shot me in the shoulder, and I fell. Then, after she was gone, I staggered to Tom Williams'. To my knowledge there had been no shells in the house for years."

Statement of Christensen

Pitted against this dying declaration by counsel for the woman at the Supreme Criminal Court trial of the case held in January was another statement alleged to have been made by him later to one of the neighbors before Christensen died. A witness said that the dying Christensen said to him: "I do not blame my wife. I expect that after treatment in the city I will recover from the gunshot wounds which I have received. It was just a bad accident and I love my wife."

This was offered in evidence for the purpose of robbing the alleged dying declaration of its legal sanctity. Such declarations are accepted on the ground that the declarant knows he is about to enter the presence of his Maker and the solemnity of the occasion is such he or she would not dare to tell anything but the truth. If there is the slightest evidence that the declarant did not realize his condition and did not believe he was in the very presence of death, his declaration would lose its sanctity and would not be admissible even though death followed the statement immediately. His statement would then be mere hearsay and would be rejected.

Said Husband Was a Bully

"He shot at me first. He missed me. If I had not shot him he would have shot me," declared the woman in attempting to make a case of self-defense at the trial, and she went on to relate how she had lived in mortal terror of the man for months and trembled under threats to kill her.

The life on the farm was a drudgery for her, she contended. Her husband was a bully. He made her plow in the fields. He made her clean the barns, hoe the garden, milk the cows, feed the pigs and do all her household duties as well. She was his second wife and there were always the nasty references to how the first wife worked and never complained.

Unmoved by the undesirable pathos of her story the jury took only 10 minutes to decide the case and return a verdict, "We find the accused guilty of willful murder." She is condemned to be hanged in April.

A curious phase of this case has been the revival of an old murder mystery by Mrs. Christensen while she sits in her cell awaiting execution. She has told the authorities that she was present and saw the Kinrade murder in Hamilton, Ont., in 1909. The victim of that murder was Ethel Kinrade, daughter of T. L. Kinrade, a school principal. Ethel's sister, Florence, was at the home at the time and at 4 o'clock in the afternoon she said a tramp came to the house and shot Ethel. The police were unable to get any trace of the tramp.

At the time of the tragedy the mother of the girls was at police headquarters making a complaint of tramps visiting the house previously, annoying and threatening her and the girls. The sister, Florence, afterwards married and came west to Calgary, Alberta, to reside. When her husband died she went on the stage and is now in Europe studying for an appearance in grand opera.

But the police say it is utterly impossible to accept any of the Christensen woman's statements without full investigation and that goes for this tale as well as others she has told. However, her story of seeing the Kinrade murder is being checked on, though the police are keeping to themselves all that she has told them, pending verification or disproval of her facts.

At present the "mystery woman's" standing on the police records is something like this: Mrs. Irene May Christensen, alias Irene Cleve, alias Irene Allard, alias Irene Bright.

In the witness box at her trial she stated that she had married J. R. Cleve, since dead, at Moose Jaw three years ago. On other occasions she has declared that her father's name was Allard, that her maiden name was Bright, and that when she married Christensen she gave her father's name as Cleve.

Cases Illustrate Surety of Justice Under English Laws

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MONTREAL, March 3.

CANADA is aroused by the prospect of sending two women to the gallows —one for the murder of an officer, another for slaying her husband.

They are Mrs. Florence Lassandra, convicted of killing Constable S. O. Lawson, and Mrs. Irene Christensen, sentenced for the death of her husband. Both are residents of Alberta. Agitation throughout the dominion has arisen to secure clemency and abolish the death penalty for women.

These death sentences together with the recent hanging of Mrs. Edith Thompson in London for the murder of her husband afford striking illustrations of the relentlessness with which justice is administered, even to women offenders, under the English criminal laws. The laws which prevail in Canada are virtually the same as those in England.

Canada's most recent hanging of a woman was 20 years ago at St. Scholastl, Quebec, where a rescue was attempted on the day of the hanging.

The woman and her lover were sentenced for the murder of the woman's husband.

Criminal friends of the man broke into the jail and overcame the police, but soldiers put the mob to rout. The man and woman went to their deaths reviling each other.

supply by developing the fields of Peru and establishing a line of tank steamers in the Pacific Coast to handle production. During his presidency of the Canadian company the production was increased from 2,000,000 barrels to 8,000,000.

Jones Wouldn't Quit Work

Just how devoted the officials are to their work and how few long vacations there are in the Standard Oil organization is illustrated in a story that is told about George H. Jones. In fact, the efforts of the office to make Jones stop work and take a rest have been the basis for more than one anecdote told around the offices at 26 Broadway, but this one finds especial favor among his associates.

It is said that about a year ago, when Jones was 50 years old, his health began to fail. It was clearly apparent that he was slowing up and losing some of the vitality that had been one of his strongest assets. The board met and ordered that he go at once to Atlantic City and spend two weeks there recuperating.

He obeyed orders and took the train to Atlantic City, stayed one day and wired the office that he was all right and was coming back. The board became desperate. The members met again and prevailed upon a relative of Jones, a man of more easy-going temperament, to take him to Pinehurst and play golf with him every day for a month under doctor's orders. Thirty six hours after his arrival at Pinehurst, Jones had boarded a train and was on his way back to New York, having first wired his office that he had completely recovered his health. This is the kind of men to whom the Standard Oil Co. pays $100,000 a year.

Other $100,000-a-Year Men

There are other $100,000-a-year men to be found in branches of the Standard Oil Co. other than the New Jersey corporation. H. C. Folger, president of the New York corporation, is one and there are also W. M. Burton, president, and R. W. Stewart, chairman of the board of the Indiana company.

Folger was connected with the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey from 1879 until 1911, when he became president of the New York branch. Unlike most of the other officials, he was a college man, having received A. B. and A. M. degrees from Amherst and the LL. B. degree from Columbia University. He has long been known as an authority on Shakspeare and has what is regarded as the finest library of Shakspeare in America, comprising some 20,000 volumes.

Burton is also a man with advanced academic training. He received his A. B. degree from Western Reserve University in 1880 and a Ph. D. from Johns Hopkins three years later. He entered the employ of the Standard Oil Co. as a chemist in 1889 and in 1895 was made a general superintendent. From 1915 to 1918 he was vice president of the Indiana corporation and since 1918 has been president.

Stewart came into his position as chairman of the board of directors of the Indiana concern in 1918 through his connection with the company as general counsel. He is one exception to the rule of advancement to a high position only after long service with the company. He was educated at Coe College, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and at Yale. He served as state's attorney of Hughes County, South Dakota, from 1892 to 1895, was Supreme Court reporter, 1895-98, member of the South Dakota Senate from 1899 to 1903 and was a general attorney from then until 1915, when his connection with the Standard Oil Co. began.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache Often Means You Have Not Been Drinking Enough Water

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it may mean you have been eating foods which create acids, says a well-known authority. An excess of such acids overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog, you must relieve them, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the system, so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink. Drink lots of soft water. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

Kinney was tried in August. Murder trials are infrequent in Clinton County and the courtroom was crowded at each session during the two weeks it lasted.

Adams was the star witness. He told how he had turned the flashlight on the man in the alley.

"Yes, sir."

"Is he in the courtroom?"

"Yes, sir."

"I wish you would point him out."

"That is him right there," and he pointed at McKinney.

Doan turned to McKinney. "Mr. McKinney, will you please stand up."

"With pleasure," said McKinney, and he stood up.

"Is that the man?" asked Doan.

"Yes, sir."

If there was any doubt in the minds of the jurors it was banished by the defense. McKinney, knowing himself innocent of murder and confident of acquittal, was at the same time conscious that his movements at about the time of the murder were likely to involve him further in bootlegging operations. He had had one taste of Clinton County justice on that score and did not desire any more of it. So his alibi was constructed with a view to proving that he was elsewhere when the policeman was killed and proving that he was not taking any liberties with the prohibition laws at the same time.

When he was arrested he said he was at the Cincinnati automobile show on Valentine night. When it was discovered that the automobile show did not open until the following night, he said he took his wife that night to see "The Trap" at the Queen Anne Theater. Mrs. McKinney said the same. And there were about 25 witnesses to establish that he was in Cincinnati on Valentine day and Valentine night.

Comic valentines helped the witnesses to remember the day. One of these was a caricature of a preacher holding a prayer book, with a bottle in his pocket. The enjoyment of the occasion was increased by some of the witnesses sending comic valentines without stamps, which necessitated the recipients paying the postage, and that helped them to remember that they had seen McKinney that day.

His Alibi Full of Flaws.

McKinney, instead of saying he had made a mistake about the automobile show, contradicted the several reputable witnesses who had heard his statement. He was evasive and contradictory about other things. He was inclined to be pert. Three of his alibi witnesses appeared to have been drinking. Some witnesses rattled off rehearsed speeches before questions could be asked them. There was a seeming contempt for the sanctity of the oath which was an affront to the court, the jury and the community, for the law is esteemed in Clinton County. And over everything was the shadow of the bootlegger, and the bootlegger is not a popular person here.

Comment adverse to the defendant was caused by the seeming indifference of his parents and other relatives. During the seven months that he was in jail awaiting trial they did not visit him. His father, although contributing to the expense of the defense, did not appear at the trial. His mother came toward the end. No other relatives took enough interest to lend the moral support of their presence. There was sympathy and admiration for his slender young bride, who stood by him, but this did not overcome the presumption against him created by the absence of members of his immediate family.

If there were doubt in the public mind at the conclusion of the State's case it was swept away by the dubious defense. An unusually intelligent jury, applying the principle that an unbelievable alibi is a confession of guilt, had no difficulty in agreeing as to McKinney's guilt. If it had been in St. Louis or in Williamson County, Ill., it might have been different, but this was in Clinton County, O., where a bad alibi is worse than none at all.

At first three members of the jury were reluctant to convict McKinney on the unsupported flashlight identification. Two were quickly won over. The third argued a couple of

Dr. Curl Uses Intestinal Antiseptic

Does Not Operate All Cases of Appendicitis. Non-Surgical Treatment Often Satisfactory.

"Adlerika (intestinal antiseptic) gives entire satisfaction. In fact, I prescribed it in several cases of typical appendicitis with highly satisfactory results." (Signed) Dr. A. C. Curl.

Intestinal Antiseptic.

There is now offered to the public a preparation having the DOUBLE action of an intestinal antiseptic and a COMPLETE system cleanser. This preparation, known as Adlerika, acts as follows: It tends to eliminate or destroy harmful germs and colon bacilli in the intestinal canal, thus guarding against appendicitis and other diseases having their start here.

It is the most complete system cleanser ever offered to the public, acting on BOTH upper and lower bowel and removing foul matter which poisoned the system for months and which nothing else can dislodge. It brings out the gases, thus immediately relieving pressure on the heart. It is astonishing the great amount of poisonous matter Adlerika draws from the alimentary canal—matter you never thought was in your system. Try it right after a natural movement and notice how much more foul matter it brings out which was poisoning you. In slight disorders, such as occasional constipation, sour stomach, gas on the stomach and sick headache, one spoonful Adlerika ALWAYS brings relief. A longer treatment, however, is necessary in cases of obstinate constipation and long standing stomach trouble, preferably under direction of your physician.

Reports From Physicians.

"I congratulate you on the good effect I had from Adlerika since I prescribed it." (Signed) Dr. L. Langiels.

"I have found nothing in my 50 years practice to excel Adlerika." (Signed) Dr. James Weaver.

"I use Adlerika in all bowel cases. Some require only one dose." (Signed) Dr. F. M. Prettyman.

"After taking Adlerika feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express the AWFUL IMPURITIES eliminated from my system." (Signed) J. E. Puckett.

Adlerika is a constant surprise to people who have used only ordinary bowel and stomach medicines, on account of its rapid, pleasant and COMPLETE action. It is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

HOW AN INNOCENT MAN WAS SENT TO PRISON FOR LIFE

hours against the sufficiency of an identification from a momentary glimpse in the rays of a flash lamp, but finally yielded and the remaining question was the punishment to be inflicted.

If Adams' identification had been supported by a single other witness, McKinney would have been sent to the electric chair. As it was, the jury brought in a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree, with recommendation of mercy.

The verdict coincided with Judge Clevenger's opinion as to the guilt of McKinney and he was sentenced to life imprisonment. He was taken to Columbus, Sept. 25. His wife came to Wilmington that day. There was a tearful, clinging farewell; and she stood on the jail steps waving as Sheriff Will Kirk's automobile whirled away on the 60-mile trip to Columbus.

Brige Gets Appeal for Him.

But if the parting was heart-breaking it was not without hope. McKinney was unable to think of himself spending all his life in prison for a crime he did not commit and his wife felt that something would come to light to prove his innocence. Nothing but the knowledge of innocence could have encouraged such hope, for under the terms of McKinney's sentence he was not subject to parole. Nothing but proof of his innocence could ever open the prison doors for him.

His wife could have obtained a divorce and gone her way and left McKinney to his living death. But she gave no thought to that. She went back to Cincinnati and worked as a waitress and a laundress, devoting all her earnings to carrying the case to the Court of Appeals. Judge Clevenger had promptly overruled a motion for a new trial and from this an appeal had been taken. While the case was pending in the higher court Louis Vandervoort, 20-year-old wayward son of a wealthy fruit grower of Jamestown, O., was arrested at Washington Courthouse for holding up a merchant and stealing a camera. Although his father supplied him with an automobile and everything that he could wish, he confessed to several robberies and the stolen articles were produced. He had not used them or sold them and his only explanation of the robberies was that he committed them for excitement.

On information that Vandervoort's cousin, Walter Bangham, had been implicated in the robberies, he was arrested. Sheriff Kirk questioned him. The boy, so timid that he would not go to town to make purchases unless his mother accompanied him, had a great weight on his mind. The Sheriff's questioning gave him a chance to unload it.

Yes, he had been with Louis when

"And," he added eagerly, "I was with him the night that he killed McCreight."

There had been reports that Vandervoort had boasted to his associates that he had killed McCreight, but inquiry had indicated that a group of boys, inspired by motion picture heroics, had been trying to outdo each other by recitals of pretended exploits and Vandervoort's boasts were set down to a desire to impress his friends.

Then Came Another Man's Confession.

But now Sheriff Kirk called Prosecuting Attorney E. J. West, and Bangham made a complete confession. They went to Jamestown and saw Alfred Ferguson and Frank Moorman, to whom Vandervoort had boasted of the killing of McCreight, and he was arrested.

He protested his innocence until one day last week, when he went into court and pleaded guilty to murder in the second degree and was sentenced to prison for life, subject to parole, however, after 10 years. The Bangham boy was sent to the reformatory for an indeterminate sentence.

The arrest and confession of Vandervoort brought into notice an amazing young criminal. He smiled when he made his confession and smiled when he was sentenced to prison for life. And smiled as he told about the killing of McCreight.

The trouble with him, he said, was that he liked thrills, and there were no thrills on the fruit farm. He had read "Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde" and had seen it on the screen three times, twice in one night. That way lay thrills a-plenty. He would be a Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde.

Endowed with a frank countenance and graces of address and personality, it pleased him to employ these traits in ordinary intercourse, only to turn aside, when the craving for thrill possessed him, to drive wildly through the night and rob and, if it seemed necessary, to kill.

A Veritable Movie Criminal.

That Valentine night he required a thrill. He climbed out of his bedroom window and drove away and picked up his Bangham cousin and on into Wilmington. He would get his thrill by breaking into the hardware store, although there was nothing in the store that he wanted. So he drove to the mouth of the alley and dragged his reluctant cousin in with him. Then the policemen came and they spoke roughly to him and he never could bear to be spoken to in that manner. So he shot his way out, just like he supposed Mr. Hyde would have shot himself out of an embarrassing situation.

He dragged the trembling Bangham boy into the machine and they circled a few blocks and came back so that Vandervoort could revel in the excitement that the shooting had created. His one regret was that he did not have a change of clothing so that he could get out of the machine and mingle with the crowd and hear the comments.

He was back in his bed and responded sleepily when his mother called him to drive the old family auto to Dayton and bring back the new one. The new one was not ready, but they left the old one there and returned home by interurban. On the way back young Vandervoort bought a paper. He glanced over the headlines.

"A policeman was killed at Wilmington last night," he languidly remarked.

"I'll Save Him From the Chair."

When McKinney was arrested and tried Bangham wanted to confess but Vandervoort would not let him. "If they give him the chair," he said, "I'll confess and save him." He would have established McKinney's innocence if he could have done it without establishing his own guilt. He had a wild notion to catch Adams out somewhere and "stick him up" and argue him into backing down on his identification of McKinney.

But he did nothing, and McKinney was taken away to prison. "Oh, well," Vandervoort said, "while there's life, there's hope." He was willing to enjoy life while he permitted McKinney to get such hope as he could out of a life sentence.

Hope was all that McKinney's young wife had and it was hard sometimes to keep on hoping. All the week before it had been harder than usual. She had no though of giving up, but she had the blues. Sunday it was the same. But Monday morning the depression lifted. The sky brightened. As she went about her work she hummed a hymn of hope. At noon Judge Arthur C. Fricke, one of her lawyers, called up. "I've got good news for you," he said. "Two boys have been arrested and one of them has confessed that the other killed McCreight."

Tuesday afternoon word came that Vandervoort had confessed and that her husband would soon be released. Next morning she came to Wilmington, expecting to find her husband there, but there was legal tape that had to be unwound.

Bride Hastens His Release.

Judge Clevenger had decided that before he could do anything the case would have to be sent back to him from the Court of Appeals. He told Mrs. McKinney he had written to Judge Wade Cushing of the Court of Appeals at Cincinnati. It would probably be two days before the papers came back. That was too slow for Mrs. McKinney. At her insistence, the Judge's communication was retrieved from the Postoffice and placed in her hands. She went back to Cincinnati. Thursday morning she went to Judge Cushing and he entered an order remanding the case to the Clinton County Court and gave her the necessary papers. She took the next train to Wilmington.

With the case again under his jurisdiction Judge Clevenger issued an order upon the Warden of the penitentiary to release McKinney to

How Stuart's Calcium Wafers Work Out to the Skin and Clear it of Pimples, Blackheads, Boils, Muddiness and Such Blemishes.

The manner in which Stuart's Calcium Wafers influence a beautiful complexion is one of Nature's marvels. Their first action is to remove the sour fermentations that are apt to poison the blood and thus disfigure the skin. Then the calcium itself is a natural agency to skin health and is appropriated by the tissues for its own particular use in repair work. These effects are visibly noticeable to those troubled with a pimply skin, or one that is muddy or red or blotchy, scaly and rough and coarse. The Calcium Wafers induce a reaction to healthier tendencies and soon the pinkish complexion begins to assert itself, the blemishes fade away, the dimples seem animated and the entire appearance is one of vivacious beauty instead of unsightliness.

Get a 60 cent box of Stuart's Calcium Wafers at the nearest drug store and note the wonderful results. You will surely be delighted.

HOW TO GIVE YOURSELF A PERFECT MASSAGE AT HOME EASILY NOW

Beauty Expert Gives Simple Way to Keep the Face Lovely and Cheeks Rosy.

The impression you make at the party, dance or when you meet new acquaintances depends almost entirely on your complexion. Most any fault is overcome by a clear, rosy, pleasing and overwhelming complexion. Therefore follow this advice, and benefit by the experience of thousands of girls and women who are doing it.

First, clean your skin thoroughly by using Black and White Cleansing Cream. When all the powder and accumulated dirt has been rubbed out, wring out a towel in water as hot as your hands can stand. Put this over the face and let it steam for a few seconds. Repeat this several times. Then rub into the skin a little Cold Cream with a circular motion of the finger tips. Wipe off that which is not quickly absorbed by the pores, and rinse the face with cold water. This will close the pores, keep in all the oils which the Cold Cream supplies to the skin, and starts the circulation in your face which brings out the roses in your cheeks.

Now use a little Black and White Porcelle Cream as a protection for just what you have done and as a base for your powder. Get your looking glass and see what a lovely, youthful and charming complexion you have and you didn't have to go to an expensive Beauty Parlor, or take up near as much of your time as some women do who use expensive treatments, but don't get any better results than you will here.

Sheriff Kirk to be brought back for retrial.

"Come along," said Sheriff Kirk, and Mrs. McKinney hurried ahead of him to his automobile, waiting at the curb. The car sped away through a snowstorm on the 60-mile drive to Columbus.

Sheriff Kirk had telephoned the warden to have McKinney ready at noon. He had been dressed out in the quite presentable suit which the State of Ohio gives departing guests and had gone to the hospital within the walls to say goodby to some friends there, but he came quickly when word was sent that the sheriff had arrived. His wife was waiting in the corridor. The barred door swung open and McKinney rushed out. His wife ran forward and he clasped her in a long embrace. No word was spoken.

Freed and in His Wife's Arms.

They were smiling through their tears as they turned to the waiting group of officials and newspaper writers. The remaining details were quickly attended to and farewells and good wishes were quietly spoken. Outside the cameras clicked and the motion picture machines whirred. Then McKinney and his wife were tucked into the car and two hours later McKinney was again seated at the counsel table in the Clinton County Court of Common Pleas.

Judge Clevenger was on the bench. "Mr. McKinney," he began, and McKinney, remembering the day five months ago when the judge sentenced him, rose quickly to his feet.

"You need not stand," said the judge as McKinney resumed his seat, he continued:

"If you were to live a thousand years, we would not be likely to see your case duplicated. You were wrongly convicted, but any jury, in 999 cases out of a thousand, would have done the same thing. The evidence and the manner in which your case was handled would have convinced any jury of your guilt. Nobody could be more sorry than I am for the injustice that has been done you but I want to say for your own good that if you had not been going bad you would not have got in bad here.

Judge Reads Him a Lesson.

"It was bad associations that brought you here. If you go back to that bunch of bootleggers in Cincinnati it will not be six months until you will be in trouble again. You have good parents, who brought you up right. Your wife has stood by you. If you try to go straight everybody will help you go straight. If you go back to your old ways you will not deserve any sympathy. The case against you is nolle prossed. In the liquor case the judgment will be suspended on your good behavior and on condition that you stay out of this county. You are now free.

McKinney arose and said he would like to speak to the Judge in private. He was taken into the Judge's chambers. There he admitted that he had only himself to blame for all that had happened and promised to go straight.

The next train took McKinney and his wife back to the little flat at 1068 Rachel street, Cincinnati, where they have taken up the threads of their lives anew.

Prosecutor Doubted He Was Guilty.

Of all who had to do with the sending of McKinney to prison for life for a murder that he did not commit, S. L. Gregory, who was Prosecuting Attorney, is the only one who had misgivings at the time.

"I always doubted McKinney's guilt," he said. "I told the grand jury so. It was my duty to prosecute and I did so, but the evidence was far from satisfactory. The identification was a mere guess. I have never tried to convict an innocent man. I told the trial jury that if they thought him innocent to let him go, as we did not want the blood of an innocent man on our hands. But public sentiment was strong and Adams said he was positive, and so McKinney was convicted, but I wrote to the penitentiary officials that I had serious doubts about his guilt. I thought that statement might do him good some time. I am very glad that his innocence has been established and that he has been given his freedom."

Only two members of the jury live in Wilmington, Hubert Carhart, a tailor, and Miss Cleo Griffin. Carhart said: "I had doubts of McKinney's guilt at the beginning, but none at the end of the case. The identification was positive and the alibi was weak. But it went clean through me when I heard that we had convicted an innocent man. I couldn't sleep. I wanted to go right up to Columbus and ask his forgiveness. And to think that we might have sent him to the chair! I never went to sit on another jury."

Miss Griffin said: "I was satisfied at the time that he was guilty but I am glad that his innocence has been proved."

Policeman Sure He Was Right.

And as for "Hank" Adams, who made the flashlight identification, he does not accept with good grace his loss of status as the hero of a dramatic identification.

"I have no apology to make to McKinney," he said. "If he hadn't lied so much he mightn't have been convicted. I was sure of the identification, and the bum alibi and everything strengthened the case. I don't know what to say. It's hard to believe that this other fellow would say he did it if he didn't. But there's that other case over at Xenia. Maybe he thought he'd get off easy on this and avoid the other. Bangham says he wore the sheepskin coat and the toboggan, but denies that he did the shooting. Well, I'll say this: If Bangham had that riggin' on he's the one that did the shootin'. The one with the riggin' on sure did the shootin'. The way McCreight and I were standing the other fellow could not have shot us where he did. The one that wore the riggin' did the shootin'. That's positive.

The Xenia case is the killing of another policeman, since McCreight was killed. Without discoverable motive he was shot six times by a man who escaped in an automobile. Vandevoort is said to have boasted that he committed that crime.

As it has turned out, the conviction of McKinney was the luckiest thing that could have happened, both for him and Reno. If he had not been convicted, both would have had to serve out $2000 fines in jail, which would have kept them there nearly 10 years. But on account of the mistake in convicting McKinney Judge Clevenger suspended not only his bootlegging sentence but that of Reno, along with the dismissal of the murder charge on which Reno was awaiting trial.

So it is not altogether magnanimity which prompts McKinney and his wife, happily reunited, to forgive everybody and let bygones be bygones.

DR. WYATT BROWN WILL BE LENTEN SPEAKER THIS WEEK

Dr. Ivins of Wisconsin to Preach Today at Two Local Episcopalian Churches.

The Rev. Dr. Wyatt Brown of Baltimore, noonday speaker at the Lenten services of the Episcopal Brotherhood of St. Andrew at Christ Church Cathedral this week, will begin his series of addresses Tuesday. The Rev. Dr. B. F. P. Ivins, dean of Nashotah House, an Episcopal theological college of Wisconsin, will speak Monday. Dr. Ivins will preach this morning at St. John's Church, 3666 Arsenal street, and tonight at Trinity Church, 4000 Washington boulevard.

The subjects chosen by Dr. Brown for his noonday addresses appear to have been suggested by the recent sermons of Dr. Percy Stickney Grant of New York. Dr. Brown will speak Tuesday on "The Virgin Birth;" Wednesday, "Dr. Grant and Modernism;" Thursday, "Federation of Churches;" Friday, "Chasing Foxes." Dr. Brown was a speaker at the noonday Lenten services here three years ago, when he attacked the after-war wave of spiritualism.

BULL RING HORSES PROTECTED

Devices Covering Bodies Used in France.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, March 3.—Toreadors and parliamentary deputies headed a parade of bull fight fans in a recent demonstration at Bordeaux to show the authorities that they are ready to resist efforts to abolish the "imprescriptible right" to the sport that has become a part of the life of the southern provinces.

The full fight fans, who have often been prosecuted, but remain undiscouraged, uphold the "inalienable right" of man to fight bulls. They declare they cannot see why there should be a fuss over bull fighting as long as heavily-muscled gentlemen of all colors are treated as national heroes for punching each other's noses in the prize ring. They have made one concession to the human societies, however, by adopting body protectors for the horses used in the bull rings.

A Baby Carriage and Stroller Combined

The New Lloydalet

Only a mother, who has the daily handling of a baby carriage, can fully appreciate this unusual new baby conveyance. It combines Baby's first and second carriage in one; is smaller and lighter than any other baby carriage; yet almost as roomy as a large carriage.

Naturally, it is easily handled; and it serves perfectly as a stroller when Baby has outgrown a baby carriage. Because of the small space it occupies, apartment dwellers find it invaluable.

Like all Lloyd Baby Conveyances, it is woven on the wonderful Lloyd Loom—of one fine, endless wicker strand—around and around, in a graceful bowl shape, flawless, smooth and strong. Because of this remarkable loom—the invention of Marshall B. Lloyd—weaving far more perfectly and thirty times faster than human hands, Lloydalets can be bought for a lower price than has ever before been asked for a baby carriage of similar quality.

Ask your dealer to show you Lloydalets.

The only carriage woven in desired shape from one endless wicker strand. Don't accept a substitute. Find the Lloyd name-plate on the seat.

GERMAN FEMINIST HONORED

Complete Writings of Malvida von Meysenburg Issued.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, March 3.—Leaders of the movement among German women for greater freedom have celebrated the 100th birthday of Malvida von Meysenburg by issuing a complete edition of her writings. The centenary of the birth of the philosopher and idealist occurred six years ago, but war conditions prevented the publication of her works until the present time. Carl Schurz once said her memoirs of an idealist, which was really an autobiography, was the greatest book ever written by a German woman.

Malvida von Meysenburg was born a Baroness, the sister of the Baden statesman, Baron William Rivalier von Meysenburg, but broke off relations with her family because of her democratic views and fled in 1848 to London, where she became a teacher, writer and leader among the German political refugees. She moved to Italy in 1870 and became associated with Garibaldi. She also was an intimate friend of Cosima and Richard Wagner, Nietzsche and Liszt. The memoirs of the noted woman were published in 1876, while she was living in Rome. She wrote continuously until her death in 1903.

HOUSE TO ENGROSS BILL FOR PURCHASE OF HISTORIC TAVERN

Landmark in Arrow Rock, Mo., Was Built in 1830—Will Be Given to D. A. R.

By the Associated Press.

ARROW ROCK, Mo., March 3.—A recent decision by the House of Representatives to engross a bill for the purchase of the Arrow Rock Tavern and to give it into the custody of the Daughters of the American Revolution has centered State-wide attention upon the old brick structure. Here, in the days of the prairie schooner, pioneers, plodding westward on the Santa Fe Trail, stopped to quench their thirst, to eat and to rest before resuming the dusty journey. Here tourists now stop to refresh themselves and to view the historic exhibit maintained by the Daughters of the American Revolution. The tavern is partly furnished with objects handed down from pioneer days.

Arrow Rock Tavern was built in 1830 on the Missouri River bluff in this village at which travelers crossed on a ferry, which is maintained to this day. Many of these travelers started at Old Franklin, in Howard County, not far distant, where the Santa Fe Trail originated, according to Miss Elizabeth Gentry of Kansas City, a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Many persons whose names have been written in the early history of the United States tarried here, and then whipped up their oxen to move on to Lexington and Westport (predecessor of Kansas City) and westward.

The tavern remains in a setting not greatly changed since early days when inhabitants of Arrow Rock looked forward to expansion of the town, situated so favorably upon the trail and the Missouri River. Arrow Rock, however, did not greatly expand. When the Missouri Pacific Railroad was built it missed the town and nipped, at least for a time, its hopes.

The human voice is generally believed better than musical instruments for carrying qualities on the radiophone. The baritone is considered the best for registering. Tenors and sopranos have the greatest difficulty in retaining the quality of their voices, but they carry the greater distance.

RADIO—For the Amateur and Expert

WARNING ISSUED TO BROADCASTING STATIONS

Department of Commerce Calls Attention to Limited Service Permissible Under License.

The Department of Commerce has advised broadcasters through the medium of the Radio Service Bulletin that they must comply with regulations and confine their radio activities to broadcasting. A broadcasting license does not permit special tests of radio telephone or telegraph apparatus, communication with specific stations, either ashore or at sea, or any transmission except entertainment, market and weather reports and news on 360 or 400, or 485 meters, as the license may specify.

Some stations have stopped acknowledging letters, telegrams and telephone calls, but they talk to one another, conduct contests, which approximate advertising, and some carry on experiments of various kinds. This practice has become so general that new regulations may have to be provided. Special licenses and waves are necessary for code work, station to station transmission and experimental work. There are too many stations licensed for such operation now, it is explained, and when the broadcasters enter this field the interference increases.

All station owners are advised to give their licenses the "once over" and familiarize themselves with exactly what they are permitted to do.

In the interests of life saving at sea, based upon "S O S" calls, broadcasting stations are cautioned by the Department of Commerce to maintain a careful watch while sending so that they can cease instantly when a distress call is heard and not interfere with the distress signals and messages relating thereto.

This applies particularly on and near the sea coasts. Recently four vessels issued distress calls near Seattle, Wash., on the same day, but so far as was reported by inspectors, no broadcasters happened to interfere. The law provides a penalty in the event of interference with "S O S" calls as is set forth in section 4, "Act of August 13, 1912."

Navy Communication Bulletin.

The Navy Department has begun the publication of the Communication Bulletin, issued in the interests of increasing the efficiency of Naval Communications, especially through greater rapidity and accuracy in handling messages by radio.

Hard vs. Soft Tubes.

A hard tube is one in which there is intense vacuum; a soft tube is one in which a gas is substituted. Hard tubes are amplifiers, and soft tubes are detectors.

RADIO QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

All Queries Must Be Accompanied by the Name and Address of the Sender.

Q. Will the addition of an amplifier to a crystal detector increase the strength of signals received from local stations which are not as strong as "K S D"? If so, please publish the circuit. R. W. R.

A. Yes. The hookup was published in the "Questions and Answers" column in the Sunday edition of Feb. 4.

Q. I have difficulty tuning in the stations that broadcast on 350 and 360 meters. My antenna is 150 feet long and 40 feet high. Please explain if this trouble can be overcome, and if so, how? L. F. P.

A. Yes. Reducing the length of the aerial 40 to 60 feet should correct the trouble.

Q. (1) Please tell me if one two-volt cell from a six-volt storage battery could be used to light the filament of a "peanut" tube? (2) Which is the best "ground," a water pipe or a pipe driven into the ground with a copper plate under it? P. M.

A. (1) Yes, very satisfactorily. (2) The cold water side of the piping system will, in all probability, be the best, and it might increase the efficiency of your set to use both.

Q. My single-wire aerial runs within two feet of a branch of a tree. Could this affect my receiving range? F. W.

A. Not unless the wind blows the wires against the limb in rainy weather.

Q. I have a regenerative set and want to use a "peanut" tube in place of an audion. Will it work, and what changes will be necessary? E. M.

A. Yes. No changes, other than a socket or adapter for the different tube, and a 1½-volt battery instead of a 6-volt type.

Q. What kind of wire should be used for the lead-in? May it be the same kind and size as that used for the aerial? D. S.

A. It may be the same as that used in the antenna. A good way is to use the same wires for the lead-in which form the aerial, by running them through the insulators and down to the lightning switch or arrester.

Q. Is there any license to be paid on buying and selling radio supplies, and making crystal sets? W. K.

A. There is no royalty license on the manufacturing and selling of crystal sets, but a dealer's license is required for buying and selling.

Q. Is it possible to use a regenerative hook-up with a crystal detector? L. A.

A. No. Regeneration is not possible without a vacuum tube detector.

Q. Will a variable condenser be efficient in the plate circuit of a regenerative tuner, and what capacity should it be? C. H.

A. A 43-plate variable condenser connected across the "B" battery and phones will often permit very sharp tuning.

Q. What distance might be expected with a three honeycomb coil set connected to a four-wire aerial, 100 feet long? M. H. S.

A. Signals have been heard over 1000 miles using a set of this kind.

Q. Would there be any danger or objections to using the telephone wire as an aerial?

A. There would be little danger, but you would probably meet with strenuous objections on the part of the telephone company. Don't do it.

Naval Radio Rates.

The Naval Communications Service has doubled its radio commercial rates. After April 1, all naval stations requested to handle commercial messages will charge at the rate of 12 cents a word. It is hoped that this will relieve the Department from further criticism. Emergency commercial service will be continued, however, where there are no other facilities.

Elimination of Noises.

The cause of much "rattling" and other annoying noises in the telephone receivers can be traced to poor connections in the circuits. Either solder all connections, or make them secure under screws or binding posts.

A Suggestion.

An aerial which has one end attached to a tree can be prevented from breaking by placing a pulley on the tree and passing a rope, which is connected to the aerial wire, through the pulley, with a heavy weight hanging at the end of it. When the tree sways, the rope will give either way, thus taking any tension off the aerial.

Sets May Be Calibrated March 6, by Bureau of Standards Signals

Opportunity to Check Instruments and Test Wavemeters on Seven Standard Waves to be Transmitted.

All radio fans will be able to test their wavemeters on standard wave signals transmitted from the Bureau of Standards, on Tuesday evening, March 6, according to a recent announcement.

Commencing at 11 p. m., standard Eastern time, the Bureau of Standards at Washington will send the general call "QST de WWV Standard Wave Signals," followed by the signal "WWV" repeated for five minutes on the following waves: 550, 600, 680, 790, 940, 1150 and 1500 meters.

In the near future it is hoped more wave lengths will be assigned to broadcasters and it will be advantageous for fans to be able to tune in correctly. If the positions of the variable parts of the receiving sets are charted during the tests, the exact position can be predetermined for any of the standard waves used later on.

The tests will virtually furnish a Bureau of Standards test by radio for wavemeters. Broadcasting stations should also calibrate their instruments, so as to be able to check their own transmissions when special wave lengths are assigned.

Announcements preceding the sending of the standard test signal "WWV" on the seven different waves, will be made on that wave and will state the length of the wave in both code and telephone.

The standard wave signals, the bureau explains, may be used by anyone having suitable receiving equipment for calibrating a wavemeter or receiving set.

Results from preliminary standard-wave transmission experiments conducted by the bureau and 30 observers located within 1000 miles of Washington on Jan. 29 and 30 indicate that such signals are most serviceable after 11 p. m., when broadcasting programs are concluded. The tests also showed that the wavemeters of the observers were generally in fair agreement, but some differences were as great as 7 per cent.

If the pending radio bill becomes a law, bureau officials explain, it will be necessary for the Secretary of Commerce to assign carefully selected wave lengths to each radio telephone broadcasting station, and an error as large as 7 per cent would cause serious interference. In view of this, it is desired that the wavemeters used be in closer accord, and to correct these errors for sending and receiving standard wave signals will be sent out.

Wave Schedule March 6.

The schedule of transmission for March 6th follows:
Eastern Time P. M.

	Approximate Frequency Kilocycles per sec.	Wave Length Meters.
11 to 11:15 p. m.	550	550
11:20 p. m.	500	600
11:40 p. m.	440	680
12:00 p. m.	380	790
12:20 p. m.	320	940
1:00 p. m.	200	1500

About April 1, standard wave signals will be transmitted covering the wave frequency range between 1000 and 500 kilocycles per second (wave lengths from 300 to 600 meters), and on about May 1, between 2400 and 1000 kilocycles per second (125 and 300 meters). The last will be of special interest to amateurs. The exact dates and schedules of transmission will be announced later.

A Suggestion in Tuning.

To neutralize the effect of "body capacity" in tuning in radiophone signals, place a sheet of aluminum back of the variometer dial. The aluminum strip should be grounded. Care should be taken that it does not touch the frame of the variometer.

Dont's for the Radio.

Don't forget the importance of little things.

Don't listen to the advice of beginner friends who know no more than yourself.

Don't try to master radio all at once. Begin with the simplest things and work up.

Don't try to drive tacks or nails into bakelite or hard fiber. Drill holes and use screws.

Don't be in such a hurry to try the set that things are skimped and slipshot connections made.

Don't forget that radio is simple, but that common sense is as necessary with it as with anything else.

Don't hesitate to ask questions. Ignorance is no disgrace, and dealers and manufacturers are glad to give advice.

GENTLEMEN:—

Knowing that you are agents for "ZENITH" Radio, it would interest you to know the results that I have had with my "ZENITH." I have had even better results than I had any idea of getting. I have heard all the important stations of the United States and last Friday evening I picked up London, England, and Havana, Cuba, and they came in even plainer than some of the closer stations. I can surely recommend the "ZENITH" for a real long distance set. It would be impossible to get a better set. Last night Havana, Cuba, came in so strong that I lost Los Angeles, to which I had been listening.

Yours very truly,

For the Notebook.

The natural wave length of an antenna is that which will pick up signals without any tuning whatsoever.

It would take a vocal message approximately 12 days to travel the same distance a radio message covers in one second.

One of the uses of radio is the taking of speeches, news and lectures by shorthand students, thus increasing their efficiency and speed.

A loading coil is an inductance connected in the antenna circuit to receive longer wave lengths than the natural wave length of the antenna.

Radio signaling up to the present time is made up of several different methods: Damped wave telegraphy (spark); interrupted continuous wave ICW), and continuous wave (CW).

Records to be played on the phonograph which teach the wireless code, are now on the market and are said to be very good for anyone taking up this interesting and profitable study.

RADIO—For the Amateur and Expert

WHY EFFICIENCY OF PHONES VARIES

"Matched Tone" Theory as Applied to Piano Strings Applicable to Radio Headsets.

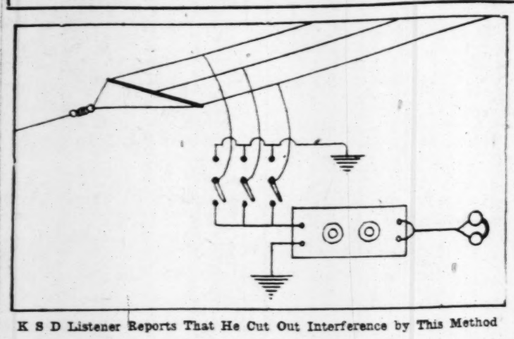
A group of radio experts made a very important discovery which means a great deal to every radio fan since it will allow him to receive the broadcasted programs more clearly and over greater distances. The discovery has to do with the acoustic properties of radio headsets. If two violins or other musical instruments are playing in perfect unison, the resulting sound will be clearer and much louder than would be possible if the two instruments were a bit "out of step"—out of tune—or out of "resonance," as the physicists say. It is also possible to gain an understanding of this phenomenon by considering a note in the middle register of a piano. This note is made by a single key striking three wires of exactly the same length and tension. The result is a strong, clear note, since the sound waves emitted by each wire are "in step" or in tune with each other and therefore they do not conflict. If they did conflict in tone the resulting musical note would be mushy and untrue at all times—would it travel as far as the single, true tone-wave.

The application of this to telephone headsets has made it possible to greatly increase their sensitivity and the clearness of the music or speech they reproduce. In a radio headset each receiver should be carefully matched in tone, so that they will both emit vibrations of the same nature. The receivers must be "sound-mates" if the message is to be clearly understood. This is especially important for distance reception. Matched tone headsets have been found to greatly increase the range of radio receiving sets, as they produce exactly the same tone at each ear. The human ear is more sensitive to vibrations of sympathetic nature.

Suggestion for Winding Tubes.

The winding of cardboard tubes may be improved greatly if the tube is first heated in an oven for about 15 minutes to take out the moisture and then wound, or, better still, shellac it while it is still warm and leave it to soak in.

This Amateur Grounds Two of His Three Aerial Wires



K S D Listener Reports That He Cut Out Interference by This Method

The above diagram was received by the Radio Department with the recommendation that those who are troubled with interference give it a trial.

The amateur used a three-wire aerial with a lead in from each wire connected to the blade of single-pole double-throw switches. Similar clips of both switches are connected together, one side being connected to the receiving set, while the other side is grounded. By grounding the outer wires of the aerial and using the inside for receiving, distant stations, he said, could be heard "through" nearby spark stations.

The Radio Department offers this as a suggestion and will appreciate any comments or further suggestions of any nature which have proven successful.

For a Good Ground.

When grounding a wire to a cold water pipe, do not merely twist the wire about the pipe, but scrape both wire and pipe clean and join them with solder. If this is not possible, use a ground clamp.

POPULARITY OF MARKET NEWS SHOWN BY SURVEY

Grain Reports Rank First, While Livestock and Weather Take Second and Third Places.

Nation-wide, practical use of the radio market reports broadcast by the United States Department of Agriculture is indicated in a survey just completed. Nearly 50 per cent of the hundreds of returns to an inquiry sent out by radio were from farmers who had radio receiving equipment. The remainder of the returns were from grain dealers, mills, elevators, banks, telephone companies, co-operative organizations, farm bureaus and other agencies which disseminate the reports among large groups of farmers.

Greatest interest was shown in the grain market reports, which inform farmers of wheat, corn and oats prices at the leading grain markets. Next in importance came the livestock reports of prices and movements at the principal livestock markets of the country. The weather reports came next, followed by reports on poultry products, fruits and vegetables, dairy products, hay, cotton and other farm crops.

Radio had developed more rapidly in the Middle West in the corn, wheat and livestock growing regions than in other farm sections of the country, the survey shows. Missouri, Illinois and Iowa lead in number of responses to the survey. Many farmers in this territory own radio equipment and praise the practical value of the service. In other sections farmers congregate at central points to get the radio reports, but an increasing disposition toward installation of sets for private use is indicated.

This is the first survey made by the department to determine how widely its radio market reports are being received and used by farmers, and affords much valuable information for developing the service to the maximum of efficiency. It has been known in a general way that the service has been of value to producers and other agricultural interests in the marketing of crops and to consumers through the regulating of market supplies, but definite data were not available until developed by the present survey.

The department practically covers the country with its radio market news and farmers everywhere are using the service to aid them in conducting the business end of their industry. In the replies numerous farmers gave instances of specific savings resulting from use of the information one farmer declaring that he regarded radio as a "direct gift from God." Numerous general stores and banks in small towns say that establishment of their places of business as a central point for receiving the reports had resulted in tremendously increased business in many directions. The service has had far-reaching results other than removing the isolation which surrounds rural dwellers by reason of their location from centers of activity, and the bringing of vital market data to farmers with almost immeasurable speed.

The survey shows that there are now few places in rural districts where people congregate even in small groups that are without the benefits of radio. Agricultural leaders see in this the development of a true community spirit which forms a large part of the base of agricultural prosperity. The Department of Agriculture is much gratified at the popularity and practical value of the radio market news and is now making plans for the further development and utilization of the service.

Radiograms.

New York city has become the radio center of the world.

Some of the cities of the United States have as many as 20 broadcasting stations.

Life-saving boats of the United States coast guard are equipped with radio apparatus.

A regular course of study in radio has been inaugurated in the public schools of England.

It is estimated there are close to 2,000,000 radio receiving sets in operation in the United States.

Opera broadcasted from Chicago, Ill., has entertained practically the entire radio audience of the United States and Canada.

The broadcasting stations WJZ and WOR at Newark, N. J., operating on a power ranging from 500 to 1000 watts, have entertained listeners in England.

Canada has five broadcasting stations.

Many hotels throughout the country have installed radio sets for their guests.

The Department of Commerce has issued licenses to 2859 commercial and 16,467 amateur radio stations.

The new antenna of the Annapolis, Md., radio telegraph station of the United States Navy has 10 miles of wire and weighs seven tons.

The Union Trust Co. of Cleveland, O., has installed a radio broadcasting outfit for sending up-to-the-minute information of major movements of the financial world, together with the vital news of all the markets.

A huge radio transmitting and receiving station is to be constructed in Miami, Fla., for handling South American, Central American and West Indian business to be relayed to New York. The towers of the sending station will be 437 feet high.

Faulty Wiring.

When a steady hum is heard in the receivers after wiring up a set, it may be understood that there is an open circuit somewhere. Trace out the wiring carefully, and some little fault will present itself.

"Flu" and Grippe Coughs Hang On

UNTIL MENTHO-LAXENE IS USED

Unequalled for Coughs Due to Colds, Catarrh, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Whooping Cough and Spasmodic Croup—Read "Startling Challenge!"—Flu and Grippe Cough Go, Too!

SENSATIONAL STATEMENT OF PITTSBURGH CHEMICAL OPERATOR

A Cold and Chemical Fumes Caused Severe Deep Chested Cough

Says He Was "Forced To Sit Up At Night And Rest In Chair" Scores Of Medicines Failed

Dear Sirs: I am not writing this letter for fame and glory, but to show you my appreciation for one of your products—Mentho-Laxene. I am a chemical operator for a local Chemical Co. and have suffered a severe, deep-chested cough for 4 months. Having contracted a severe cold, the fumes in the plant irritated the inflamed membranes and made it worse and I was unable to rid myself of the cold. I took three bottles of R——, two bottles of P——, tried honey and tar—Syrup of ——, etc., but still no relief, and although I saw your product advertised I had lost all faith in the advertised cough cures, but my cough became worse and I was forced to sit up at night and rest in a chair, so I got a bottle of Mentho-Laxene, followed directions very closely—now comes the funny (astounding) part—during the next two days I took 42 teaspoonfuls and I am free from all cough, and all air passages are normal.

This is the first time I have ever sent a testimonial to any company as I never had any faith in those I have read in our papers, but if anyone doubts this, they have permission to white me or even call on me. Thanking you for what your product has done for me, I am gratefully yours,

HAROLD J. TURNER, P. O. Box 73, Wabash Station, Pittsburgh, Pa.

READ! LEARN! PROFIT!

Before a wise doctor and chemists perfected essence Mentho-Laxene with which to make a pint of "home-made cough syrup"—there existed myriads of "cough syrups" sold in tiny bottles at 25c and 50c. Some contained opiates—chloroform, heroin, opium, or the like, and they were "good repeaters"—people bought dozens of bottles in a season. One bottle of Mentho-Laxene equals 6 to 11 of the old kind.

MENTHO-LAXENE, Guaranteed Pure

Mentho-Laxene does not contain any opium, heroin, morphine, chloroform, or any narcotic or habit-forming drugs whatsoever. It is purity alone that makes its efficiency.

OUR STARTLING CHALLENGE!

If you have a stubborn or acute cough due to colds, "Flu," Grippe, Catarrh, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma or Whooping Cough, and you are using any cough medicine (prescription, or ready made), and not getting quick, satisfactory results, then use Mentho-Laxene (price 75 cents), and if within a few days you do not get wonderful, satisfying relief, send us the empty bottle or label and we will at once send you $1.00 without question or quibble, and thank you for permitting us to prove our honesty and faith in the mighty healing power of Mentho-Laxene.

We have used it in our own families for 15 years and we know how pure and reliable it is. If you can think of a fairer offer—tell us about it.

The Blackburn Products Company,
Dayton, Ohio.

It can be taken in 10-drop doses as you buy it—or mixed with sugar syrup. Costs less than half a cent a dose. A bottle of Mentho-Laxene makes a full pint of Quickly-Effective Cough Syrup.

REWARD: The Blackburn Products Company hereby offer a Reward of $1000 if every letter published is not the genuine unsolicited expression of the users of their medicine, given without pay of any kind.

St. Louis Woman Suffered Years With Bronchial Asthma

Awful Attacks Relieved by Mentho-Laxene.

Mrs. L. E. Woodson, 2136 Chestnut St., St. Louis, Missouri, writes: "I have taken one bottle of essence Mentho-Laxene and am starting on another. It has helped me so much that I cannot say too much for it. I have suffered from (bronchial) asthma for several years and shortness of breath whenever the weather changes. At such times I have sneezing, coughing and also have awful attacks of asthma. A friend advised me to try your medicine and I did, and it has helped me so much that I could not do without it. My coughing is almost gone and I don't suffer with the asthma now. I think it is gone or on the way of going. I have not been so well in years."

NOTE: We do not claim that Mentho-Laxene can cure asthma, but the benefits of relief, alone, is worth much to those who are so afflicted. Should it fail to help anyone, purchase price cheerfully refunded.

St. Louis Family Has Adopted Mentho-Laxene Past 3 Years

Husband Coughed All Winter Before Taking

Mrs. E. Snodmeyer, 4307 N. 20th St., St. Louis, Missouri, writes: "I am writing in regard to your wonderful medicine, Mentho-Laxene. I must say it has proven its worth in our family for the past three years, as we are all subject to colds in the winter months, and especially my husband always had a bronchial cough all winter, but since taking Mentho-Laxene, he is never troubled any more. We have bought six bottles since we began its use and many thanks to you for the good medicine and the St. Louis Star for the advertisement, which called it to our attention.

ACCESSORIES GAINING IN FAVOR WITH BUYERS

New Auto Models Loaded With "Extras," Bumpers and Wind Shield Wipers.

"Say it with accessories," seems to be the watchword of the automobile manufacturers this year, according to R. C. Frampton, president of the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co., Hudson and Essex distributers. The trend toward special equipment is noticeable on most of the new autos recently announced by the factories.

From bumper to bumper and from tail light to headlight one may see many different kind of accessories—devices that add to the comfort and convenience of driving and riding in automobiles.

There is the automatic windshield wiper which the press agents dote on mentioning as standard equipment. There is the specially built bumper to withstand the impact of a heavy blow. Many different kinds of bumpers are being shown and many have been made standard equipment.

It doesn't pay to make sport of an inventor showing some device to put on an automobile to aid carburetion, help in the lighting arrangement or aid the driver in some way or other.

The story is told of a man who went begging to get someone to take him seriously when he tried to make the vacuum tank a standard equipment on some well-known cars. He was at first considered a dreamer. All motorists know the success of the vacuum tank giving the vacuum feed theory a practical turn. It is today standard equipment on most cars. Of course, many theories are discarded and many failures mark the trail of the inventors of motor vehicle accessories.

Special tire carriers, aluminum steps, cord tires, motometer locks, steering wheel locks, special steering wheel devices, special tops, disteel wheels, heafers, shock absorbers and a score and one other devices come naturally under the head of "accessories."

One of the accessories that is riveting a great deal of attention on the part of engineers relates to windshield wipers. A well-known make of wipers gets its power off the vacuum feed. Several others have been invented which take their power from the mechanism of the water pump, fan or other part of the chassis. The automatic windshield wiper undoubtedly is one of the principal devices invented recently as a safety-first measure. Many accidents are attributed directly to impaired vision due to rain, snow, sleet or some other cause. To keep a clear vision ahead is one of the principal concerns of the motorist.

RICKENBACKER CAR DOES 83 MILES PER HOUR

On the frozen two and one-half mile bricked oval of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, a Rickenbacker touring car recently traveled at the rate of 83 miles per hour. The test was made with top and windshield up, complete equipment and a full complement of passengers.

The car was run for a solid hour at the rate of 63 miles an hour previous to the trial for speed. In a speed trial a Rickenbacker sedan made 72 miles per hour.

The sedan was driven on a non-stop 500-mile tour of the course at the rate of 52 miles per hour and the touring car was driven 250 miles at a speed of 58 miles per hour. At a speed of 83 miles per hour, the Rickenbacker motor was turning up 4100 revolutions per minute, according to C. L. McCuen, who conducted the tests.

The trials at Indianapolis were made at the conclusion of a 4500-mile experimental drive conducted with two Rickenbacker cars. Leaving Detroit the cars were traveled around the lake to Cleveland, thence to Buffalo and on to Springfield, Mass., south through Connecticut and into New York City. From New York the cars were driven through Philadelphia, west over the mountains to Pittsburg and a dash from Pittsburg to Chicago—a distance of 580 miles—without a stop, in 22 hours.

The Diesing Motor Sales Co. distribute the Rickenbacker in St. Louis.

The Ledix shield is adjustable and when set at the proper angle is of great assistance in keeping the windshield clean when driving against a storm. It is easily attached and needs no mechanical aid in its application or adjustment.

CHEVROLET HAS MADE ONE MILLION CARS

The announcement was made before a gathering of St. Louis Chevrolet dealers last Friday. Mr. Fuhr also stated that the Chevrolet jumped from the rank of seventh place to second place in the automobile industry during the past year. He attributed this rise to the many improvements made on Chevrolet cars during the past year.

Announcement is also made of the organizing of a dealers association in St. Louis, consisting of 16 Chevrolet dealers, as follows: Belmont Motor Co., Bevington Motor Car Co., Big Four Auto Co., James H. Brown, Century Auto Co., Eichor & Sons, Flint Motor Car Co., Gilliam-Epstein Chevrolet Co., Grinham-Johnson Motor Sales Co., Hoffman-Dicks Motor Co., McCarthy-Pardue Motor Co., Montague-Reichardt Motor Co., Orthwein Motor Corporation, Phillips Motor Co., Standard Motor Car Co., and Wells Motor Co.

The customary type of crankshaft used in four cylinder motors—has only 3 bearings.

~Eliminating Vibration At its Source

The fact—that you can put the Gardner Four through its entire speed range without discovering the commonly expected "vibration point"—is daily becoming known to increasing numbers of Gardner owners.

The reason—the five bearing crankshaft—represents a notable contribution to four cylinder design, worked out and applied for the first time in this improved Gardner motor.

Five bearings—five points of support for a swiftly turning shaft—five points instead of the customary two or three to reduce vibration and wear—five giant hands, rigid in their grip yet velvety smooth, holding the crankshaft in true alignment to deliver power without whip or sideplay.

What five main crankshaft bearings mean in developing power without destructive vibration and in lessened wear of almost every moving engine part can be appreciated at once by anyone who knows motor cars.

What they mean in improved behaviour on the road under all conditions of driving can be fully realized only when you yourself take the wheel of a Gardner Four and get the "feel" of the car.

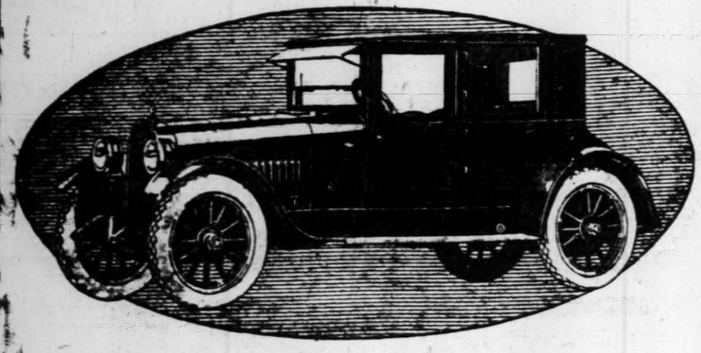
Tire Placement for Safety.

It is safest to place weak tires on the rear wheels and reserve the strongest set for the front. A blowout of a front tire may cause the car to swerve, with a variety of serious results. A rear tire blowout seldom has any serious after effect.

Standard Gearshift.

The standard form of gearshift is that in which first or low speed is to the left and back, second or intermediate speed is to the right and forward, third or high speed to the right and back, and reverse is to the left and forward. This applies to a left-hand-driven car.



Closed Car Advantages Costly Car Performance

In the Coach, Hudson for the first time made possible a closed car under $2,000 on so great a chassis as the Super-Six.

By every proof—official records and the satisfaction of more than 140,000 owners—Hudson holds place among the few truly great cars. It has outsold all fine cars for nearly eight years.

Now, with the new motor, it is the greatest Hudson ever built. It is smoother, quieter, more enduring and reliable. With its superb mechanical excellence the Coach gives every essential closed car advantage, at little more than open car cost.

OIL MEN'S CONVENTION TO BE HELD AT CHASE

The formal program for the business meetings at the convention of the national Petroleum Marketers' Association at St. Louis, March 6, 7, 8, has not yet been announced, but it is understood that the plan adopted for former conventions will be followed generally. The carload marketers will be given an opportunity to present their case to the jobbers.

It is believed by association officials that the association will best serve the needs of its members if open forums are maintained to learn what is the will of the majority, and to work for common good of all members.

The exhibits will be placed in the enclosed roof garden atop the Hotel Chase. All space has been reserved for the convention, and a number of exhibitors were unable to get space. The unusual interest being displayed presages the best meeting yet held.

The St. Louis Petroleum Club is making arrangements for the entertainment of all visitors. A part of the entertainment as planned will include a complimentary luncheon to all registrants, including the ladies, on the opening day, at which the St. Louis Petroleum Club will act as hosts, and welcome the guests to the city. Several distinguished speakers have been engaged for this luncheon. On the second day there will be a motor ride for the ladies during the afternoon and a theater party at night. A stag party for the men will be given by the club in the evening. The third day's entertainment will consist of a bridge party in the afternoon for the ladies, and the Association banquet at night.

In planning the entertainment it has been so arranged that it will in no way interfere with business sessions of the Association.

A list of the exhibitors follows: National Recording Pump Co., Dayton, O.; Dawes Electric Sign and Mfg. STOP BEFORE YOU START, URGES BRAKE EXPERT

"Try stopping before you start" is the apparently paradoxical advice offered to automobile drivers by J. W. Perry, general manager of the automotive department of Johns-Manville, Inc., in a statement concerning the relation of defective brakes to automobile fatalities.

"If every driver could be induced to test his brakes before engaging his self-starter," says Mr. Perry, "automobile accidents would be materially reduced. This is not the only test that should be made in the interest of safety, and particularly does not preclude the advisability of a thorough brake inspection at least every 500 miles or once a month; but it would prevent what is nown one of the commonest causes of accidents.

"Brakes which may work with perfect results on routine stopping and slowing down are capable of failure in a moment of real emergency, simply because of the driver's neglect to test out the brake mechanism before starting. Full application of either brake, it should be obvious, is impossible when the driver has failed to keep the brake rod turnbuckles adjusted to the action of the foot pedal and its distance from the floorboard, and to the action of the hand brake and its distance from the end of its slot. When emergency braking jams the foot brake pedal into the floorboard, or the hand brake lever into its slot, accidents are bound to happen. It's much safer, and cheaper, to stop before you start than to start without this test and to find out too late that your brakes fail to hold."

NASH SHIPMENTS SET NEW RECORDS

Shipments from the factories of the Nash Motors Co. for the first month and one-half this year exceeded total combined shipments of January, February and March, 1922.

"In 1921 there were built and shipped 20,000 Nash cars," said E. H. McCarty, sales manager of the Nash Motors Co. "Last year 40,000 Nash cars went into the hands of buyers. This year the demand is far greater than at any time in the history of the company, as evidenced by shipments during the first month and one-half of 1923."

Plant extensions, made necessary by the increasing demand for Nash cars, have given Nash Motors 405,000 addition square feet of manufacturing floor space. Including the Nash Six plant at Kenosha, the Nash Four plant at Milwaukee and the Seaman body plants also at Milwaukee, one-half ownership of which is vested in Nash Motors, the company has all told 155 acres of ground and over 2,500,000 square feet of floor space devoted to the process of production.

Capacity of the Nash Four plant has been doubled, as has also the main plant of the closed body factory. One building just completed at the Nash Four plant is 600 feet long, 100 feet wide and three stories high; it has 180,000 square feet of floor space. The power plant at the Nash factory also has been doubled in size and capacity.

It is pointed out that the extensions to the four-cylinder plant will effect a greater capacity for the Nash Six as well, owing to the fact that many operations on the four have been transferred frim Kenosha to Milwaukee. The Nash is distributed in St. Louis by the Southwest Nash Co.

Merit Wins New Honors

The great public esteem toward the new Overland has been earned by merit rising above comparison. Greater value has lifted Overland to the highest place in its career.

This is the finest Overland ever built—and at the lowest price. Body lines are longer. The hood is higher. Seats are lower. Triplex Springs (Patented) give greater comfort. The tires are first quality Fisk cords. And the faithful Overland engine yields remarkable economy—25 and more miles to the gallon.

"Mileage Basis" Plan

Have you learned about Oakland's new "Mileage Basis" Plan for 1923?

How this Plan provides a new, definite and logical way to gauge motor car value; how trouble-free miles are now made the standard of measurement?

Think what it means to have main crankshaft bearings and connecting rod bearings function properly for at least 40,000 miles without attention, to have valves which will run perfectly for 15,000 miles without grinding, to have a 15,000 mile guarantee against "oil pumping", to get 20 to 25 miles on a gallon of fuel and 15,000 to 25,000 miles on tires!

These actual mileage figures are offered as a definite proof of the high quality built into the Oakland Six. They are dependable and conservative figures—figures based on accurate knowledge, such as you would expect from Oakland—a permanent division of General Motors.

Before you buy a car, at any price, you should examine the 1923 Oakland Six—the car which has made possible this most remarkable "Mileage Basis" Plan.

WILLARD INTRODUCES NEW RADIO BATTERY

The Willard Storage Battery Co. of Cleveland, O., has recently introduced to the market through its service stations a new 24 volt "B" battery. It has a little over half the capacity of the larger Willard "B" battery. It is rechargeable and, besides, is claimed to have greater capacity on a single charge than the larger type dry "B" batteries.

The Willard Threaded Rubber Insulation is used between plates built of exceptional thickness for steady voltage and long service. The particular construction of this battery makes recharging necessary only at long intervals.

Possibility of external leakage has been eliminated by the use of an air gap around each of the twelve cells.

It is especially built to give very satisfactory service on any kind of receiving set, and is of ample capacity for use on sets employing loud speaking devices where higher plate current is necessary.

The new battery is now being displayed by the Battery Service Co., of St. Louis, Willard distributer.

ANDERSON MOTOR CO. OPENS SERVICE BUREAUS

The Anderson Motor Co. is giving a novel service to automobile owners. In cities where Anderson dealers are located postcards are being sent out informing the recipient that the Anderson Motor Co. will furnish information and assistance on any matters pertaining to automobile tours, foreign or in America. This is the only specific arrangement made to date, but the card also indicates that the same help will be accorded on any matters pertaining to the automobile.

The Anderson Motor Co. is making some new departures in the field of service. The foregoing announcement is one advance, while it also is giving extensive attention to safety work. This work is done merely to assist the presently overworked bureau specializing in the study of safe practices, observances and legislation.

The Anderson Six is distributed in St. Louis by the Hawkins Motor Co.

HUPP BUSINESS SMASHES ALL JANUARY RECORDS

All records of January shipments of Hupmobiles from the Hupp Motor Car Corporation's plant in Detroit were smashed last January, according to information just received from Detroit by the Weber Implement and Auto Co., Hupmobile distributer. More than twice as many car were shipped as in any previous January.

Hupp shipments totaled 3400 cars and, because of railroad transportation difficulties, there were more than 600 unfilled orders. Export shipments were also more than twice as great as a year ago.

In only five other months in Hupp's 15 years of automobile manufacturing have sales been greater than last January. If all orders could have been filled, all monthly records would have been broken, it is announced.

DAVIS PROUCTION SHOWS LARGE INCREASE

The production of Davis automobiles since the first of January has been more than 300 per cent over and above their production for the corresponding period of 1922, according to announcement made by the George W. Davis Motor Car Co. of Richmond, Ind., to the Monarch Motor Co., distributers.

This unusual increase in production is in line with the recent statement that Davis production would be doubled during 1923, and follows a period of seven months during 1922 during which all previous production records were shattered.

The remarkable sales records which have been set by the George W. Davis Motor Car Co. since last June have been the result, largely, of the popularity of the Davis series 70 "light six" models which were announced just about a year ago, and put into quantity production a short time later.

PAIGE DETROIT SALES SHOW 350 PERCENT GAIN

The healthy condition of the motor industry is reflected by a comparison of the production and sales of the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Co. for the first two months of this year with 1922, according to Harry M. Jewett, president.

In January and February, 1923, the sales were 350 per cent greater than the first two months of the previous year. The production, planned in the expectation of the best possible market conditions for similar periods was only 261 per cent greater, says Jewett.

The Newell Motor Car Co. distributes the Paige and Jewett cars in St. Louis and adjacent territory.

YELLOW CAB CO. NOT TO BUILD R. & V. MOTOR CARS

The Yellow Cab Manufacturing Co. will not take over the manufacture of R. & V. motor cars; neither will it use a Knight motor in its manufacture of taxicabs. While the company has purchased R. & V. motor plant at Moline, Ill., it is only for the purpose of building engines for the Yellow Coach Manufacturing Co., and other manufacturers of "commercial vehicles," according to information contained in a statement signed by President J. A. Ritchie of the Yellow Coach Manufacturing Co.

The R. & V. motor car will be manufactured and merchandised by its present organization at Moline and is in no wise affected by the purchase of the R. & V. motor plant, according to the statement.

A Cure for Creaking Wheels.

Creaking wheels are many times caused by the drying out of the wooden spokes. A few drops of kerosene, allowed to work into the spoke joints, will restore them to their proper condition.

Recharging Weak Battery.

When a battery gets low unexpectedly, do not run the engine idle just to charge it, except possibly for a few minutes. Running an engine idle chokes it with oil and carbon, and the cost of the gasoline is out of all proportion to the quantity of electricity produced. The proper way is to remove the battery and have it charged at a service station.

The Quality in the Jewett Six!

Cash buys this Jewett Touring
Balance monthly

If you are acquainted with the Jewett, even by hearsay, you know it is superbly powered. No car of this size was ever before furnished with a motor so large. But do you realize that Jewett throughout is as conscientiously well built as it is high-powered?

The Jewett chassis was deliberately designed to be the finest of its size, to stand the performance its power makes possible. You can judge this sturdiness of construction by Jewett weight. The touring car weighs two hundred pounds more than any other car this size—which means enduring service to the Jewett owner. An exceptionally heavy frame, 6 inches deep, specially cross-braced, is the stiffest and stoutest you can find in any car of this size.

Jewett axles are Paige-Timken built. The Jewett front axle with ball-bearing spindles gives remarkable steering ease. The Paige-Timken rear axles have spiral bevel drive, and are built of extra-tough steel so they can be light yet strong. This reduced weight below the springs makes Jewett easy riding.

The clutch and transmission in the Jewett give revolutionary freedom from care. Imagine a car whose clutch can be "jumped" in as quickly as you can lift your foot—yet neither jerk the car nor stall the motor. Move the control lever fast or slow as you please. There is no clash; you never "miss." Small wonder Jewett is a car all women delight to drive!

The great power of the Jewett is transmitted through two universal joints of the finest steel, built to be oiled, not greased. So tightly is the oil sealed in that renewal but once a year is sufficient.

A high-pressure oiling system assures the smoothness and silence of the splendid 50-horsepower Jewett motor. No other car in this class was ever given a motor so perfectly oiled. Every minute three gallons of oil are forced to all main and connecting-rod bearings, and sprayed over the entire internal mechanism. Always a film of oil under pressure defeats friction and long postpones the day when a Jewett motor will need overhauling.

Jewett has cord tires, built-in transmission lock, generous upholstery of honest leather, and snug-fitting weather-tight curtains. Here is high value for price that is undeniable! Verify this Jewett excellence in your own way—prove its quality by test, before you buy any car. That is the only consideration Jewett asks!

Gossip and Gaiety of Tea Shops Enliven the Somber Days of Lent When Parties and Balls Are Halted

Music Also Playing Conspicuous Part in Diversions of Society —Lenten Lectures Popular—Dramatic Recital to Be Given at Hotel Chase Tomorrow Morning.

IN these somber days of Lent when the brilliant parties and balls of the season just closed are growing fainter in the memory and the events to follow Easter are still too far in the future to inspire thrills of anticipation, there are a few places to be found where fun and frivolity still reign in spite of the dullness that pervades the social air outside. These scenes of merriment are the tea shops. There laughter is not frowned upon, and the debutantes remaining in town have not been tardy in taking advantage of the opportunity to provide their own amusement. Into these attractive shops they stroll, in groups of twos or threes, for one o'clock luncheon. These groups may merge into larger ones, and seated around gaily painted tables they linger over a dainty sandwich or a salad, and discuss, Oh, topics of great moment—a possible course of study, a sewing club, clothes, and certainly their next engagement. Later in the afternoon one meets other social leaders, matrons perhaps, on their way home from a lecture or a concert, a dowager or two, seeking refreshment amid cheerful surroundings after shopping tours and school-girl sub-debs, having tea.

Music, which figures prominently during Lent plays as usual its conspicuous part, and society "does" the Symphony concerts, as well as those of the smaller organizations. Lenten lectures, particularly those given by the Very Rev. William Scarlett, Dean of Christ Church Cathedral, are proving most popular this year. Mrs. Greenfield Sluder has graciously given her home every Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock to these talks, and dozens of women attend. Mrs. Fitzhugh Turner is President of the Churchwoman's Club, under whose auspices they are given, and women socially prominent are officers.

In preparation for spring, the Garden Club is already discussing its annual exhibition, and its members making plans for beautifying their lawns.

A magnet to draw the social world from its regular routine tomorrow is a dramatic recital in the ballroom of the Hotel Chase tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock. Miss Elizabeth Morse, reader; Miss Alice Pettingill, pianist; Mrs. Hector M. E. Pasmezoglu, soprano, and Blanche Herrick Hopkins will participate in the program, which includes piano compositions by Mrs. Ellis Fischel. Among the women responsible for the giving of the musical are Mmes. Edwin Mallinckrodt, C. H. Hiemenz, Thomas W. Carter, Charles A. Leonard, S. F. Friedman, Ben P. Goodwin, Philip S. Noble, Robert M. Price, R. L. Goode, Auguste E. Ewing, H. H. Merrick, Melville Smithers, E. L. Ople, Thomas B. Cassell, H. L. Conner, Andrew W. Johnson, Arthur Wright, Charles T. Davis, W. U. Crane, A. M. Hill, W. L. Lewis, Benjamin G. Chapman, B. S. Pearson, Richard A Jones, Lloyd Speed, Charles P. Noel, George Bergfeld, L. M. Hale and others.

After all the stay-at-homes, and there are many this year because of the unusually pleasant weather in St. Louis, while not gay, are finding things to keep them interested during the long days until Easter.

A number of entertainments are being planned for Dr. Hendrik Van Loon and Mrs. Van Loon, who will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Eiseman, March 18, 19 and 20. Dr. Van Loon, who is a famous historian, will lecture under the auspices of the College Club at Sheldon Memorial on Monday evening, March 19, on "History and a World Point of View." Mrs. R. H. B. Since the discovery, in 1896, of Nadinola, a marvelous bleaching cream, thousands of beautiful women have learned the secret of Skin Re-creation

Are you one of them? Do you know this method of skin re-creation?

The incomparable beauty of thousands of southern women, that smooth, satin-like skin texture so much admired—is the result of Nadinola Cream, which has proved itself for more than a quarter of a century the standard beautifying and bleaching cream. There are many imitations but no equal.

Scientists long ago discovered and combined in Nadinola Cream those elements which bleach the skin, remove tan, freckles, pimples, and blackheads. Nadinola Cream is now the choice everywhere by women who care.

Let Nadinola Cream re-create your skin. By its own peculiar properties and virtues not found in any other preparation—Nadinola Cream rids the skin and pores of impurities, smooths away wrinkles and leaves the skin healthy, smooth and beautiful.

It is a pure white cream, scientifically compounded and delightfully perfumed with attar of roses. It is inexpensive. Applied at night, the 50c. package is sufficient to remove mild cases of tan, freckles, blackheads and other discolorations, and the $1.00 size for the most stubborn cases. Directions and binding guarantee in each package. Get Nadinola Cream at your toilet counter, use as directed and you will be delighted.

National Toilet Company, Paris, Tenn.

Don't Blame Your Shoes For Tired Feet

Your shoes aren't always to blame for tired feet! Shoe comfort depends so much on the condition of your feet. First correct the cause of that pain in your feet, then see how good your shoes will feel.

If your feet ache, if they tire easily, if your instep or ankles pain, you probably have a tendency to "weak foot." If neglected, this condition will grow steadily worse.

Give the foot a scientific support to keep the arch from falling.

We Understand Feet

Come into this store any time and let our foot expert examine your feet and advise you how to have constant foot comfort. He is able to relieve and correct your foot troubles by fitting and adjusting the proper appliance to your feet. Let him demonstrate to you on your own feet

MRS. HARDING EVINCES RETURNING HEALTH AT SOCIAL EVENTS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 3. — Two splendid evidences that Mrs. Harding has once more recovered her health were given last week. The first was on the occasion of Mrs. Harding's reception of the women social correspondents of Washington at a special tea in her sitting room on the second floor of the White House. These news scribes found the first lady of the land, after an enforced retirement from all social activities for nearly a year, somewhat fragile, but still with the flush of returning health on her cheeks.

In a touching little conversation with some of the women she told how the prayers of the American people had given her strength to fight her grim battle with death successfully. She was beautifully gowned in gray chiffon, over which was thrown a crimson lounging robe. She walked unassisted into the room and seemed strong. It was noticed that she no longer wore glasses. Evidently the rest has strengthened her eyes.

The second occasion was the first formal dinner at the White House since her illness, over which she presided. This was given Thursday night to the Vice President and Mrs. Coolidge and the members of the Cabinet and their wives. All the guests were happy over the first lady's recovery and it is said that she was much touched by their evident delight at her good fortune in recovering from her tedious illness.

A curious little incident occurred in connection with the dinner. Prince Caetani, the Italian Ambassador, had arranged a dinner for Thursday night, at which the Vice President and Mrs. Coolidge were to have been guests of honor. When the White House dinner invitation came, which is recognized as a "command," as it were, and cannot be regretted, the Vice President and Mrs. Coolidge had to withdraw their acceptances from the Prince. His dinner for the Secretary of State and Mrs. Hughes last week had to be canceled because they were suffering with "flu."

All is in readiness for the Hardings' trip south next week. They expect a delightful five weeks of real rest on the houseboat Pioneer, owned by Edward Beale McLean, publisher of the Washington Post. The Vice President and Mrs. Coolidge will remain in Washington during their trip in the South, according to their present plans.

Just as the presidential party is about to leave the capital has a real thrill in entertaining Prince Christopher of Greece and the Princess Anastasia, formerly Mrs. William B. Leeds of New York. Prince Andrew and Princess Alice, who have been at Palm Beach, also are with the party, which is quartered at the Hamilton Hotel. Many special functions will be given in honor of the Greek royalties. Lions are scarce these lenten days, just as Congress is adjourning, and the visitors will not lack attention, even from the blase residents of the Capital City.

Active in the social notices of the past week have been Rear Admiral and Mrs. Coontz. Mrs. Coontz assisted Mrs. Denby, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, at her reception Friday in honor of the officers of the navy and marine corps and their wives. Mrs. Coontz presided over the tea table.

Mrs. Marion E. Rhodes, Mrs. Edward D. Hayes, Mrs. Theodore W. Hukreide and Mrs. Henry F. Lawrence, wives of Representatives from Missouri, entertained at luncheon at the Hamilton Hotel Friday in honor of Mrs. James A. Reed and Mrs. Selden P. Spencer, wives of the Senators from Missouri. Among the guests were Mrs. Sidney C. Roache, Mrs. Cleveland A. Newton, Mrs. Harry B. Hawes, Mrs. Edgar C. Ellis and Mrs. Isaac V. McPherson, wives of Representatives, and Mrs. Leslie E. Cole and Mrs. Edward Keyser of Washington. The table was adorned with a large and gracefully arranged cluster of spring blossoms.

Much delight was expressed here in both official and social circles in the announcement that Dwight Davis of Missouri had been appointed Assistant Secretary of War to succeed Mayhew Wainwright. Mr. and Mrs. Davis are popular here among their fellow Missourians and received many congratulations from them when the news of the appointment was made public.

A beautiful tribute was paid to retiring Representatives from Missouri and their wives by the Missouri State Society Thursday night. A big reception was given for them at the Hotel Roosevelt. Besides Representative and Mrs. Cleveland Newton, president of the society, and his wife, the receiving line included the retiring Congressmen and their wives. Among those in the line were Representative and Mrs. Hukreide, Representative and Mrs. Patterson, Judge Rucker, Representative and Mrs. Rhodes, Representative and Mrs. Lawrence, Representative and Mrs. McPherson, Representative and Mrs. Edgar Ellis, Representative and Mrs. Hays and Representative Atkeson.

The November elections made big inroads into the Missouri delegation in the lower House and many who had become popular here are leaving. Assistant Secretary of War Dwight Davis also received. Representative Simeon Fess of Ohio and Representative Newton made brief addresses. Dancing followed the formal part of the entertainment.

NO LEGAL ACTION IN SALE OF DOG GREASE

Health Department Says as Cure It Is Fake but No Action Can Be Taken.

Officials of the Health Department said yesterday that no legal action could be taken against employes of the city dog pound, who Friday sold two bottles of rendered dog grease to Mrs. Elizabeth Schwinbeck, 5470 Maple avenue, a member of the Humane Society, and her companion, Miss Olga Arthur, to be used as a cure for tuberculosis, because dog grease is neither an intoxicant, a poison or a narcotic.

Health Commissioner Starkloff stated that dog grease as a cure for tuberculosis was a "pure fake," but said that it was harmless and that one of his greatest troubles was in keeping down useless, though harmless, patented medicines of the "cure-all" variety.

As told in yesterday's Post-Dispatch, the affidavits of Mrs. Schwinbeck and Miss Arthur, stating that they paid 75 cents a bottle for dog grease to a man in charge of the dog pound, who told them that "it was good for tuberculosis if rubbed on the chest and mixed with food," were presented to the Health Department officials yesterday by Douglas W. Robert, attorney for the Humane Society.

John H. Becker, superintendent of the pound, yesterday denied ever selling any dog grease. Such a concoction had been sold at the pound to negroes several years ago, he said, but he had stopped the practice when it was called to his attention. Mrs. Schwinbeck and Miss Arthur stated in their affidavits that they did not learn the name of the man making the sale.

Isolation Hospital Superintendency.

Dr. James M. Flinn yesterday was appointed superintendent of the city isolation hospital by Health Commissioner Jordan. The salary is $2580 a year. Dr. Flinn has been senior interne at the city hospital at a salary of $1140 a year. He will succeed Dr. Eugene A. Scharff, who has been appointed superintendent of the city hospital. Both appointments will be effective April 1.

SULPHUR CLEARS A PIMPLY SKIN

Apply Sulphur as Told When Your Skin Breaks Out

Any breaking out of the skin on face, neck, arms or body is overcome quickest by applying Mentho-Sulphur. The pimples seem to dry right up and go away, declares a noted skin specialist.

Nothing has ever been found to take the place of sulphur as a pimple remover. It is harmless and inexpensive. Just ask any druggist for a small jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur and use it like cold cream.

FRENCH ROYALISTS URGING CANONIZATION OF LOUIS XVI

Priests Believe King Suffered Martyrdom on Account of Faith During Revolution.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1923.)

ROME, March 3.—After Jeanne d'Arc it is now the turn for Louis XVI, the unfortunate French King, who perished by the guillotine during the French Revolution. The French Royalist party says Rome ought to take up the matter and examine the monarch's rights to canonization.

The priests in France think it would be the beginning of a new religious period for their country. Their viewpoint is that Louis XVI suffered martyrdom on account of his faith; that had he been willing to recant he would have been allowed to live.

In 1874 a diocesan commission was convoked by Cardinal Guibert, then Archbishop of Paris, to examine the canonical evidence of Louis XVI's "martyrdom." Both the Empress Eugenie and the Count of Paris signed the supplication and sent to the Holy See, wherein the Pope was asked to have the matter taken into consideration by Rome. The question seems to have been examined and then laid aside.

Domestic Rugs

The function of Floorcoverings has exceeded that of wearing qualities—they must now combine not only durability, but also appropriate design and coloring, so that the room impresses with a well conceived decorative motif.

Those, therefore, who would dress their floors in keeping with the spirit of the times are invited to inspect our extensive assortments of designs and colorings in all qualities of the most reliable makes of Domestic Rugs.

You will be pleased with the vast resources for critical selection, while the prices in every instance will be found consistently and satisfactorily moderate.

A Rug from which long service is expected should be chosen with care and due regard for appearance. You will find it here.

Linoleums

Scientific methods of making and the introduction of many pleasing patterns, together with a modern system of laying, have brought Linoleums to the front as a most desirable and economical Floorcovering.

Less costly than hardwood floors, Linoleums are now to be seen in all manner of rooms in many of the best homes and, surmounted by Rugs, achieve very beautiful effects. The day has passed when kitchens and bathrooms set the limitations for Linoleums.

Our assortments of Printed, Inlaid and Battleship (Plain) Linoleums cover a wide range of patterns and colorings, furnishing a splendid opportunity for newly embellishing your floors at reasonable cost. Our prices are as low as reliable Linoleums can well be sold.

Oriental Rugs

Except in matters of transportation, Oriental Rugs are made and sold as they were a thousand years ago. The weaving is the heritage of centuries and the tribal weave of today is as ancient as if from a caravan of the dim past.

Genuine Oriental Rugs comprise our collection, one of the largest in America and outrivaled by few abroad.

You could not spend an hour more profitably than among these beautiful Persian and Chinese Rugs. The unique designs, the richly soft colorings and the luxury of all will appeal to your conceptions of art.

The prices, from the smallest mat to the largest room size, are actual values, without regard to the sentimental worth inspired by their beauty.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our dear boy, Henry Wesneke Jr.
One long year has passed away
Since that dreadful day and sorrowful day
When God alone, who knows the best,
Called Bobby to that home of rest.
Sadly missed by
FATHER, MOTHER AND SISTERS.

In loving memory of my dear husband and our dear son and son-in-law and brother, Rudolph H. Ulrich, who departed this life very suddenly two years ago, March 2, 1921.
Our greatest sorrow came to us two years ago.
Why has Thou done this, Lord, yes, why?
We do not understand today since two years have passed away.
But this we know, in this we rest,
'Twas God who called, and He knows best.
And while we mourn a dear death,
A life so full of deeds of kindness and of love
Has found reward with God above.
Sadly missed by wife, parents, sisters and brothers.
BERTHA S. ULRICH, WIFE (nee Kramer.)

In loving memory of our darling daughter, Evelyn A. Kuhlenmeister, whom the Lord called home 4 years ago March 4, 1919.
We have lost our darling daughter,
She has hid us all adieu,
She has gone to live in heaven
And her form is lost to view.
Oh, that dear one, how we loved her
Oh, how hard to give her up.
But an Angel came down for her
And removed her from our sight.
The God who gave has taken,
An Heavenly one our darling has won.
Altho' our hearts are sad,
Thy will of God is done.
Heaven now retains our treasure,
Earth the barren casket keeps.
Memories fragrant, fond and dear
Where our darling Evelyn sleeps.
Sadly missed by
MOTHER, DADDY, SISTER AND GRANDPARENTS. (c)

TWO SALESMEN HIT SALINA FOUR WEEKS AGO.

They were selling an electrical household appliance. They had left Kansas City with high hopes and seven years of doorbell ringing experience behind them. But Salina was the end of the trail for them. The doorbells didn't ring loud enough—or "papa didn't love mamma enough"—or something—how they came to our office to line up with an article that really will sell.

Salina is practically without experience in selling merchants or doctors—are now earning over $100 a week selling Beck-Nors, an electric "food-proof, simplified accounting system for small merchants and for doctors, that is sweeping the country.

If you are looking for something better to sell—something easier—and a more dignified business to show—something for yourself. No matter where you live, Beck-Nor Systems will sell.

DEPARTMENT STORE PLANS BUILDING AT GRAND AND MORGAN

Project to Cost $1,000,000 Contingent on Outcome of Negotiations Over Long Term Lease.

OPPOSITE CORNER SITE FOR THEATER

Both Lots Will Be on the Proposed Delmar Cut-Off Which Is Expected to Enhance Values.

By Berry Moore.

Plans are being made for the erection at the northeast corner of Grand boulevard and Morgan street, of a department store, wit han office building above, to cost $1,000,000. The project is contingent only on the outcome of negotiations by which one of the largest downtown department stores is to occupy the building under a long lease.

The site is owned by Simon Van Raalte, president of S. Van Raalte Investment Co., who recently purchased it from the Missouri Botanical Association through the William T. Mathews Realty Co. The project is to be financed by the S. Van Raalte Investment Co. The lot has a frontage on Grand of 163 feet and on Morgan of 157 feet, and is now occupied by temporary buildings.

Van Raalte recently sold the southeast corner of Grand and Morgan street to William Goldman, formerly manager of the Missouri Theater, as a site for a moving picture theater. Both sites will be on the proposed Delmar cut-off, which is expected to greatly enhance the importance of these corners.

Transactions running into six and seven figures are giving wide proportions to the volume of operations in real estate circles, and being recorded on the threshold of spring are regarded as decidedly auspicious, according to J. M. Levi & Co..

Important Sales of Week.

The sale of the Branscombe Hotel at 5370 Pershing avenue, and that of the Victoria Building at the northwest corner of Eighth and Locust streets, were among the most notewor thy events of the week. Supplementing these was the sale of the Argonne Hotel at 3664 Washington, each instance, it is understood. Sam Koplar was the purchaser of the Branscombe Hotel, erected by Chase Ulman several years ago. The annual rentals o fthis building are $200,000. The building was launched under the management of Edward L. Bakewell.

The Himmelberger-Harrison Lumber Co., with headquarters at Cape Girardeau, has signed contracts through the R. J. Dyas Realty Co. for the purchase of the Victoria Building, which is owned by William Sacks, banker and Republican politician. The site is owned by Moses Schoenberg and is held by the Victoria Building Co., under a 99-year lease. The building is mortgaged for $350,000. The deal, which involves a trade, is subject to this indebtedness.

Sacks acquired the site a number of years ago, when office buildings were a drug on the market.

Koplar has disposed of his interest in the Argonne apartments to the Kraus Investment Co. in exchange for the Cambridge apartments at 4017-19 McPherson avenue, and a lot 100x104 feet, at Belt and Delmar.

Lots Purchased by Koplar.

Through the Cornet & Zeibig Trust Koplar recently purchased the southwest corner of Pershing avenue and Union boulevard and Enright avenue and a second lot at Union.

As wa stold exclusively in the Post-Dispatch the Western Union Telegraph Co. Friday acquired the title to the southwest corner of Ninth and Chestnut streets, having 135 feet on Chestnut and 112 on Ninth, as a site for a building for its local offices. The price paid is at the rate of $1600 a foot fo rthe Chestnut street frontage, the improvements being ancient three-story and one-story buildings of negligible value.

The former owners were the Davis estate and John F. Sullivan and others, who were represented by James D. Dockery of John Dockery Son in connection with Edward K. Love. Lilburn G. McNair represented the Western Union Telegraph Co.

REAL ESTATE TO BE SOLD AT AUCTION

Mercantile Trust to Dispose of Property to Close Donaldson Estate.

The Mercantile Trust Co. will hold the first auction of the season tomorrow afternoon, March 5. The sale is for the purpose of disposing of several parcels of real estate in order that the Wm. R. Donaldson estate may be closed. Included in the sale is the old Allen homesite, a short distance west of Fourteenth street, on the south side of Locust. The plot is 80x155. Within the perspective is the Warwick Hotel, the Missouri State Life Insurance Building, which is just west of the proposed Municipal Plaza, of which the Public Library at Fourteenth and Locust will become one of the chief buildings.

A notable recent sale was that of the Leather Trades Building, southwest corner Fifteenth and Locust streets, to a company of which David R. Francis is president. The Washington avenue wholesale district is also another assurance of stability of value of real estate in this area. Locust street is now the great automobile thoroughfare of the city, and no doubt in time there will be demand for this property by the retailers of high-grade merchandise. Locust street has been widened and repaved, and is, to all purpose and intent, a boulevard. The sale will take place on the premises at 3 p. m.

In addition to this item, the sale will include a small parcel of property on the north side of Chouteau avenue, near Fourth street. The parcel is a "leftover" from a lot condemned for use by the municipal free bridge, and suggests itself as an opportunity to speculate in a small way. Also a lot 40x125 at the northeast corner of Ann and California avenues will be disposed of. The location of this lot on the South Side is in a densely populated district, and the fact that it can be used for commercial purposes should appeal to buyers. All sales will take place on the premises.

SHERWOOD FOREST PROPERTY SOLD BY DAN BAKER REALTY CO.

The "Dan" Baker Realty Co. announces the sale of the Philip S. Child property, southwest corner Jackson avenue and Yorkshire place, in Sherwod Forest, Webster Groves, to Arthur H. Stein. The property is part of the original Sherwood tract.

Other Sherwood Forest property sold by Dan Becker is as follows: Lot 17, in block C (100x281 feet), for John O. Buchta to Albert S. Frampton; lot 17, in block A (100x312 feet), to Alfred M. Lane and Cecelia Lane; lot 3, in block B (100x201 feet), to Dr. Val H. Frederich; lot 10, in block B (80x257 feet), to Frank D. Collins; southwest corner Somerset avenue and Rock Hill road, to George A. Pickel.

BRINKOP COMPANY REPORTS MANY SALES OF RESIDENCES

The Christian Brinkop Real Estate Co. reports the sale of 4661 Idaho avenue, a five-room brick cottage, for George A. Emig to Andrew Huber; 4511 Morganford road, a five-room brick bungalow, for Le Roy Wilderman to William H. Shannon; new five-rom brick single flat at the northwest corner of Michigan avenue and Osage streets, for Emil H. Struckhoff to Anna Stangler; 3339 Michigan avenue, a frame cottage, for John Schirm to George C. Weber; 2727 Shenandoah, brick residence, for Bernard and Isabella Laughran to George Lawson; 201 Bowen street, a single flat, for George Ande to Thomas Shapiro; 3632 Cleveland avenue, a brick residence, for Louisa Kranke to Elmer E. Plank; 3618 Russell avenue, a brick flat, for Elizabeth Schoening to Agnes L. Gleason; 3962 Connecticut street, a brick bungalow, for John J. Kelly to Louis Mafthael; 4317 South Twenty-seventh street, a brick bungalow, for Elsie B. Rassfeld to Albert P. Woehrle. The Brinkop Real Estate Co. also reports having sold one of the new, modern brick bungalows now under construction on Grace and Thirty-seventh street, between Bingham avenue and Osceola street, just two blocks from the new Grover Cleveland High School and the Scruggs Public Schol. The bungalows will have five rooms and sun parlor all on one floor, with attic. Some will have brick porches, while others will have rock porches. There will be four designs of architecture.

Franciscus Company Closes Lease.

Franciscus Realty Co. reports having closed a lease for three years to Sid Whiting, photographer, on property located at 4322 Olive street. It also reports the sale of a 25-foot lot on the north line of Scott avenue, west of Jefferson avenue by a depth of 135 feet, for De Tonty Realty Co. to a client of Hugh Stewart.

DOUBLE FLAT, RESIDENCE AND APARTMENT SOLD BY LEVY FIRM

J. M. Levi & Co. reports the following sales: Double flat at 1867-71 North Union boulevard, for Mary A. Mills to B. Tegethoff, who was represented by John Dockery & Son; resident, 4522 Page avenue, for Susan Christophel to Catherine Seufert; four-family apartment building, 3921-23 McPherson avenue, renting for $3200 a year, for Ben Behrens to Paul A. Schlafly; lot on the east line of Kingsland avenue, 50x160, in Delmar Garden subdivision, to A. M. Hedderman, represented by Wagner-Grant-Bell Realty Co.

GURNEY COURT PROVES RESIDENTIAL SHOWPLACE

14 Bungalows Already Built There and Five Others Are Being Constructed.

Gurney Court, launched a year ago by the William Remmert Construction Co., forms one of the most attractive residential places on the South Side. It is on the north side of Magnolia avenue, just east of King's highway, and is opposite Tower Grove Park, which adds immeasurably to its desirability.

Fourteen two-story six and seven room bungalows of the highest type of construction have been erected in this addition by the Remmert company, which is constructing five others, all of which will be finished within the next month. These buildings are attracting wide attention.

The houses contain six and seven rooms with sun parlor and tile front and rear porches, and are built on solid concrete foundations and are set off with glazed tile roofs. In addition they have hardwood floors throughout, hot water heat (D. & T. System), instantaneous hot water heater, attractive electric lighting fixtures with baseboard plugs in each room, shades and copper screens. The kitchens have porcelain sinks with double drain boards and built-in cabinets. The bathrooms have both tile floors and walls, recessed tubs and showers and every other attractive feature.

Gurney Court constitutes virtually a residential park on a small scale with a park strip in the center, embellished with flowers, trees and shrubbery. This improvement, when all the houses are completed, will represent an investment for building and surface improvements of approximately $500,000.

SPEEDING UP BUSINESS

By STEPHEN LEACOCK.

WE WERE sitting at our editorial desk in our inner room, quietly writing up our week's poetry, when a stranger looked in upon us.

He came in with a burst—like the entry of the hero of Western drama coming in out of a snowstorm. His manner was all excitement. "Sit down," we said, in our grave, courteous way. "Sit down!" he exclaimed, "Certainly not! Are you aware of the amount of time and energy that are being wasted in American business by the practice of perpetually sitting down and standing up again? Do you realize that every time you sit down and stand up you make a dead lift of"—he looked at us—"250 pounds? Did you ever reflect that every time you sit down you have to get up again?" "Never," we said, quietly. "We never thought of it." "You didn't?" he sneered. "No; you'd rather go on lifting 250 pounds through two feet—an average of 500 foot pounds, practically 62 kilowatts of wasted power. Do you know that by merely hitching a pulley to the back of your neck you could generate enough power to light your whole office?"

We hung our heads. Simple as the thing was we had never thought of it. "Very good," said the Stranger. "Now, all American business men are like you. They don't think—do you understand me? They don't think."

We realized the truth of it at once. We had never thought. Perhaps we didn't even know how. "Now, I tell you," continued our visitor, speaking rapidly and with a light of wild enthusiasm in his face, "I'm out for a new campaign—efficiency in business—speeding things up—better organization."

"But surely," we said, musingly, "we have seen something about this before in the papers?" "Seen it, sir," he exclaimed. "I should say so. It's everywhere. It's a new movement. It's in the air. Has it never struck you how a thing like this can be seen in the air?"

Here again we were at fault. In all our lives we had never seen anything in the air. We had never even looked there. "Now," continued the Stranger, "I want your paper to help. I want you to join in. I want you to give publicity."

"Assuredly," we said, with our old-fashioned politeness. "Anything which concerns the welfare, the progress, if one may so phrase it"—— "Stop!" said the visitor. "You talk too much. You're prosy. Don't talk. Listen to me. Try and fix your mind on what I am about to say."

We fixed it. The Stranger's manner became somewhat calmer. "I am heading," he cried, "the new American efficiency movement. I have sent out circulars to 50,000 representative firms, explaining my methods. I am receiving 10,000 answers a day"—here he dragged a bundle of letters out of his pocket—"from Maine, from New Hampshire, from Vermont"——

"Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut," we murmured.

"Exactly," he said; "from every state in the Union—from the Philippines, from Porto Rico, and last week I had one from Canada."

"Marvelous," we said. "And may one ask what your new methods are?"

"You may," he answered. "It's a proper question. It's a typical business question, fair, plain, clean and even admitting of an answer. The great art of answering questions," he continued, "is to answer at once, without loss of time, friction or delay in moving from place to place. I'll answer it."

"Do," we said.

"I will," said the Stranger. "My method is, first, to stimulate business to the highest point by infusing into it everywhere the spirit of generous rivalry, of wholesome competition; by inviting each and every worker to outdo each and every other."

"And can they do it?" we asked, puzzled and yet fascinated. "Can they all do it?"

"They do, and they can," said the Stranger. "The proof of it is that they are doing it. Listen. Here is an answer to my circular No. 6, Efficiency and Recompense, that came in this morning. It is from a steel firm. Listen."

The Stranger picked out a letter and read it.

"'Dear Sir: Our firm is a steel corporation. We roll rails. As soon as we read your circular on the Stimulus of Competition we saw that there were big things in it. At once we sent one of our chief managers to the rolling mill. He carried a paper bag in his hand. "Now, boys," he said, "every man who rolls a rail gets a gumdrop." The effect was magical. The good fellows felt a new stimulus. They now roll out rails like dough. Work is a joy to them. Every Saturday night the man who has rolled most gets a blue ribbon; the man who has rolled the next most, a green ribbon; the next most a yellow ribbon, and so on through the spectroscope. The man who rolls least gets only a red ribbon. It is a real pleasure to see the brave fellows clamoring for their ribbons. Our output, after defraying the entire cost of the ribbons and the gumdrops, has increased 40 per cent. We intend to carry the scheme further by allowing all the men who get a hundred blue ribbons first, to exchange them for the Grand Efficiency Prize of the firm—a pink ribbon. This the winner will be entitled to wear whenever and wherever he sees fit to wear it.'"

The Stranger paused for breath.

"Marvelous," we said. "There is no doubt the stimulus of keen competition"——

"Shut up," he said, impatiently. "Let me explain it further. Competition is only part of it. An item just as big that makes for efficiency is to take account of the little things. It's the little things that are never thought of."

"Here was another wonder! We realized that we had never thought of them. "Take an example," the Stranger continued. "I went into a hotel the other day. What did I see? Bellboys being summoned upstairs every minute, and flying up in the elevators. Yes—they have to go up. But why should they come down again? I went up to the manager and I said: 'I can understand that when your guests ring for the bellboys they have to go up. But why should they come down? Why not have them go up and never come down?' He caught the idea at once. That hotel is transformed. I have a letter from the manager stating that they find it 50 per cent cheaper to hire new bellboys instead of waiting for the old ones to come down."

"These results," we said, "are certainly marvelous. You are most assuredly to be congratulated on"——

"You talk too much," said the Stranger. "Don't do it. Learn to listen. If a young man comes to me for advice in business—and they do in hundreds, lots of them—almost in tears over their inefficiency—I'd say: 'Young man, never talk; listen. Answer, but don't speak.' But even all this is only part of the method. Another side of it is technique.

The customer is put on a spring-board, blindfolded, and fired through the air.

"Technique?" we said, pleased but puzzled.

"Yes, the proper use of machine devices. Take the building trade. I've revolutionized it. Till now all the bricks even for a high building were carried up to the mason in hods. Madness! Think of the waste of it. By my method instead of carrying the bricks to the mason we take the mason to the brick—lower him on a wire rope, give him a brick, and up he goes again. As soon as he wants another brick he calls down, 'I want a brick,' and down he comes like lightning."

"This," we said, "is little short of"——

"Cut it out. Even that is not all. Another thing bigger than any is organization. Half the business in this country is not organized. As soon as I sent out my circular No. 4, Have You Organized Your Business? I got answers in thousands! Heartbroken, many of them. They had never thought of it! Here, for example, is a letter written by a plain man, a gardener, just an ordinary man, a plain man"——

"Yes," we said. "Quite so."

"Well, here is what he writes:

"'Dear Sir: As soon as I got your circular I read it all through from end to end, and I saw that all my failure in the past had come from my not being organized. I sat and thought a long while and I decided that I would organize myself. I went right into the house and I said to my wife: "Jane, I'm going to organize myself." She said: "Oh, John!" and not another word, but you should have seen the look on her face. So the next morning I got up early and began to organize myself. It was hard at first, but I stuck to it. There were times when I felt as if I couldn't do it. It seemed too hard. But bit by bit I did it and now, thank God, I am organized. I wish all men like me could know the pleasure I feel in being organized.'

"Touching, isn't it?" said the Stranger. "But I get lots of letters like that. Here's another, also from a man, a plain man, working on his own farm. Hear what he says:

"'Dear Sir: As soon as I saw your circular on How to Speed Up the Employe I felt that it was a big thing. I don't have any hired help here to work with me, but only father. He cuts the wood and does odd chores about the place. So I realized that the best I could do was to try to speed up father. I started in to speed him up last Tuesday, and I wish you could see him. Before this he couldn't split a cord of wood without cutting a slice off his boots. Now he does it in half the time.'

"But there," the Stranger said, getting impatient even with his own reading, "I needn't read it all. It is the same thing all along the line. I've got the method introduced into the department stores. Before this every customer who came in wasted time trying to find the counters. Now we install a patent springboard, with a mechanism like a catapult. As soon as a customer comes in an attendant puts him on the board, blindfolds him, and says: 'Where do you want to go?' 'Glove counter.' 'Oh, all right.' He's fired at it through the air. No time lost. Same with the railways. They're installing the method, too. Every engineer who breaks the record from New York to Buffalo gets a glass of milk. When he gets a hundred glasses he can exchange them for a glass of beer. So with the doctors. On the new method, instead of giving the patient one pill a day for 14 days they give him 14 pills in one day. Doctors, lawyers, everybody—in time, sir," said the Stranger, in tones of excitement, "you'll see even the plumbers"——

But just at this moment the door opened. A sturdy-looking man in blue entered. The Stranger's voice was hushed at once. The excitement died out of his face. His manner all of a sudden was meekness itself.

"I was just coming," he said.

"That's right, sir," said the man. "Better come along and not take up the gentleman's time."

"Good-by, then," said the Stranger, with meek affability, and he went out.

The man in blue lingered behind for a moment.

"A sad case, sir," he said, and tapped his forehead.

"You mean"—— I asked.

"Exactly. Cracked, sir. Quite cracked, but harmless. I'm engaged to look after him, but he gave me the slip downstairs."

"He's under delusions?" we inquired.

"Yes, sir. He's got it into his head that business in this country has all gone to pieces—thinks it must be reorganized. He writes letters about it all day and sends them to the papers, with imaginary names. You may have seen some of them. Good day, sir."

We looked at our watch. We had lost just half an hour over the new efficiency. We turned back with a sigh to our old-fashioned task.

New Rule of Health for Every Morning.

DO NOT spring from bed the moment you wake in the morning. Do not spring from bed at all—take it quietly. This is the advice that the best physicians in London now give to those who consult them.

The old idea was that as soon as you opened your eyes you should fling off the bedclothes, bound to the floor with a display of magnificent vitality, and hurl yourself at the business of the day. It was all wrong. It was unscientific. It took no account of the mental and physical state of the individual on waking.

Physicians who have considered the question lay down an entirely different rule. They advise that five minutes should be devoted to the business of waking up, and that hurry should be avoided. The act of springing from bed is bad, because it accelerates the action of the heart suddenly, after the period of repose, and this in turn excites the brain, with the consequence that the individual becomes unbalanced and remains in an unbalanced condition for hours, possibly for the rest of the day.

Getting out of bed should be a leisurely, not a hurried, process. The feet should be let down quietly to the floor, and the body then raised gently to a sitting position before standing up. The movements should be gradual and placid. There should be no rush. Body and mind will then come to the day's work in an equable condition.

Springing from the bed is a mistake that tells at once and tells in the long run. It tends to shorten life.

- "I don't see how you can do it"

- "More wonderful than represented"
- "These books have traveled thousands of miles with me"

HUNDREDS of pages of the Post-Dispatch could be filled with expressions even more enthusiastic than the above, from purchasers of this beautiful set of the Little Leather Library volumes. But there is a great "silent vote" even more impressive, more convincing.

Close to twenty million of the great masterpieces in this edition have already been purchased, by tens of thousands of bankers, teachers, lawyers, children, mothers, students, physicians and others, in every walk of life, for booklovers belong to no class. Every volume was sold subject to 30 days' approval, under a straightforward, money-back guarantee. On this plan it is obvious that this enterprise never could have survived unless practically EVERY purchaser was delighted with this bargain. Twenty million books that could have been returned for refund, but were not: no more convincing evidence could be presented as to the extraordinary value given here!

Is this offer too good to be true?

Think of purchasing 30 volumes, including the greatest masterpieces of literature, all for only $2.98. These include the finest works of such immortal authors as Shakespeare, Kipling, Stevenson, Emerson, Poe, Coleridge, Burns, Omar Khayyam, Macaulay, Lincoln, Washington, Oscar Wilde, Gilbert, Longfellow, Drummond, Conan Doyle, Edward Everett Hale, Thoreau, Tennyson, Browning, and others. Consider the fact that each volume is complete, that each volume is beautifully bound, not in paper or cardboard, but in rich, embossed Croft which looks so much like leather that even experts are often confused. Consider that the entire set contains over 3,000 pages, that the paper is equal to that used in books selling at $1.50 apiece, that the pocket size of each volume makes spare-time reading a pleasure. It is surprising that even our friends among publishers wonder how it can be done? It is surprising that the greatest obstacle to be overcome is the feeling that this offer is too good to be true!

Sent On Approval

If you are the least bit doubtful, all we can do is send this set of 30 volumes to YOU on approval. Send no money now—just the coupon or a letter. Pay only $2.98 plus postage when the set arrives—then send it back if you are even slightly disappointed and we will not only refund your money, but postage both ways.

To keep you and others from "putting it off," we are offering for a short time, as an experiment, to include four volumes of Kipling FREE with your set if you order at once from this advertisement instead of waiting.

LITTLE LEATHER LIBRARY CORP.

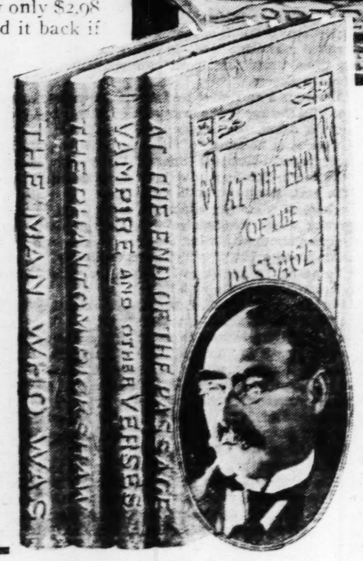
FREE! Four Volumes of KIPLING

If you will order at once instead of waiting

TO those of us who have been forced to lead drab, workaday lives, Kipling opens up a new world—the vivid, colorful world of the East. His stories, every one of them, are steeped in realism, but it is a realism more fascinating than the wildest imaginings of a romanticist. These four volumes include: The Vampire, and Other Verses; The Man Who Was; The Phantom Rickshaw; A Conference of the Powers; The Recrudescence of Imray; At the End of the Passage; The Mutiny of the Mavericks; My Own True Ghost Story.



LITTLE LEATHER LIBRARY CORPORATION,

Please send me on approval the 30 volumes of the De Luxe edition of the Little Leather Library (and the four volumes of Kipling free). I will pay the postman $2.98 plus the postage upon delivery. It is understood, however, that this is not to be considered a purchase. If the books do not in every way come up to expectations, I reserve the right to return them any time within thirty days, and you agree to return my money. It is understood that $2.98 plus the postage is positively the only payment to be made on this set.

Doctoring Where There Are No Doctors

"It was 12 below zero. I had to cross the river 10 times and then follow a creek for four miles. When I got there, my feet were frozen to the stirrups."

With his old-fashioned "pill bags" across the saddle, George Burr Forest for 16 years has ridden the primitive roads of Oregon County, Mo., and treated the sick, although not a licensed physician—Adventures which have befallen this practitioner in a neighborhood remote from regular doctors—And the latter don't want his patients!

FOR some 16 years the winding roads of Oregon County, Mo., even the loneliest stretches, have seen a sturdy figure going by on horseback. He seemed to follow no regular schedule. He might pass a desolate cross-roads at noon or at midnight or at any hour between. He might travel over a certain road for several days in succession or his next visit might be months later.

And the weather made no difference to this horseman and his patient mount. Neither the hottest days of summer nor steady downpours and the mud thereof nor winter's ice and snow meant anything to the pair except as obstacles which slowed down their pace.

Whither they were bound, the possible destinations being limited apparently only by the number of houses in the region, they went.

The horseman rode with a pair of old-fashioned, leathern "pill bags" slung across the rear of his saddle. He was, in fact, a country doctor, named George Burr Forest. The Spartanlike disregard of weather and the time of day, as well as the long, toilsome journeys, grew out of necessity.

A comparatively large area of country in the Ozark hills looked to Dr. Forest for medical services. It does yet, although now he uses a small, mud-spattered touring car for making as many of his calls as possible. But the horse must still be saddled occasionally. Forest says ruefully that the years have made horseback riding hard for him.

The southern part of Oregon County always was the most sparsely settled, some of its roads bad and the others worse. The natives call them "trails." There are, of course, bits of good road in the district which Forest serves. One remembers them gratefully.

Rugged hills, grown thickly with oak, hickory and black jack, which yield railroad ties and cordwood in plenty, the clearings but emphasizing the region's wealth in timber; valleys with rich soil, often sloping steeply to the "branch" which drains them; solitary, weatherbeaten farmhouses, either frame buildings or log cabins, and some of them very cozy; here and there a little village, perhaps only half a dozen houses; primitive wagon roads which wind along as best they may up hill and down dale—this is the greater part of Oregon County.

There is much good soil which will reward him who has the knowledge and the energy essential in such a harsh countryside. A striking feature is the large amount of surface rock with which the ground is peppered, level and sloping alike. "It don't plow as bad as you might think," remarks a native. "The rocks are mostly small enough so that they turn over with the dirt. But I reckon it is better for grazing than for grain crops."

The roads, however, are an experience. To get all the thrills and all the bumps, the traveler must ride in an auto. As the car scoots crazily down the long slope, the driver expertly avoids the larger boulders and most of the holes on either side. It is impossible to miss them all, so the traveler keeps a sharp lookout ahead. Thus he knows when to tighten his grim grasp on the car. The position of the hole or rock indicates whether he will be thrown to the right or to the left, through the windshield or over the back of the seat. With reasonable care he can avoid being flung out of the car.

Arrived at the bottom of the hill, the stout-hearted little auto goes "whoo-h" through the cold, clear waters of the "branch," dashing spray all over the hood and the windshield, which trickles off as the callous driver picks his way, not too deliberately, through the stepping stones which were left here by nature, not by man.

Then the car, actually shaking itself like a dog as it climbs up the rocky bank on the other side, starts gamely for the top of the next hill. More bumps, jerks, balks and jumps, with dolorous noises from the engine and rattles everywhere. Occasionally a hog moves reluctantly out of the way, or a rash chicken shows how closely it can graze the front wheels without being killed.

It is only after driving from Thayer, the nearest railroad town, to the village of Billmore, where Forest lives, that revelation comes as to one good reason why the registered doctors of Oregon County are practically unanimous in wishing Forest a long tenure of his present practice.

This despite the fact that Forest himself is not a registered physician and, in his own language, has been three times "arraigned" for practicing medicine without a license.

Billmore is a cluster of less than a dozen houses and stores. To the north, the nearest town with a registered doctor is Alton, the county seat, 18 miles away. To the west, it is 23 miles to Thayer, a division point on the Springfield-Memphis line of the Frisco system. To the south, Pocahontas, Ark., is 35 miles away. And to the east, Doniphan is 35 miles distant.

So here is a district extending more than 50 miles each way which contains no registered physician, and only one unlicensed doctor besides Forest. In a level country, traversed by fine highways, medical help would not be nearly as remote as it is from these farms and tiny hamlets in the Ozark hills.

Attention was directed to Forest recently, when Senator S. A. Cunningham introduced a bill in the State Legislature which, he explained, would apply to only one person in Missouri. The bill required that a license to practice medicine be issued to "any" person who had attended a reputable medical college for three years in succession, who had had one year's hospital experience, had been a resident of Missouri for 16 years and had been actually engaged in the practice of medicine in his home locality.

These requirements are intended as a description of Forest's career, and the purpose of the bill is to free him from the danger of prosecution. The bill was indorsed by the Oregon County Medical Association, the Judge and Prosecuting Attorney of the Circuit Court, the court reporter, a former Sheriff, the County Clerk and numerous citizens. The neighbors whom Forest has treated for so many years want him to be unmolested, the licensed physicians do not care to answer calls in such a remote district.

The story of the three times that the law reached out and clutched this country doctor is worth telling. The first warrant was issued in 1908, according to neighborhood gossip at the instance of another physician who wanted Forest out of the way. Citizens filed a petition in the court, asking that the charge be dropped. The matter hung fire for months, then new men were elected to office and they nolle prossed the case.

"The second time, in 1918, was like this," said Forest. "My son, then 18 years old, was at work and making just a little money. There were three married men who used to get him into poker games. I asked them not to do it, and I commanded him not to play any more. But the games went on. So I said to my son: 'You won't obey me, I'll see what the law can do with you.' So I turned in their names. My son's name was at the top of the list.

"A little while afterwards, I was arraigned again for practicing medicine without a license. My friends asked me what I was going to do. I said: 'What can I do? Half of Oregon County knows that I'm guilty, and a lot of people across the Arkansas line, too. I'll have to enter a plea of guilty.' I did so and was fined. The Court allowed me to pay part of the fine and remitted the rest."

The third time that Forest went before a court was in 1920, and he says the complaint was filed by a man whose wife Forest had attended professionally and whom he had had to sue in order to collect the fee. Neighbors argued with the man, pointing out that he would acquire such a reputation that he would have trouble getting a doctor the next time he needed one. Forest refused an offer to share the costs if the suit against him were dismissed and eventually the charge was withdrawn without Forest being put to any expense. Says Forest about these skirmishes with the law:

"They can arraign me and fine me, and I'll pay the fine and keep right on practicing medicine as long as sick people come to me or send for me and want my help."

Forest doesn't say it in stubborn defiance of the law. Nor is he a religious zealot. But there is a deep humanity in this country doctor—tall, broad-shouldered and muscularly built, with brown eyes beaming humorously behind his spectacles, a large, kindly mouth and the quality of personal magnetism to an unusual degree.

Sorely stricken ones, men, women and children, have looked into that face and found new courage there, the will to trample down their weakness and misery and cling determinedly to life. He has given comfort to dying persons, made convalescents obey his orders and lambasted malingerers.

"Everyone was given his talent, I believe, and if he doesn't use it he's traveling in the wrong direction," continued Forest. "I think I was cut out for the profession I now follow and have followed for years, but I have been a failure in a financial way all my life.

"I always liked to do anything I could for my fellow man in distress, and I felt it was a duty I owed him. I believe that God gave me the knowledge of medicine for that purpose. I don't feel that I was 'called' to the profession, but it suited me and I have always given satisfaction, generally speaking. I have ridden many dark and stormy nights, witnessed awful

If things go on the next 50 years as they have gone in the last 50, what will become of the poor when they get sick and are not able to work for the rich?"

Forest's yearning to be a doctor began at quite a tender age, as he recalled for the benefit of a representative of the Post-Dispatch not long ago. A brief sketch of his earlier years will be set down here before passing on to some of the experiences which have befallen him while practicing medicine in the hills.

He was born on Jan. 13, 1871, in Ozark County, on the Little North Fork of White River, five miles from the Arkansas line. He is one-sixteenth Cherokee Indian. The family stayed on the farm until George was 8 years old, when they moved into the village of Isabella, where Forest senior conducted a "travelers' inn" and Forest junior "played doctor" with the other little boys and girls for his patients.

"I used to see how many mixtures I could fix up to give them out of the kitchen supplies, such as pepper, salt, sugar, soda and pepper sauce," remarked Forest, smiling. "They can be made into some of the most awful mixtures that a body ever saw or smelt.

"I recall one of those mixtures that I fixed up for an older boy who came to what I called my 'office' for medical aid. I went into the kitchen and put all the ingredients together except the pepper sauce. I thought that would be the stuff to make it bite. I poured some of the pepper sauce into the bottle which held the mixture and began to shake it up.

"Never did I see a bottle of warm beer or of soda pop boil as that mixture did, and it gave out nauseating fumes so that they actually gagged me. I poured out all the mixture and fixed the boy some nice sugar and water and flavored it with lemon extract.

"I promised myself then that if I ever got to be a man and still continued to doctor, I would not prescribe vile-tasting medicines when it could be avoided. If the scent or taste of any medicine gags a well person, what will it do for a sick one? So I always have tried to make my treatments as palatable as possible and at the same time get good results.

"When I was a small child the country was thinly settled, and we did not have any regular M. D.'s. My uncle was what they called a 'botanic doctor.' He gathered his weeds and flowers and dug his herbs in certain seasons, some in the spring and some in the fall. The neighbor women and children would help him.

"Then, whenever anyone in the country got sick, my uncle would gather up some of his collection and he and my aunt would go to the sick person's house and stay there, making pills and teas and drenching the patient until he got well. My aunt was a very good, kind woman and a good nurse in her day, and, of course, that is two-thirds of the battle, if not more.

"But we all got along well, anyway, for the whole Ozark region was a botanic garden that God had placed in our reach and He gave some the knowledge of the different plants and what they were for. We all learned the differgnt weeds and their physiological effects.

"My uncle would dig the plant called black root, or speedwell, or Indian physic, and make pills out of it, and I can say that it was powerful. He'd sometimes make pills out of white walnut bark or butternut. I know of one old botanic doctor who would peel his bark down and then call it 'high papelorem,' and then he would peel it up and call it 'low papebiram.' He used these words as technicalities.

"The first doctor that I remember being called to our house, besides the old home-made doctor, my uncle, was what was called 'a big, fine doctor.' He had been to a doctors' school. He sure was smart, people thought, and they felt very much impressed when he had to be called.

"They would make the little children go and play outside, while the women would kill the prettiest and fattest chicken on the place and make some of the finest sorghum cakes and fried peach pies that they could, just like the preacher was coming with them from church. The children would slip up once in a while and peek through the cracks, then go back and tell each other what he looked like and wish they had his 'playhouse' that he laid across his knees. They meant his 'pill bags,' carried on his saddle. Dad would go into the chest and get the money to pay the 'big doctor.' I thought that was the stuff: Climb on your horse and ride across the country and get the money and pull those yellow chicken legs. But, to my misfortune, I never did hit this good luck very often.

"So often it is: 'I haven't got the money and don't know just when I can get it, for I owe a little note in the bank and they want their money.' Some say: 'I owe a store account and they want it, and my taxes have to be paid, but I'll pay you SOME soon as I can get it.' But if I wouldn't give a man medicine just because he owed me money, or wouldn't write him a prescription if I didn't have the drugs, I wouldn't be very proud of myself."

Forest, by the way, does not use any herbs except for certain children's complaints. He prescribes drugs, just as licensed doctors do. He does no surgical work, but sets broken limbs if a licensed doctor is not available. Forest began practicing medicine at Isabella in 1905, under Dr. Tom White, now of Gainesville, as preceptor. In the winter of 1905-06 he attended Barnes Medical School, St. Louis. His first real practice was in 1907 and 1908. Then, in 1909, 1910 and 1911 he studied as much as he could at the old Memphis Hospital Medical College.

He would stay as long as his money lasted, and then drop out to earn some more. Between times he practiced at Myrtle, 8 miles east of Thayer, in Oregon County, where his young family was living. It was the need to earn a living for himself and his family which kept Forest from finally graduating in medicine. Except for the three years of 1914-15-16, when drouth caused him to move from Myrtle to Eminence, in Shannon County, he practiced at Myrtle until three years ago, when he moved to a farm four miles north of that town. Last December he moved to Billmore.

"There's not a house for 25 miles that I've not been inside of," says Forest. Then he told about some of his experiences.

"One night about 9 o'clock I was called across the Arkansas line to attend a child at a place 25 miles away. They asked me to come at once. The ground was covered with ice and the roads so slickery that a horse had to trot to stand up. The temperature was 12 degrees below zero.

"I had to cross the river 10 times and then follow a creek for four miles. When I got there, my feet were frozen to my stirrups, and after they had gotten me loose I was almost as stiff as a board. I got to the fire and had to pull off my boots with my overshoes, because they were frozen together. The river was half-side deep to my horse and I

GREATEST EXPLOITS OF CELEBRATED DETE

X.—THE DOLL CALLED JULIE

By WILLIAM NELSON TAFT

NO ONE who knew Bill Quinn even casually, and certainly no one conversant with the real meaning of the articles which lined his den, would ever have dreamed that the old detective would have given room space to such a thing as a doll—especially one of the flaxen-haired, blue-eyed and frilly-dressed variety such as reposed upon one of the shelves of his bookcase close by the grewsome skull of Pietro Rossa.

To the stranger who casually entered Quinn's den, the doll would probably have appeared to be a memento of some child in which the retired secret service man had been greatly interested, possibly a daughter who had since grown up and now had youngsters of her own who played with dolls. But I knew from long experience that every single article in Quinn's sanctum had a history behind it—a history which was far removed from the sentiment which attaches itself to children. The bit of baize cloth on the mantel for example, had been connected with a particularly atrocious murder in England. The photograph of a beautiful woman which adorned one of the walls was that of the mysterious Mrs. Armitage, who had played such a leading role in the theft of the plans of the battleship Pennsylvania, and even the draperies which hung over the windows were made from silk that had been smuggled in from Canada in a hollowed-out tree trunk.

I therefore knew that, behind the blonde curls of the doll, or possibly concealed within the folds of her dress, there must be a story of crime of some kind. It was for this reason that I sought to draw Quinn out about the plaything, calling his attention to the incongruity of placing it next to the staring, vacant eyes of the fleshless skull.

"Perhaps it's not as incongruous as you think," Quinn declared. "I'll admit that it's hard to conceive of two pieces much further apart than a human skull and a pretty, baby-faced doll, but, after all, the two of them have a common connecting link. Both figured in unusual crimes. Both formed the principal clews in the solution of mysteries which threatened to baffle the best detective forces of the world. The skull, as I have told you, formed the basis for Capt. Williams' supposedly impossible rebuilding of a human face, while the doll"—

The whole thing happened in France a few years before the war. One of the queerest features of the case was the fact that although it was a matter of a robbery, the missing articles had almost no intrinsic value whatever. Most people would have said that they could buy their equivalent for 2 cents in American currency even at a time when foreign exchange was higher than it is now—for the missing articles were a set of copper coins about the size of an English penny and far more roughly minted.

Dr. Frecon moved the casement window slowly outward, taking care to push it only a fraction of an inch at a time.

But it was this very roughness which made them as priceless as their intrinsic value was worthless. Each of them was almost as old as the Christian era, and taken together, they formed the most complete set of ancient Roman money in existence. Their owner, Anton Renant, was known to have refused an offer of approximately half a million francs for the set, but then he could afford to do so, since he was not only one of the wealthiest men in Paris, but he had the good fortune to marry a wife who had brought him a dowry that practically doubled his own private income.

The coins in question were kept in the library of the big Renant house on the outskirts of Paris, and possibly because of the fact that their owner had been accustomed to the handling of articles of great value all his life, there was little ceremony or secrecy attached to the display of the coins. M. Renant was in the habit of saying that he liked to have his treasures close at hand so that he could exhibit them to his friends whenever he wished to do so, without the necessity of a trip to the bank in order to get them out of the safety deposit vault.

Among the many persons who argued with M. Renant about what they called "his carelessness" was his valet, Pierre, a man who had been in his employ for 20 years or more and who should have known that his master was sufficiently set in his ways not to follow outside advice, even when he realized that this was offered in his own interests. Periodically, however, Pierre would take the coin owner to task for leaving pieces of his valuable collection scattered around the library, and the two men would come dangerously close to a quarrel, only to end in the friendly reconciliation which years of acquaintanceship entails on occasions of this kind.

Then Pierre, with a shrug of his shoulders and a wry smile, as an outward acknowledgment of his defeat, would make his rounds of the big house after sundown and carefully lock and bolt every door, setting the intricate burglar alarms at each window and making certain that the house was as nearly impregnable as possible. Quite without his master's knowledge—for Renant would never have countenanced such a procedure, although Madame Renant was heartily in favor of it—Pierre had arranged with one of the local detective agencies to have the house carefully guarded at all times. Watchmen circled the building regularly every hour, and the electric wires leading to the windows and doorways were connected not only with clanging gongs inside the house, but also with equally noisy bells in the nearest office of the detective agency.

It was for this reason that Pierre felt that he had done everything possible to safeguard the interests of the Renant collection. But, in spite of all his precautions, there came a morning when his master announced that the 20 most valuable pieces had disappeared!

The discovery had been made when M. Renant opened his desk preparatory to slipping the case into his bag in order that he might take it with him during a journey on which he had intended to start that day. Merely as a slight concession to the frequently professed wish of his wife, his friends and his valet, the coins had been kept in a drawer which could be unlocked only with a key which Renant himself carried. But the lock had proved only a slight obstacle to the acquisitive genius of the thief, for the wood around it had been splintered by some blunt instrument, and semi-circular indentations indicated that a heavy screw-driver or some similar tool had been employed.

"But," protested Pierre, "how did they succeed in getting into the house? How was it possible for them to pass"—— And here he stopped, suddenly, for it had just occurred to him that his master knew nothing of the precautions that had been taken.

"That," M. Renant replied, "is one of the questions that we will have to ask Dr. Frecon to answer for us."

"Dr. Frecon?" the valet echoed.

"Yes; you know the one I mean. He has been several times to see me, for he is by way of being an expert on coins himself. Of course, being connected with the Police Department under Monsieur Bertillon, he is not in a position to acquire a collection as extensive as mine, but, nevertheless, he has been kind enough to give me some valuable pointers and to help me in securing several of the pieces that rounded out the set that is missing. Will you call him at once by telephone and say to him that M. Renant wishes the honor of his presence in connection with a subject which, he is sure, will interest him extremely? Be careful not to say anything more than this, because I don't care to have the robbery made public at the present time—particularly as publicity would be of little assistance in locating articles which appear to be as commonplace as the missing coins."

The valet's message brought Dr. Frecon to the Renant house within half an hour, curious to know why his friend desired his assistance at such an unusual time of the day.

Silently, but with a gesture that spoke volumes, Renant indicated the splintered drawer of his desk, and Dr. Frecon gave vent to a whistle of surprise.

"What's missing?" he demanded. "Not the whole set of 20 pieces?"

Renant nodded, grimly.

"They were all in this case, as you know," he explained, "and I put them into the drawer last night, as I had done every night since I obtained the collection. Some of the coins have been there for eight years or more, and there has never been the slightest trouble—in spite of the warnings which you and others were kind enough to give me. I had intended to run down to Marseilles today on the trail of two pieces of early Roman origin which are supposed to have been unearthed recently. Naturally, I wanted to take this set along with me in order to make comparisons between the coins I had and those which were to be offered to me. I came into the room here less than an hour ago and found—precisely what you see. Nothing has been moved, not even a book has been disturbed, for I seemed to remember that you who make a profession of detecting crime always liked to find everything just as it was left by the criminal."

Dr. Frecon nodded, and his quick, gray eyes made a rapid survey of the room. So far as he could see, nothing was out of its accustomed place, and M. Renant assured him that the furniture had not been moved nor had anything been shifted from the position which it had occupied the previous evening.

"I retired rather early," declared the collector of coins, "because I had this journey in front of me and I wanted to make certain of securing a good night's sleep."

"Who locked up the house?" Dr. Frecon asked.

"Pierre attended to that," was the answer. "He has been looking after such details for the 20 years he has been in my employ."

"And you heard nothing unusual during the night?"

"Not a sound. As it happened, I was a little tired, and I don't think I was awake more than five minutes at the outside after I laid down."

"Did you have any callers just before you retired?" Dr. Frecon continued. "Anyone who might possibly have concealed themselves in the house after it had been locked up?"

"No one. So far as I knew, there had been no callers for at least two days, and there were certainly none yesterday, for I was working in this room all day and I could have heard anyone come in through the front part of the house."

DETECTIVES: CURIOUS CLEWS WHICH SOLVED BAFFLING CRIMES

"Who else was in the house with you last night—the regular members of your family and your household, I mean?"

"So far as the servants are concerned, there was no one here but Pierre and Helene. She's the nurse to my little girl, you know, and their quarters are on the other side of the house. All the other servants live in the cottage at the rear, and if any of them spent the night here it was in direct opposition to my wife's orders."

"Your wife? She was not here?"

"She has been visiting in Nice for a week or more. I had intended joining her when I completed my business in Marseilles, but the Southern climate doesn't seem to agree with our little girl, so she was to remain here with Helene until we returned."

A few more questions convinced Dr. Frecon that there was nothing further to be gained from an examination of the man from whom the coins had been stolen and, with a word of apology, the detective stated that he would like to interview Pierre—alone.

"Servants are always more or less self-conscious when their masters are present," he explained, "and I think your valet might give me some information personally that he would not think of telling me about if you were in the room. So, if you don't mind, I'd like to have a few minutes with him alone."

In spite of the fact that he thought the excuse rather lame, M. Renant presented no opposition to the plan and, summoning Pierre, left him alone in the library with the detective.

"How long have you been in the employ of M. Renant?" was Dr. Frecon's opening question.

"A little more than 20 years, Monsieur."

"And before then?"

Pierre gave the names of two of the most prominent men in Paris, for he was getting on in years and his service had been long and extensive.

"Did you attend to locking up the house last night after your master retired?"

"I not only locked up, Monsieur, but I personally set the burglar alarms at each of the doors and windows."

"The burglar alarms?" Dr. Frecon's tone plainly indicated his surprise at learning that safety devices of this kind were in use in the house. "Do you mean to tell me that the entire place is guarded by electric wires and bells?"

"Doubly guarded, Monsieur. In fact, trebly—for, in addition to the bells, which should ring inside the house if anyone attempt to enter, there are also bells which should ring at the headquarters of the Rivas Agency. In addition to this, one of the Rivas men is supposed to make a round of the house every hour between 10 o'clock at night and 5 o'clock in the morning. But M. Renant knows nothing of this, as, with the full approval of Madame Renant, I had the system installed during his absence, in order that his valuable collection might not be in danger of being burglarized."

Dr. Frecon whistled softly and his fingers strayed again toward the links of his watch chain, while the lines between his eyes showed plainly that he was puzzled. How, in the face of all these precautions, had it been possible for anyone to break in and rifle the desk? The shattering of the lock was a mere detail. The big question was the way in which entrance had been made into the house itself.

Suddenly a subconscious thought which had occurred to him while the valet was speaking obtruded itself, and Dr. Frecon inquired: "You said that 'bells should ring' both here and at the office of the detective agency. Also that a man 'should' have made his rounds of the house every hour during the night. Did your use of this word indicate a doubt as to whether the burglar alarm system was in working order and whether the watchman was attending to his duties?"

"As for the latter, I can't say, for I naturally didn't check up the activities of the night watchman. Doubtless they could tell you about him at the headquarters of the agency. But as to the burglar alarm system itself, I tested that only a few moments before you arrived and found that it was in perfect working order. The bells don't ring here nor can they be heard from this room, for they are so arranged that they will arouse only myself and the other servants. Madame Renant didn't wish either herself or her husband to be disturbed in the event of an attempted robbery. But, in spite of this, someone entered this house last night, and that is what I meant when I said the bells should ring."

"It's quite apparent that somebody entered," Dr. Frecon declared, a little testily. "The condition of the desk and the fact that the box of coins is missing is a proof of that—or, to use your own language, 'should be proof of that.'"

"But there is something else, Monsieur, that proves it even more conclusively," Pierre said, his voice dropping to a note of deep seriousness. "Come, come, let me show you."

Whipping out his knife, Dr. Frecon commenced an operation of his own

Following closely behind the valet, Dr. Frecon found himself being led through the long and rather dark hallway in the center of the house until he reached a room that was evidently the butler's pantry, a small alcove directly off the dining room and connected with the kitchen. Here a window, containing a large number of leaded panes caught his eye immediately, for several of the panes had been removed and it was quite possible for anyone standing outside to reach in and unlock the latch which secured the window.

"The burglar alarm is connected with this window, I suppose?" Dr. Frecon inquired.

Pierre bowed.

"If Monsieur will open the casement he will see that the connection appears to be excellent. M. Renant is, I believe, at present in his rooms, and I doubt whether he will hear the bells, even in the daytime—not that it matters much," he added, somewhat sadly, "for the damage has been done, and he would only inform me that my carefulness had resulted in nothing more than a waste of time."

Without a word, Dr. Frecon moved the casement window slowly outward, taking care to push it only a fraction of an inch at a time, just as a thief might have done in endeavoring to make a silent entrance. But his care was in vain. The casement had moved hardly more than an inch from the inner jamb when a loud clamor of bells sounded from the servants' quarters and another gong rang distinctly in the room above the butler's pantry.

"That's the one in my room," Pierre explained. "The others, as you may hear, would be sufficiently loud to arouse anyone close by, no matter if they were exceptionally heavy sleepers. I have already spoken to the chauffeur and the other servants who live out there, and not one of them heard a sound during the night. Is that not strange, Monsieur?"

"It's more than strange," Dr. Frecon growled, "it's almost uncanny. The only answer appears to be that the"—— And here he caught himself, for he had been on the verge of revealing to the valet his knowledge that M. Renant had recently been involved in several speculative ventures in the Bourse—ventures which had ended rather disastrously—and that his coins carried heavy insurance.

Restraining himself, the detective switched the subject and asked to be shown through the remainder of the house, inquiring at the same time precisely what persons had been there during the preceding night and whether M. Renant had had any caller during the evening.

"There were none whatever, Monsieur," the valet replied. "I am certain of that, because Edouard, the butler, was away last evening, and I would have answered the front door had anyone called. M. Renant retired rather early, and I locked up, as I have told you. Besides M. Renant and myself there were only two others in the house—Helene, the nurse, and Mlle. Celeste, M. Renant's little girl. They occupy rooms in the far wing of the building, but I will be glad to take you there if you care to go."

Under the guidance of the valet the detective visited every portion of the big house, exploring even the dark and unoccupied guest rooms, and proceeding as far as the suite ordinarily occupied by Madame Renant. The master of the house threw open his own rooms without the slightest reservation, and Dr. Frecon could not but feel that the attitude of the coin collector was one of worried innocence rather than conscious guilt. After concluding his investigation of the main portion of the house, the detective was led to the far wing, which was reserved almost exclusively for the use of little Celeste, her nurse and governess. The latter was away at the time, but the nurse was quite frank in giving her story of the events which had occurred during the previous evening.

"I put Mlle. Celeste to bed at the usual hour," she said, "about 7 o'clock, and my dinner was served here in my room a few moments later by one of the maids from the other section of the house. I read until about 10 o'clock, and then started to prepare for bed. I remember glancing out of the window, and being surprised to see that there was a light in M. Renant's room, for the master seldom retires before midnight. Even as I looked, it flashed out, and that entire part of the house was in darkness."

"You heard nothing unusual during the night?"

"Nothing whatever, Monsieur."

"You knew of the burglar alarm system which Pierre had installed under Madame Renant's instructions?"

"Certainly, Monsieur. One of the gongs is situated right here in my room, so that I might be warned in the event of any trouble and be prepared to protect Mlle. Celeste. Madame Renant fears kidnapers even more than she does burglars."

"Has the gong sounded recently?" Dr. Frecon inquired, with a sidelong glance at the valet.

"It has, Monsieur; twice this morning. Once about an hour ago and once more recently. I took it for granted that Pierre was making certain that everything was in working order."

Baffled in his hope of finding some part of the alarm apparatus which had become disarranged and might provide a clew to another way in which the house could have been entered, Dr. Frecon turned his attention to the nursery, where he found Celeste—a pretty blue-eyed child of 5—surrounded by toys of all descrip-

The Five Months Mystery of the Barricade

After a siege of five days, London police break into apartment above tailor shop where Charles Dickens had his clothes made — Occupant shoots himself as they enter — Body of woman, whom he had slain last August, is found in bathtub—Evidence at inquest shows he had lived since then in locked house, fearing arrest for murder—A true-life tale surpassing the imaginings of fiction.

TRUTH, which is stranger, may be also more horrible than fiction. More strange and more horrible than any fictional narrative is the true life-and-death story of a London man and woman just revealed to a shocked public. "Edgar Allan Poe never, in his gloomiest flights of imaginative mystery, invented a tale surpassing in somber horror the story of the murder of Alice Hilda Middleton and the suicide of Cecil Arthur Maltby in the barricaded house in Park road, Regent's Park."

So writes James Douglas, editor of the London Sunday Express, a keen dissector of crime motives, a competent analyzer and appraiser of the master-mysteries in both fact and fiction. Facts in the case, as officially found, bear out the definite conclusion of Mr. Douglas.

HAPPILY begins the tale in the summer of 1904, when handsome young "Jack" Middleton wooed, won and wedded an English country-town belle. Alice Hilda Durant of Horsham was 19, her lover a few years older. Middleton was a roving sailorman, a junior officer in the British mercantile marine. Already he had sailed the seven seas and knew the magic and the mysteries of many ports. He had known beautiful young women of various lands, but for him Alice Durant was the one only woman. As did Othello to his Desdemona, he told his sweetheart tales of hairbreadth 'scapes by land and sea. In her eyes he was a hero. She capitulated to his wooing. The wedding over, followed a happy honeymoon of some weeks of shore leave. Then Jack Middleton sailed away again, and his beautiful bride awaited his return.

Relatives describe the affair as a love match of more than ordinary sentimental appeal. Jack and Hilda were well mated. She was plumply pretty. Brown hair she had, and her eyes were gray. Her face was round, her nose straight, her lips red. The pink cheeks that characterize the well-nourished English girl were hers. "All curves and dimples," they said of young Mrs. Jack Middleton at the wedding. "All smiles and tears" might have described her as she stood on the pier and waved farewell to her stalwart husband sailing away on the great merchant ship.

Middleton made voyages to far ports. Sometimes he was gone for a whole year. Other voyages kept him from his wife but a few months. Always, when his good ship came in, he got shore leave for a few weeks. Always Alice Hilda was at the pier to wave him welcome. During the intervals ashore they lived in happiness complete. Letters, true love letters, were exchanged whilst the husband was at sea and at foreign ports earning a livelihood for his beloved wife. Every month Middleton sent her a generous allowance, and when he returned to her he was solicitous for her monetary needs. He was a faithful husband. She was a faithful wife; that is, until——

Sixty years ago in London lived one Maltby, a master tailor. He had literary leanings. He was a friend of Charles Dickens, then in the height of his fame. Maltby and the great Victorian novelist were such close friends that, when separated, they carried on a correspondence by post. Maltby's son grew up a tailor, plus a novelist. The father's literary associations no doubt affected his career to some extent. The son was a spiritualist and a mystic. He wrote several novels, books of a weird, other-worldly sort, promulgating certain theories of life here and hereafter which in those rather matter-of-fact days were not taken seriously by the reading public nor by the critics who, in some considerable degree, can make or mar the career of a writer.

This second Maltby had a son, born in 1875. He was named Cecil Arthur. He grew up a tailor, like his grandfather and his father, but, unlike them, he seems not to have had any special literary leanings. He inherited his grandfather's letters from Dickens and cherished them more as bits of treasure in the nature of family heirlooms than as specimens of the handwriting of the world's best-beloved writer of fiction.

Cecil Arthur Maltby inherited also the tailoring business, grown to proportions quite prosperous. The shop of Maltby, in the time of Cecil's father, had acquired a certain well-defined distinction. That Maltby had designed a sartorial accessory to which he managed to draw the attention of the Prince of Wales, he who became later King Edward VII. In those days the Prince set the masculine fashions. He approved and adopted the garment designed by Maltby. That made the shop of Maltby famous for the time. Charles Dickens also had suits made there.

The house at 24 Park road, Regent's Park, tailor shop downstairs, residence apartment upstairs, enjoyed a brief reign of glory. The imaginative and eccentric Maltby, father of Cecil, got word spread abroad that he was official tailor to H. R. H. the Prince of Wales. That, of course, he was not, but such is the receptive character of the English middle-class mind that any slight hint of official connection with royalty is magnified to magnificent importance; and thus the advertising value of the pretension was great, both socially and commercially.

So it came about that when Cecil Maltby succeeded to the tailoring business he was by way of being a rich man in his particular section of London. He was one of the master tradesmen looked up to by the middle and lower classes. Old Queen Victoria having died, Edward had become King of England; and was it not at Maltby's, 24 Park road, forsooth, that a new-style "weskit" had been designed and made especially for him as Prince of Wales?

The younger Maltby, he of the third generation of Park road tailors, turned out like too many youths who inherit their cake and expect both to eat and have it. Many years ago Archbishop John J. Glennon of St. Louis said in effect that the third generation of a family from the country settling and staying in a big city is inclined to run to seed. Cecil Arthur Maltby bore out the truth of that general statement. He had plenty of money, too much for his own good or for the good of his family. He married when young. His wife was a woman of refinement. They had half a dozen children. Maltby drank heavily, gambled, was a rakish sort of young man all around. Because of his heavy drinking his wife found it necessary to leave him, taking the children with her. She got a legal separation, and for some years Maltby was made to provide for the family.

The Maltbys separated 12 years ago, when the husband and father of the family was 35. The children have been growing up virtually without personal contact with their father. One of the daughters now is a beautiful young woman. She scarcely has known her father. In recent years remittances from him have stopped. He had squandered his funds in riotous living. Though his business grew of its own momentum—aided, no doubt, by the tradition of the Prince of Wales patronage—he neglected it. One year ago he had reached such a low financial stage that his creditors were hot and heavy upon him. The time-honored shop of the Maltbys had fallen into disrepute. King Edward was dead, years ago, and the Prince of Wales "weskit" of 40 years back no longer held glamor that helped the house of Maltby to shine undimmed.

Like many other London tradesmen, Maltby lived in the rooms above his shop. They were commodious chambers. The furnishings were costly, and good taste was exercised in their selection. They "harmonized" with the interior fittings and with the shapes of the rooms. The old artistic bent developed through the Dickensian Maltby and the novel-writing Maltby had not suffered deflowering in the rakish, rich Maltby of this third generation. Doubtless to his wife, long flown to other refuge, must be accredited some of the taste and wisdom displayed in choosing and arranging the furnishings, though Cecil Maltby himself is known to have possessed an acute sense of the material fitness of things. Being by inheritance a master tailor, he garbed himself in the latest modes and always presented to the public a highly groomed aspect. This, by the way, stood him in good stead when his financial star were slipping, and also it served to induce silly women

"Dash me!" cried Maltby, one day late in December, 1921. "I need a woman to tidy things up a bit here. A woman—let me see, now. Yes—I must find one I don't know, who doesn't know me."

And thereat Cecil Arthur Maltby laughed a drunken laugh. Christmas had flashed past him in the musty apartment. It may be that he recalled his boyhood reading of the Christmas tales by his grandfather's famous friend and had grown remorseful or perhaps self-pitying.

Yes, he needed a woman to tidy up—no doubt about that.

III.

Mrs. Middleton, the Alice Hilda Durant of nearly 20 years ago, still was a beautiful woman. She was only 37. Having borne no children, never having had the care of a household from one year's end to another, she remained buoyant and bright. No dragginess shone in her eyes or was evident in her steps. She was alert, keen, eager for pleasure as when she became the joyous bride of young Jack Middleton.

Jack had advanced in his profession. Climbing from grade to grade, he had become chief officer of the huge ship Maresfield, which carried thousands of tons of cargo to various ports. For nearly 19 years he had been cruising about the world as a married absentee under protest, always glad to get home now and then to Alice Hilda, who on each occasion showed her joy at greeting him.

"It is a beautiful love match," relatives and friends continued saying. "They act just like young lovers every time they meet."

On Jan. 2, 1921, the Maresfield sailed for Bangkok, ...m. Capt. Middleton bade goodby to his wife as she stood throwing kisses to him. Her handkerchief fluttered in the chill breeze as long as the handsome commander on the bridge could see her, and he threw kisses back to her.

Lonely for Jack, Alice Hilda plunged into social gaieties. At a bridge drive she met a handsome man named Maltby. To be sure, he wore a somewhat dissipated look, yet he had fine manners, and his clothing was superbly well set. Maltby, the Cecil Arthur of our ...le tale, owned a side-car. He took Mrs. Middleton ...ut riding more than once. He "had a way about him," that Maltby. Some say that he was a hypnotist. In any event, Jack Middleton's ship was but a few hundred miles on the brine when Maltby induced Mrs. Middleton to go to 24 Park road and live with him in the dishevveled apartment upstairs.

Mrs. Middleton's relatives and friends suspected nothing amiss. Her sister knew that she had gone to No. 24, but assumed that the lonely woman had taken rooms there to await the return of her husband. So unsuspecting was the sister that she had her own trunk sent to No. 24 for safekeeping when she was out of lodgings temporarily. That was several months after Maltby induced the woman to go to his home.

Early in June Capt. Middleton returned from his voyage to Bangkok. Mrs. Middleton, as usual, met him at the landing pier. She was, apparently, as affectionate as of old. The reunited couple spent a few weeks together. Middleton had one little spell of suspicion, but that soon was dissipated. His wife had mailed two letters. He knew the purpose and destination of one of the missives. When he asked her, quite casually, about the other letter she seemed embarrassed.

That letter, as it turned out, was to Maltby.

Mrs. Middleton accompanied her husband aboard his ship and was with him there for a few days. Then he sailed away. She returned to the Maltby apartment. That was late last July. All these facts were adduced at a double inquest held a few weeks ago. Tragedy, leading up to the inquest, had begun when Maltby determined to have a woman tidy up his house. Tragedy accrued with heightening fervor up to the day before the inquest.

IV.

Tragedy began to blaze forth, though efforts on the part of Maltby to smother the flame were made, on Aug. 24, last. That day Mrs. Middleton received a postcard from her sister, who announced that she would call next day at 24 Park road to get her trunk.

"And, Hilda, please be there yourself, as I wish to see you," said the sister.

Next day the sister called. She was unable to get response to repeated use of the brass knocker and the doorbell. She went away and spread the news that Mrs. Middleton was missing, mysteriously. Efforts to find her were made. In September it was discovered that she had not appeared at the customary place to collect the monthly allowance from her husband. That was the first time she had missed calling for the money.

Policemen who called at the Maltby place found nobody at home. The door knocker and the bell had been removed. The mail box inside the door also had been taken away. The door had been barred inside with a heavy timber. Shop shutters and apartment shutters had been closed and fastened. Evidently Maltby was away for an extended period. Neighbors knew nothing about his movements.

"He is a mysterious man," they explained, "and has had little or nothing to do with us. He had been drinking heavily of late, it appeared, and there was a woman coming in and going out with him for some months past. Beyond that, we know nothing."

But one neighbor was found who did know something, though it served but to deepen the mystery. A woman living next door had permitted Maltby to get water from her cistern for some days. He appeared to have fallen on hard luck, she said. He had lost his business, his clothing had become wrinkly and soiled, and he looked haggard and hungry. The poor man's gas and water supplies had been cut off by the companies. Non-payment, agents had explained. So the kindly neighbor was letting Maltby have water from her cistern.

That was many weeks after the disappearance of Mrs. Middleton. A radio message had been sent to Capt. Middleton in midsea, asking if he knew anything as to his wife's whereabouts. He radioed back that he knew nothing whatever. Receipt of the message did not worry Middleton. He knew that his wife moved frequently when he was away, at her own sweet will, and he took it for granted that she had moved and neglected to notify her relatives.

In the meantime Maltby continued to be seen at infrequent intervals. Only at night was he visible. In the darkness he would unbar his door and creep out to buy cheap cuts of meat at a butcher's shop and a few other edibles at a grocer's. Then he would creep back, rebar his door and remain dead to the world for days.

London, as you must know, is a very large city, and many weeks had passed before the rather remarkable movements of Maltby began to attract unusual attention or cause suspicion to be directed against him.

"His woman has deserted him," guessed the neighbors, "and, poor man, he's drowning his trouble in drink."

Friends and relatives of Mrs. Middleton sought in vain to get in touch with Maltby, in the hope of learning what had become of her. Some of them had ascertained that she had been living with him. She had tired of him, they suggested, and gone away. Having lived always, up to that unhappy episode, a blameless life, it was quite natural that she should wish to seclude herself. Her husband was due home again late in September, and when she received the post card from her sister she had fled the place. It never would do for her sister to find her there, living with Maltby. Moreover, she could not face her faithful husband.

Thus did the others reason. Capt. Middleton returned, got shore leave, and was astonished to learn that his wife had disappeared. He set about finding her if that were possible. He learned much as to her affair with Maltby, but was unable to interview that individual personally. Middleton finally wrote to the police authorities at Scotland Yard, early last December. Excerpts from his letter follow:

"I am writing to claim your assistance in ascertaining the fate of my wife, Alice Hilda Middleton, whose photographs I inclose. She has been missing for four months, in circumstances leading me and all her most intimate friends seriously to suspect foul play. My wife and I have been married for 19 years, and until August last she never has failed to meet me on my arrival in this country. When last heard of, namely, on Aug. 15 last, my wife was living at 24 Park road, Regent's Park, with Cecil Arthur Maltby, who does not carry on any business, but sleeps in the premises mentioned. * * *

And Now—Where is Pocahontas?

American has received permission to hunt for the body of Indian Princess at Gravesend, England—Fires and alterations of church make the quest difficult—Sad fate of America's greatest Indian heroine who died far from the land of her people—Did she really save the life of Capt. John Smith? :: ::

THE wonderful revelations which followed the opening of Pharaoh Tutankhamen's tomb in Egypt have distracted attention from a search now under way for another royal tomb much nearer home, the finding of which should be fraught with great interest to every American.

A quest is being made for the grave of the only native American Crown Princess whose name has lived in history, and if the effort is successful the mortal remains of Pocahontas, the greatest of Indian heroines, will be brought back from England to rest at last in peace in Virginia, where her father was a King and she was a Princess before the first white colonist set foot on the soil of the Old Dominion.

Not only was her father King of all the seacoast tribes of Virginia by his own might and right, but after white men settled in his domain his title was confirmed and strengthened by the British Government and the already mighty Powhatan was solemnly invested with the title of Emperor at the express order of King James of Great Britain while his little daughter, Pocahontas, looked on in awe and wonderment at the coronation ceremony.

Years after she was to know the potency of this British patent of royalty when, upon visiting England, she was received with royal honors befitting her rank as a Princess of the realm.

And now, if they can find her, Pocahontas, after a lapse of 306 years, will complete that homeward voyage on which she was about to start when she fell a victim to quick consumption and died in the alien land of the paleface in 1617, at the age of 22.

Edward Page Gaston, an American writer, lecturer and authority on Indian history and customs, is making the search for the grave of Pocahontas at Gravesend, England, where she was entombed in a crypt in the church. Formal permission for the search was granted recently by the present rector of the church. The work thus far has been slow and tedious. The parish records show beyond question that Pocahontas was buried in the church in March, 1617, but, on account of fire and changes which have been made in the structure, the old crypts and tombs have been so disturbed that the exact whereabouts of the remains of the Indian Princess has long been a matter of speculation.

If the body is found it will be reburied, probably at Jamestown, Va., where she spent most of her short life, and in all probability an imposing mausoleum will mark the spot.

Whether by historical right or the force of tradition the name of Pocahontas is linked in song and story with that of Capt. John Smith, that grizzled and doughty British soldier of fortune, who took so militant a part in the founding of the first Virginia colony.

Historians are divided as to whether Pocahontas really saved the life of John Smith when he was about to be clubbed to death at the command of her royal father. Arber, Pindexter, Simms, Henry and Fiske have stood up for the story, while Deane, Neil, Adams and others have banished it to the realm of tradition. Bancroft carried the story through early editions of his History of the United States, but cut it out in 1879.

The argument most often used against the Pocahontas legend is that in his first report to his Government after returning to England, Capt. Smith, while dwelling on many other details of his adventures in Virginia, made no mention of having been condemned to death by Powhatan or of having been saved from the executioners by Pocahontas.

It was not until several years later, after Pocahontas had been baptized a Christian and had married the Englishman, John Rolfe, and at a time when she was about to arrive in England, that John Smith told the tale which has become an American classic.

At her baptism Pocahontas had taken the name Rebecca and it was as Lady Rebecca that she was introduced at the English court, mainly through the influence of Capt. Smith, who included the rescue story in a letter to Queen Anne.

W. Gilmore Simms, in his "Life of Capt. John Smith," argues that the elision of the rescue from the first official report and its appearance in the letter to the Queen cannot be held to be against its veracity. His explanation is that at the time Smith returned to England it was a matter of public policy to make no disclosures which would indicate to the British public that the colonization of Virginia had aroused the hostility of the Indians. The comfortable stay-at-home Britons were to be encouraged to suppose that the colonists and the Indian chiefs had their daily 5 o'clock tea together in genial amity. The historian opines that, even if Smith had included the rescue story in his first report, it would have been deleted by the censor.

But times had changed when Pocahontas arrived in England. The hostility of the Indians was known and there was no further reason for suppressing the story that has enthralled thousands of American boys and girls.

Nothing that has been written throws more light on the character and services of Pocahontas than does Capt. John Smith's letter in her behalf to his Queen. This is what he wrote:

"To the Most High and Virtuous Princess, Queen Anne of Great Britain.

"Most Admired Queen: The love I bear my God, my King and countrie hath so oft emboldened mee in the worst of extreme dangers, that now honestie doth constraine mee presume thus farre beyond myselfe to present your majestie this short discourse: if ingratitude be a deadly poyson to all honest vertues, I must bee guiltee of that crime if I should omit any meanes to be thankful.

"So it is that some ten years agoe, being in Virginia and taken prisoner by the power of Powhatan, their chief King, I received from this great salvage exceeding great courtesies, especially from his son Nantaquuas, the most manliest, comeliest, boldest spirit I ever saw in a salvage, and his sister Pocahontas, the King's most deare and well-beloved daughter, being but a child of twelve or thirteen years of age, whose compassionate, pitiful heart, of desperate estate, gave me much cause to respect her: I being the first Christian this proud King and his grim attendants ever saw. And thus inthralled in their barbarous power, I cannot say I felt the least occasion of want that was in the power of those, my mortal foes, to prevent, notwithstanding all the threats. After some six weeks fatting among these savage courtiers, at the minute of my execution, she hazarded the beating out of her own brains to save mine, and not only that, but so prevailed with her father that I was safely conducted to Jamestowne, where I found about eight and thirtie miserable poore and sicke creatures to keep possession of all those large territories of Virginia. Such was the weakness of this poor commonwealth, as, had the salvages not fed us we directly had starved.

"And this reliefe, most gracious Queen, was commonly brought us by this Lady Pocahontas. Notwithstanding all those passages when inconstant fortune turned our peace to warre this tender virgin would still not spare to dare to visit us, and by her own faires have been oft appeased and our wants still supplyed. Were it the policie of her father thus to employe her, or the ordinance of God thus to make her his instrument, or her extraordinary affection to our nation I know not, but of this I am sure. When her father with the utmost of his policie and power sought to surprise me, having but eighteen with me, the dark night could not affright her from coming through the irksome woods, and with watered eyes gave me advice to escape his furie; which, had he known, he had surely slaine her.

"Jamestowne with her wild traine, she as freely frequented as her father's habitation and during the time of two or three years she, next under God, was still the instrument to preserve this colonie from death, famine and utter confusion, which, if in those times had once become dissolved, Virginia might have lain as it was at our first arrivall to this day. Since then this business having beene turned and varied by many accidents from that I left it at it is most certaine, after a long and troublesome warre after my departure, betwixt her father and our colonie, all

Marcia Mason's Lucky Star

By Bess Streeter Aldrich

THERE is, in the world, an occasional gay, care-free person who seems to be carried, not only to the skies but through life itself, on flowery beds of ease. Such a rara avis was Marcia Mason. Katherine's nature was of a sweet seriousness. Eleanor, although merry-hearted, was studious. Marcia was neither of these. If she was serious she concealed it admirably. Her studying was usually a very hasty procedure, conducted on the way down a corridor to her recitation room. She had a flour-sieve mind, warranted to hold a great deal of information for at least 20 minutes.

"I always volunteer during the first part of the recitation while the going's good," she brazenly told at home, "then my silence isn't so conspicuous when the road gets rough."

Things seemed to come Marcia's way.

"I was born under a lucky star," she often told the family. And the family almost believed it.

In appearance she was undeniably lovely, and, as one of her aunts said, "as likable as she was loo'sable." No one could say she was lazy about the house. She simply made a wise and far-sighted choice of household tasks. Soon after she had enthusiastically offered to shell the peas, it became apparent to the other girls that the pea-shelling operation, carried on under the breeze-swept grape arbor, was greatly preferable to doing the dishes in the hot kitchen or making countless beds.

"Marcia certainly has the happy faculty of slipping through life easily," mother would sometimes say in exasperation to father.

"Well, mother, I don't know anyone in the family that makes more friends," father would remind her.

This brings us to Father and Mother Mason's attitude toward and about their children. For 26 years they had argued over them, but always when they were alone. Toward the children they presented a solid front. If mother chose to reprove, father either assisted at the ceremony or kept silent. And vice versa. It is a fine old policy. It has been effective since the days of Abraham and Sarah.

When they were alone, however, they argued it out. And the strange part is that neither one always took the same side. If mother found fault with some characteristic of her offspring, father immediately made excuses for it. If father offered the complaint, mother flew to her child's defense like a mother bear.

In this instance father was right about Marcia's friends. Everybody liked her, the teachers and old people and children, and Hod Benson, who brought the coal, and Lizzie Badle, the town dressmaker.

When Marcia went away to shcool, it was as though a great deal of the sunshine of the Mason home had gone with her. When she returned for vacations, everything and everyone, from the piano to Tillie, seem to brighten at her coming. After all, the old world needs more of them—those people who turn to joyousness as the tides run to meet the moon.

Each time Marcia came home she had new tales to tell. And father and mother, who came to reprove, remained to laugh.

"Say, folks," she would begin, "I had to write a thesis on some form of lower animal life for old Prof. Briggs in zoology class, and what I know about zoology you could put in a spoon. So I wrote about a starfish—sort of from the fiction standpoint—and they told me old Prof. Briggs laughed till he nearly cried over the joys and sorrows of that little echinoderm—I guess it's an echinoderm. I got a grade of excellent, and all I know about a starfish to this day is that it has five points and wiggles."

"You can't go through life sidestepping that way, my girl," father sermonized after he had suppressed a chuckle. "One of these days you'll bump up against something mighty serious and wish you'd applied yourself."

"Don't preach, father!" Marcia rubbed a pink and white cheek against father's graying hair. "When that time comes I'll be like Sentimental Tommy—I'll find a way." And soft-hearted old father hoped it was true.

Father and Mother Mason held the sensible view that each of the girls should take up some practical training. So Marcia chose a course in special primary teaching for her senior year.

"How'd you happen to choose primary?" Katherine wanted to know.

"Oh, primary hours are shortest of all, and who wants to stay in a schoolroom any longer than he has to?" was Marcia's cheerful reply. And when you come to think about it, who does?

During that senior year, Marcia had a great many experiences to relate to the family.

"In October we taught those little Comanches about squirrels and Columbus and other adventurous gentlemen," she told the folks at Thanksgiving. "Primary teachers are awful liars," she stated, blandly. "Imagine! This whole month has been rainy, and we've smiled our mail-order primary smiles and made those youngsters sing 'Pit-a-pat, see the lovely raindrops,' just because it was supposed to have mutual relation to the disgusting elements."

Mr. Wheeler enjoyed it apparently, so she made fun of the training school for his benefit.

In spring vacation she summed up her work with: "We had a perfect orgy of cherry trees and hatchets and valentines in February—and I wish you could have seen the training school in March. We simply fell over seed boxes and kites and we fairly ate pussywillows. This month we've painted millions of wild-looking robins. You'd die to see them—their beaks all run down and mix up sociably with their wings. It's a great life," she added, blithely.

It was during this spring vacation that she began talking about Capitol City. "I'm just living to teach there next year. They send some member of the board every spring to the training school to choose the best teachers and I must be one. I don't want to go to any little two-by-four. Capitol City for me!"

To do Marcia justice, she really applied herself that spring. The stakes were worth working for. On the last Friday morning in April she had gone from the college to town on one of her numerous unimportant errands, and was waiting by the downtown station for the college car. As it stopped, a sorority sister came down the steps. "He's in there," she whispered. "Capitol City Superintendent—come for teachers."

"Where?"

"There—halfway down—right-hand side."

He looked just as Marcia would have expected him to look—heavy, distinguished, gray-haired, with a Van Dyke beard. She sat down behind him and whispered to his broad back a foolish little jargon:

"Eeny meeny miny mo,
Please, kind sir, choose me to go."

Across the aisle from the great man sat Mrs. Hastings, the college doctor's wife. A strange young man was with her. From occasional glimpses of his good-looking profile, Marcia decided that he bore a faint resemblance to Mrs. Hastings. There was something about him she liked, his square jaw and alert manner and a distinct air of sophistication that none of the college boys had yet acquired.

The car stopped at the entrance to the campus and let out its load. As Marcia was about to pass Mrs. Hastings and the strange young man, the former said: "Oh, Miss Mason, are you in a hurry?" As there was merely a small matter of an English literature class due then, Miss Mason assured Mrs. Hastings she was not at all in haste.

"Could you show my brother around a little? My brother, Mr. Wheeler, Miss Mason. . . . I would go with him myself, but I told Hannah if the baby needed me, to put a red cloth in the window, and there it is!" She pointed excitedly to her home across from the campus. She was breathless, and anxious to get away.

"Maybe the baby has only joined the bolsheviki," her brother suggested.

Marcia laughed. She liked him, his keen brown eyes and the sudden humorous lift to the mouth that she had thought so stern.

"You can see for yourself he's not married or he wouldn't be so flippant over a serious matter," Mrs. Hastings called to Marcia. "Show him the new amphitheater—and Science Hall"—she was already half-way across the street—"and the new dormitory and the training school."

"My sister," Mr. Wheeler said, "missed her calling. She would have made an excellent Major-General or park policeman."

Marcia laughed again. She still liked him. Mr. Wheeler looked down at his appointed guardian. She wore an immaculate white suit, with audaciously green silk sweater and cap. The V-shaped neck of her blouse set off the lovely contour of her face. By way of completing a very satisfactory picture, there was a bunch of dewy-sweet violets in her belt.

"Do you happen by any chance," Mr. Wheeler asked, "to be the Miss Mason who is Keith Baldrige's fiancee?"

"No, indeed," Miss Mason said, more emphatically than was necessary, for it wasn't at all disgraceful to be engaged to Keith Baldridge. "That's my sister, Katherine. I'm Marcia. And you know Keith?"

"Like David knew Jonathan."

They crossed the green, sloping campus, sweet-smelling from its recent mowing. There was some conversation relative to their mutual interest in Keith Balbridge, and then Marcia said, glibly:

"You see before you the new Science Hall. It is 37 stories high, a mile square and cost $70,000,000. The roof of the new dormitory may be seen through the trees. Out beyond the Domestic Science Building is the amphitheater and beyond the amphiteater lies Italy."

They had come to a little rustic bridge across a miniature creek. Neither one made a move to walk on. In fact, to be explicit, they sat down on the low railing.

"As for the training school," Marcia continued, "I wouldn't voluntarily take you there. It's the place where you abandon hope all you who enter here."

"You teach there?"

"I do." She looked at her wrist watch. "And in 50 minutes I'm to teach before the Superintendent of the Capitol City school, if I haven't died of fright. He was on the car. Did you see him—a big, husky Vandyker?" Mr. Wheeler had noticed him.

"I want to make a professional hit with him," Marcia went on, confidentially. "I've simply got to teach in Capitol City next year. I love a city. I want to walk in the crowds and eat at tearooms. I want to go to the theater and sit in a box."

Mr. Wheeler looked judicially, appraisingly, at her. "I don't believe," he said, soberly, "it would injure the looks of the box."

They both laughed. Marcia was enjoying herself immensely. He was like that for the whole hour they were together, keen, clever, interesting. In comparison with him all the home boys and college boys of her numerous friendships faded quietly into a blurred masculine background. In the light of his clever repartee Marcia reveled. To his questioning she told him a great deal about herself. She described faculty members to the last comic detail. Mr. Wheeler enjoyed it, apparently, so she made fun of the training school for his benefit. She spared no one. She mocked the artificial manners of the student teachers and imitated the head of the department. His hearty, virile laugh was ample payment for her pains.

It lacked seven minutes of the hour. Marcia slipped down from the bridge rail with, "I go, like the quarry slave at night, scourged to his dungeon." Suddenly she clapped her hand to her throat, in a characteristic gesture. "Oh, my goodness! I forgot—I have to have a whole violet plant with the roots on for my class! Oh, help me look, will you?"

Mr. Wheeler sprang nimbly to his feet and together they searched over that particular part of the campus. Not a violet showed itself above the close-cropped lawn, nothing but bold-faced dandelions.

"Can't you—cut that part out?" he suggested.

"You don't know Miss Rarick," Marcia was genuinely distressed. "If you haven't everything your lesson plan calls for, she just looks at you—and you shrink—and shrivel"——

The wrist watch said three minutes of the hour. "I'll have to take a dandelion root," she announced, "and pass it off for a violet. They won't know the difference." Already her unquenchable spirits were rising. She borrowed Mr. Wheeler's knife and hastily dug up a dandelion. "See! I'll take two or three violet blossoms and leaves"—she took them out of her belt—"attach them to the dandelion root, and wrap my handkerchief around the center as though it were damp—and there you are!"

"But, see here, they're nothing alike," he protested.

"Oh, we should worry!" said the blithe Miss Mason. "Thank you for helping me. You can come along if you want to, and see me teach. I'm frightened senseless, anyway, at the Vandyker, so one or two more able-bodied men won't matter.

Mr. Wheeler said he would be delighted to see the dandelion masquerading before the great man. So they hurried up the gravel driveway to the huge training-school building. Marcia pointed out the door where he was to go. "I have to go in another way," she explained; "the righteous from the wicked, you know."

The model primary room was an awe-inspiring place. Eleven student teachers, notebooks in hand, sat by the side walls. Two critic teachers, notebooks in hand, sat by the rear walls. The head supervisor, notebook in hand, walked through the room as though to remind one of the day of judgment. The Capitol City Superintendent was there, and two or three lesser lights. Marcia and nine small pupils held the center of the arena, after the manner of the early Christian martyrs. Her heart was beating suffocatingly, but she conducted a very creditable little reading class, whose lesson was based on a violet plant that was much less modest than it should have been, owing to the fact that its pedal extremities, so to speak, had been grafted from a member of a family noted for its brazen forwardness.

Marcia was a model of the sweet young instructor. Only once did she throw a fleeting glance of roguishness at Mr. Wheeler, to see his mouth lift at the corners in the characteristic way she had liked.

The lesson was over. Everyone breathed more naturally. The student teachers and visitors rose to go to chapel exercises. Marcia looked around for Mr. Wheeler, but did not see him. In the doorway, she turned to look at the Capitol City Superintendent, in the hope that he was discussing her with Miss Rarick. He was not so engaged. He was picking up from the floor a dandelion root, alias, a violet.

The sight disturbed her somewhat, but she put the thought of it aside and went on to chapel. Near the auditorium she came upon a group of senior girls waiting for her. Some days at chapel exercises these girls sat on the front seat and acted virtuously. Some days they sat on the back seat and acted villainously. Today was apparently one of their pious days, for they filed decorously down the center aisle to the front seat and sang the opening hymn, "Holy, Holy, Holy," as lustily as though they were the original vestal virgins.

The Superintendent of the Capitol City schools, in all his dignity, sat upon the platform with the faculty.

From the chaotic jumble of her mind one naked, leering truth stood out: He was the Superintendent of the Capitol City Schools.

After the prayer and announcements, President Wells arose and said: "We have with us today the superintendent of the largest school system in the State." Marcia looked at him, sitting there so calmly. How nice it would be, she thought, to be so undisturbed when you were about to address an audience. President Wells had ceased introducing him, but he did not stir from his chair. Instead, from the semi-gloom of the back row there was stepping out a tall, clean-cut, alert young man, with keen brown eyes and a strong chin.

All eyes were upon him. Marcia's own, wide, fascinated, alarmed, watched him. The color dropped away from her face, and then surged back like a scarlet tide. From the chaotic jumble of her mind one naked, leering truth stood out: He was the Superintendent of the Capitol City schools.

Like a kaleidoscope, things she had said to him tumbled about in her brain, forming a nightmare of combinations. With dry lips she whispered to the girl next to her: "Who's the big man—in gray?"

"Supe at Mapleville—only has eight teachers under him—acts like he was President of the U. S. A."

The man on the platform was speaking, easily, forcefully. "Earnestness and sincerity form the keystone of the teaching profession." He said a great deal more than that. He said it with fire and enthusiasm. He said he was there to choose teachers, high-grade teachers, who had been faithful in their work. Carefulness, attention to details, were things that would be considered. But over and above these was the great fundamental question: What was the spirit of the teacher? What gifts of heart and soul as well as of mind did she come bearing to her task?

Marcia felt stunned, sick. She sat with miserable, hot eyes fixed upon her lap. It was all over at last. Chapel was out. President Wells and other faculty members had surrounded the speaker. Marcia slipped away from the girls. She attended two classes and got through a noisy boarding-house dinner. She wanted to go home. She wanted to see the family, especially mother, comfortable and comforting mother. Katherine would be home for the week-end. She had written to that effect and also that Keith was coming for Sunday.

Marcia did not go to her afternoon classes and she hung a frank "Busy—Keep Out" sign on her door. Then she packed her grip and slipped down to the afternoon train.

At home the family was all excitement over the unexpected arrival. Mother bustled about with happy moisture in her eyes even while she took in the fact that Marcia had something on her mind. When they had finished supper it came out, just as mother knew it would. They were all sitting about the table—all but Junior, whose urgent business with Runt Perkins and Shorty Marston always found him swallowing his last bites while on the way to the door.

Marcia told them all about it. She spared herself not at all. She had made a fool of herself, she said, and they might as well know it. "The thing that makes me maddest," she informed them, tearfully, "is that I stretched things just to hear him laugh. I made myself out lots worse than I am. He was the sternest looking man you ever saw, and I loved to see the corners of his mouth pull up. He laughed an awful lot," she finished, forlornly.

Everyone looked sympathetic. Katherine's consolation was: "Marcia, I just can't imagine myself talking so glibly to a strange man."

Marcia's contrition was complete. "I can't either, Kathie. I envy you being so cool and sweet and courteous to everybody. Only it seemed as though I'd known him a thousand years," she added.

Eleanor's contribution was: "Myself, I think it was terribly romantic."

Marcia's scorn was withering. "Romantic? Tragic, you mean."

Father began a dry, "Well, Marcia, I've always told you you'd run up against"—— But as Marcia dabbed a moist roll of handkerchief into her eyes, he finished, lamely: "Never mind, honey, I think you can have the third grade here."

Tillie was on the warpath. There's a law about false pretenses. He ought to be sued. If I was a man I'd trounce the middle of the road with him."

Mother was furtively wiping away a tear or two herself. "Marcia, there's something about you that makes me think of myself when I was a girl. Verily, the poet was an inspired philosopher who remarked:

Where can we better be
Than in the bosom of our fam-i-lee?

On Saturday it developed that there were enough young people home for the week-end to get up a fair-sized picnic crowd. Cars were prohibited. Tommie Hickson was to bring a hayrack so they could all go together.

Mother thought it a fine plan and began bustling preparations for a basket supper. Tillie, whose emotion over Marcia had worn off, was disgruntled to have the Saturday work upset.

"You do spoil them girls, Molly," she volunteered. "Here's Kathie engaged to that Baldridge, and Marcia a grown woman, and even Eleanor getting along. Accordin' to my light they ought to be hemmin' sheets and piecin' comforts instead of -galavantin' round to picnics."

"Tillie," mother said, calmly, "a very wise poet once wrote about a rich old man who was robbed of all his wealth. The poem ends:

"'They robbed him not of a golden shred
Of the childish dreams in his wise old head;
And "They're welcome to all things else," he said,
When the robbers came to rob him.'

"I figure you can buy sheets and comforts in any department store, but you can't buy dreams and memories of youth."

"Pfs!" Tillie had a special snort that denoted scorn. "You can't eat dreams nor cover your nakedness with memories."

"No," said mother, placidly, "you can't. And when the girls are old, old ladies, the richest food won't feed their minds nor the thickest comforts bring warmth to their hearts."

So they went on working together, side by side, two good old friends who would do anything for each other, but as far apart as the earth and the stars, as far apart as Martha and Mary—a Piecer of Quilts and a Weaver of Dreams.

Tommie Hickson came with the hayrack and two horses, which seemed to share Tillie's scorn for the festivities.

Doctoring Where There Are No Doctors

"When I examined the child it was in a normal condition and sleeping as good as any child ever did. They had just imagined, after going to bed, that the child wasn't breathing right. The only satisfaction I got out of this trip was a little money and the pleasure of rehearsing a few sugar-coated words of the day.

"Getting back home I had the same experience. Next morning my wife helped me into the house and thawed my shoes. Then I brought my saddle in by the fire to thaw the ice out of the stirrups, ready for the next trip.

"Another night I was called to attend a man who had been out possum hunting. He had cut down a tree and it had caught his left leg and broken the bones in the lower leg. I tried to get medical aid, but could not and so I proceeded to set the bones myself, a neighbor woman holding a lamp in one hand and helping me with the other.

"I managed to get the leg set, although it was a difficult job. Both ends of the bones had punched out through the flesh and I had to work them back in place, then bandage so as to leave a space for treating an open wound. The patient had a speedy recovery and is a well man today. All I got out of it was two hands of home-raised tobacco, a gallon of sorghum and a promise. The tobacco and sorghum went long ago, but I still have the promise.

"Like other men who practice medicine, I've met almost every kind of person as to disposition. And some have fictitious ideas, delusional manias—they just imagine things.

"I remember the man who came to my house one day under the whip and told me excitedly that a woman was dying from heart failure. This was during hot weather and when I reached the place I found they had put the woman out on a shady porch and family and neighbors were gathered around, fanning her and carrying on. My examination showed a normal pulse and good heart action.

"So I decided to teach her a lesson. I put some good hot blisters on her stomach, her wrists and the back of her neck. Then I called for a bowl of cold water and threw it in her face. She revived at once and began to scold me, saying that I was getting all her clothes wet.

"'I don't give a darn if I drown you,' I said, and called for another bowl of cold water. In just a few minutes she was completely recovered from her heart attack, and she never had another. The explanation is that when she got angry at the family she would pretend to have an attack of heart failure, so as to frighten them and thus be revenged.

"This may sound like rough treatment, but it gets wearisome being called to such cases.

"Then there was another case of a woman with delusions and a simple cure. She was about 35 years old and weighed 200 pounds or worse. She was trying to go crazy. She imagined that something awful was going to happen to her. She didn't seem to know what it would be, except that it was terrible. She said she felt that she had best get up and run off and hide.

"I gave her a little nerve sedative. This did no good. I told her husband she was going to have to be sent off if she didn't get better pretty soon. Then I studied her case and decided I would give her a vermifuge. So I left a one-ounce bottle of extract of pinkroot, and ordered a teaspoonful every four hours, and to give oil at night and in the morning. The next evening I went back to see her. She was laughing and cheerful and told me she needed some vermifuge.

"'What other ideas are you going to get up?' I asked.

"'Yes, that's what I need. I know it,' she said. 'Then just take the rest of these drops,' I told her. When she found out what she had been taking she asked me to fill up the bottle again. She is now as sane a woman and in as good health as anybody. There are a good many cases like this.

"Sometimes we find home remedies of a fearful kind being used. One night I was called to a place 12 miles away, to save a child which they said was choking to death. The family lived in a one-room cabin and had no means of lighting, not even candles. With burning boards and sticks from the fireplace I examined the child, which was only 4 years old, but its face that night was as big as a man's. Around the child's neck was a big poultice. When I told the mother to take off the poultice, which interfered with my examination and was giving off a horrible odor besides, she was unwilling.

"'I do hate to take that off,' she said, but finally did so. The child had a bad case of tonsilitis, but afterwards I told the county officials that it looked like diphtheria, because I wanted them to go there and see how those people were living. The poultice was made of refuse from the hog yard, fried in pork. It had been applied as a drawing poultice, and the child was broken out with a rash. The patient recovered and is alive and well today. All I got out of it was a good ride and the experience.

"A funny case, although I've had many like it, was that of an old man in the neighborhood who was subject to severe chills. All the family had them. One warm afternoon he came to my house, his coat tightly buttoned, his collar turned up and trembling and shaking. He asked me for some quinine.

"'I don't like to be dosing you with quinine all the time,' I said. He insisted, and shook worse than ever. So, stepping into the house, I filled up a capsule with flour, then went out and handed it to him. Only a little while after he had swallowed the capsule his shaking stopped, and pretty soon off came his coat. Several other times I cured his chills with the same remedy. He hasn't had a chill for years.

"Flour capsules, a little sugar and water with some coloring matter added and other harmless tricks will cure many people better than drugs do."

It is to be expected that Forest, in his practice in the Ozark hills, has received some fees which would look strange to a city doctor. Chickens have frequently been "paid" to him for medical attendance, and settings of eggs. Then he has taken old pistols, watches, guns, chairs, bedsteads and once even accepted a likely hound pup, credited the former owner with $5 on his account.

"You can hardly name anything there is in this country which I haven't had to take in pay," says Forest. "If I could get all that is owing to me I could retire. But I wouldn't."

Some 10 years ago, in what was called a "still camp" in Arkansas, there was an outbreak of the itch.

"Not only did the boys all take the itch," Forest recalled, "but they gave it to the rest of their folks. I got that practice, fixing itch grease for the whole camp and having good luck with it. I had to take my pay in the productions of the plant, a gallon jug at a time."

Meanwhile, the hills of Oregon County extend as far as the eye can reach in every direction, plumed with straight trees and divided by abrupt valleys where dwell a healthy people who, nevertheless, sometimes need a doctor and need him badly. Roads traverse it, winding like ribbons thrown down by children at play. It is, however, no play to traverse those roads, especially during bad weather or at night or both. Dr. Forest, after 16 years of it, still loves his profession. Does anybody else want his job?

And Now — Where Is Pocahontas?

of which time she was not heard of, about two years after she herselfe was taken prisoner, being so detained neere two years longer, the colonie by that means was relieved, peace concluded, and at last, rejecting her barbarous conditions, was married to an English gentleman, with whom at this present she is in England; the Christian of that nation, the first Virginian who ever spake English or had childe in marriage by an Englishman—a matter surely, if my meaning bee truly considered and well understood, worthy a Prince's understanding." * * *

This letter won immediate recognition for the Indian Princess. Received at court with royal honors she sat at the right hand of the white man's Queen. And then the sad ending.

"But the career of the Indian Princess was short in England," writes the historian. "She sickened and died at Gravesend, early in 1617, as she was preparing to return to Virginia. The event was unexpected, but it did not find her unprepared. She presented to the sorrowing spectators the sweetest example of Christian resignation and fortitude.

"She left one son, Thomas Rolfe, who was educated by his uncle, Henry Rolfe, in England, and who afterwards became a person of distinction and fortune in Virginia. From an only daughter whom he left some of the first families of Virginia trace their descent with a just and honorable pride. Among these, we may mention a recent and distinguished instance in the person of John Randolph of Roanoke."

On the way home, after the manner of youth, the crowd sang. Marcia did not sing. She sat in the end of the hayrack and tried to reason it all out. Since yesterday she felt changed, subdued, unreal. She looked up at the clear, calm face of the yellow-white moon.

The crowd was unloaded at the various homes with merry good nights. The Mason girls found that the rest of the family had gone upstairs for the night. There was a letter on the dining-room mantel. Father had brought it home from the 5 o'clock mail. The letter was for Marcia. With fingers that trembled she tore it open and read it. Then she ran upstairs and called: "Folks! Everybody! Come here!"

Father and mother, fully dressed, came to their door. Tillie opened her door cautiously and put out her head; a striped kimono falling away from her long neck gave her the appearance of a curious giraffe. Junior, hearing the noise, came stumbling out of his room.

"Listen! It's from him." She read aloud:

"Dear Miss Mason: I tried to see you yesterday afternoon, but your landlady said you had gone home for over Sunday. I hope you are not taking my talk to heart. Most probably you are not, as your disposition seems to be of a marvelously cheerful and elastic type. And, anyway, what's a dandelion or two between friends?

"Have just come from board meeting and have the pleasure of reporting your election. I have placed you in the Lafayette School for next year, the grounds of that building being somewhat overrun with certain yellow weeds. You will no doubt take pleasure in assisting the janitor to eradicate them.

"I have just been talking with Keith by phone and if I do not hear from you that it would be inconvenient, I will drop in with him on Sunday and congratulate you in person on the 'professional hit' you made with the Capitol City Superintendent. Sincerely,

"JOHN R. WHEELER."

Marcia threw out her arms to them all. "Folks!" she said in a little tense, awe-struck voice, "I was born under a lucky star."

"Land sakes, I believe it!" Father said. They were all talking at once, after the manner of the Masons.

Katherine laughed. "You old fraud, you don't deserve it."

Eleanor's contribution was: "Oh, Marcia, I adore a good profile."

Tillie was saying: "My good land, you do beat the Dutch!"

Junior, at the close of a prodigious yawn, asked unintelligibly: "Wh'd 'e mean, dandelions?"

Only mother said nothing. She was looking at the lovely, flushed face of her starry-eyed girl and making a little incoherent prayer: "Dear Lord—keep her happy—like that."

The excitement over, they all went back to their rooms.

"I can't help but be glad she got it." Father was pulling off his sock and tenderly regarding his favorite corn. "But it wasn't a very good lesson for her, to have it turn out this way."

Mother was immediately on the other side of the argument. "Oh, she's had punishment enough, father—that scare." Mother brushed her hair for a few moments, and then added: "I must say though, I don't like that dandelion deal it's too much like deceiving."

Father, with alacrity, veered to the opposite side. "Oh, I don't know," he said, cheerfully; "that's what I call good, old-fashioned Yankee shrewdness." So they went to bed, arguing amiably, quarreling peaceably as they had done for 26 years.

Across the hall, Marcia finished braiding her hair, turned out the light and snapped up the shades. Pale, silvery, golden-white, the moon flooded her slim, youthful figure in its soft, clinging gown. Surreptitiously, deftly, she slipped a large, square envelope under her pillow. Then she said: "Kathie, something tells me I'm going to enjoy teaching with John."

NEW METHOD HEALS RUPTURE

Kansas City Doctor's Discovery Makes Truss or Operation Unnecessary.

A new discovery which, experts agree, has no equal for curative effects in all rupture cases, is the latest accomplishment of Dr. Andrews, 522 Koch Bldg., Kansas City, Mo. The extraordinary success of this new method proves that it holds and heals a rupture. It weighs only a few ounces. Has no hard gouging pads, no elastic belt, no leg straps, no steel bands, and is as comfortable as a light garment. It has enabled hundreds of persons to throw away trusses and declare their rupture absolutely healed. Many of these had serious double ruptures, from which they had suffered for years. It is Dr. Andrews' ambition to have every ruptured person enjoy the quick relief, comfort and healing power of his discovery, and he will send it on free trial to any reader of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch who writes him. The Five-Months Mystery of the Barricaded Flat have been removed from the door. The man Maltby is well known to the police, who are aware of his drunken habits and bad character generally." * * *

According to James Douglas, quoted earlier, "the police have no authority to break into a house without a warrant. In the end they only overcame the doctrine that an Englishman's house is his castle by the expedient of using the health officer's power to force an entry on sanitary grounds."

It was known that Maltby still occupied the house, though for many days he had not been seen outside. Neighbors at last complained that for months the garbage had not been removed.

This brought to the vicinity a large squad of Scotland Yard operatives and health officials. For five days they sought peaceable entry to the house. Americans may find this difficult of belief, but it is a part of the official record. They do some things differently in England.

Finally a health officer got a heavy crowbar and broke in the front door. Just as the heavy bar fell to the floor the sound of a pistol shot upstairs was heard. Health agents and Scotland Yarders rushed upstairs. They battered in the door to the Maltby apartment. In the front room, in bed, with the covers pulled over him, lay Cecil Arthur Maltby, just dead. The revolver with which he had shot himself, putting the barrel in his mouth and blowing out his brains, still was hot from the explosion.

Nailed to the door of Maltby's bedroom was found this note, undated:

"In memory of Alice H. Middleton, who committed suicide on Thursday, Aug. 24, 1922, 8:30 a. m. Pat, darling, why did you do it? Everybody loved you. I cannot live without you. When I can brace up my courage, shall soon be with you."

The note was signed "Cecil A. Maltby."

Detectives entered the bathroom, which served also as a kitchen. Against the wall was a porcelain bathtub, covered with a thick board. Apparently this had been used at times as a makeshift dining table. It was strewn with litter. They lifted the board.

In the bathtub, badly decomposed, lay the body of a woman of stoutish build. The corpse was wrapped in bed sheets, stained with blood. The body was identified as that of Mrs. Alice Hilda Middleton.

VI.

On the premises were found several letters written by Maltby, the man who for full five months had lived in a house with the corpse of a married woman who had lived with him for several months before her tragic passing. The letters were from the living to the dead. One ran thus:

"Pat, I hear you calling me. I have been trying to brace up courage all day. I will really do it. I will try and do it the same way you did. Cheerio darling—I shall soon be with you.—CECIL (Moppy).

"It wants some doing on a teetotal stomach. I want to go and get you some more flowers, but your husband and Billy are outside. I should have liked to see Billy, but I cannot face your poor husband."

"Moppy," as it turned out from letters found, written to Maltby by Mrs. Middleton when she was with her husband for the last time, was the woman's pet name for her paramour. "Pat" was his pet name for her.

The detectives at first accepted the statement of Maltby that the woman had committed suicide. Maltby's grief, they theorized, had maddened him. Besides, if he had come forth and faced the world, his story of suicide would have been discredited. Perhaps this had helped to make the man a madman.

Incidentally, amongst the rubbish were found the faded letters from Charles Dickens to Maltby's grandfather.

VII.

At the Coroner's inquest the true facts came out. Closer examination proved that three bullets had been fired into the back of the woman's head. Two of them were extracted by the Coroner's surgeons. The Coroner read to the jury a portion of a letter left by Maltby, addressed to a Mr. Robinson:

"The dear little lady, Mrs. Middleton, who had been living with me since January, committed suicide at 8:30 on Aug. 24. She shot herself through the top of the head. It seems unnatural, but I went to make an early cup of tea, and when I came to the room she seemed funny and said she was going to shoot herself. I struggled with her, and she was a strong woman. She fell on her knees and the gun went off three times."

Thus ended the letter: "I put Mrs. Middleton in the bath, and have not liked to part with her dear soul."

The police theory is that Maltby, known to be insanely jealous of Mrs. Middleton, feared she was about to leave him when she got the post card from her sister, and that there was a quarrel and he killed her in jealous anger.

The Coroner's jury found a verdict of murder and suicide. Obviously it was quite impossible for Mrs. Middleton to have shot herself thrice in the back of her head. Either of the three bullets made a wound calculated to suspend muscular motion, if not, indeed, to cause instant death.

Maltby was terribly emaciated. Doctors opined that he had not eaten a mouthful for many days. There was no food, no water, no means of lighting or heating the house. Probably worse than all to Maltby in his state of physical and mental horror, there was no alcoholic beverage left. Empty bottles thrown about showed that he had used stimulants to excess, in the hope of nerving himself to answer "the call" of Mrs. Middleton.

The man's efforts to evade the stain of murder upon his own memory were evident in the several letters wherein he sought to create the impression of the woman's self-destruction.

For five months Maltby had lived alone with the dead woman. The premises were indescribably filthy. Sanitation had been suspended altogether. No water for bathing, the bathtub itself occupied by a grewsome parcel that for 18 years had been a beautiful and faithful wife. No gas for cooking. Such food as the crazed man got by stealth, on his infrequent nocturnal trips outdoors, gnawed raw, the refuse cast aside. There was evidence that Maltby had eaten some of his solitary meals off the board that covered the bathtub and the corpse.

What mental and spiritual nightmares the wretched man suffered during those five months must be left to the imagination. Edgar Allan Poe, perhaps, could have made some sort of soul-dissection of Maltby in his extremity, but even Poe's picturing would have been inadequate. The story has been told simply here, in bare outline. The reader, if he or she cares to dwell further upon the matter, may fill in the quivering flesh on the skeleton of horror.

No More Wrinkles!

Amazing New Treatment Smooths Them Away Like Magic

A WONDERFUL new discovery now makes wrinkles entirely unnecessary! No longer need women fear the little tell-tale marks of time which rob them of their attractiveness. No longer need they dread the tragic lines that foretell the end of youth. For Science has found a quick, easy and inexpensive way to smooth away every tired line, every laugh wrinkle, every deep frown mark.

With this new treatment it is almost as if some magic wand were waved across your face, banishing every line and wrinkle and restoring the firm youthful freshness of the skin.

Why allow wrinkles to add age to your face, when they can be erased so easily? Why allow deep frown lines to mar your appearance, when they can be harmlessly removed with scarcely any effort at all on your part?

Removes the CAUSE of Wrinkles

This new discovery is based on a simple natural principle. There is no tedious massaging, no painful electrical treatment, no harmful lotions. And unlike many so-called wrinkle "eradicators" it does not attempt to cover up or conceal the lines or wrinkles.

Lines formed by arching the forehead or frowning can now easily and quickly be removed!

Tiny lines around the eyes (crows' feet) mar your natural beauty. This new treatment will soon banish them.

Laugh lines and chin wrinkles are often mistaken for marks of age. These, too, can now be painlessly and effectively smoothed away.

This new treatment acts in an entirely different way. Instead of merely treating the symptoms, it gets right at the cause of wrinkles. By removing the real cause in a perfectly natural and harmless way, the wrinkles and lines vanish almost before you realize it.

Watch the Amazing Results

You will scarcely believe your eyes when you see what really wonderful results this new discovery—called Domino Wrinkle Cream—can bring. Even after the first few days you will find that your face has grown years younger looking. THE DOLL CALLED JULIE tions. The nurse informed him that, during her mother's absence, she had been permitted to have everything for which she had expressed the slightest wish. There were blocks and games of almost every known kind, books and dolls and miniature sets of furniture, as well as entire wardrobes and trunks in which to pack the tiny dresses. Few children, the detective thought, had such a collection of playthings, and unlike most youngsters who have an almost inexhaustible supply of what they want, Celeste appeared to be perfectly happy, and glanced up from her play with only the barest flicker of curiosity in her eyes.

"Who's that?" she asked her nurse.

"A friend of your father's," was the reply. "He wanted to see you at play. Don't you want to show him some of your things?"

"Not now," was the answer. "I'm busy putting Julie to bed. She had an operation this morning, you know. Pierre will tell you about it. He was the doctor and I was the nurse."

"I think she likes to play with Pierre more than she does with anyone else," the nurse volunteered. "He comes up every morning and romps with her while I have my breakfast. The master doesn't get up until later, so that arrangement suits everybody."

With a final word or two to the child, Dr. Frecon took his leave and made his way back into the main part of the house, where he was forced to admit to M. Renant that he discovered nothing that could be of the least assistance in solving the mystery of the missing coins. Partly to satisfy his own curiosity as to the expression which would appear upon the other's face, and partly because of the fact that he considered that the master of the house ought to know the details of the burglar alarm system, the detective told him all about it, stressing the point that it had been installed under the orders of Madame Renant. As nearly as he could tell, the coin collector expressed purely natural surprise at the information, and contented himself with a shrug of the shoulders and the inquiry: "What good did it all do? Someone got in in spite of this wonderful system and the coins are gone. How do you explain it?"

"I don't," was Dr. Frecon's answer. "But I'd like to have a little more time to consider the matter, and I hope before long to be able to give you some definite information about it. Meanwhile, merely as a precaution, may I have permission thoroughly to search the whole house, from top to bottom, and also to go through the servants' quarters?"

"Certainly. I'll see that our people don't offer any objection, and I must insist that you search my rooms as well. The coins were heavily insured, you know, and there might be some suspicion"—— His remark ended with a suggestive smile and an upward movement of his shoulders.

Before noon Dr. Frecon had secured the necessary assistance and, with the aid of half a dozen men, spent the afternoon in a thorough examination of the premises from garret to cellar, from the front gate to the rear entrance. But to no avail. Nowhere did the slightest clew develop, and nowhere was there the least indication that anything was out of the ordinary.

As the days passed and only the most complimentary reports were uncovered by investigations of the past histories of the various servants in the Renant household, Dr. Frecon began to feel more and more uneasy. This case, which, on account of the way the house had been guarded, should have been full of clews, was absolutely lacking in them. Everyone concerned appeared to be above suspicion, and the detective spent many a sleepless night wondering and worrying about the problem, turning it over and over in his mind in a vain effort to discover some point which he might have overlooked.

On account of the efficiency of the burglar alarms, and also because of the fact that none of the coins had been offered for sale through the usual channels—few though these were—Dr. Frecon felt inclined to believe that the whole affair had been planned and executed from the inside. But how, and by whom? Had Renant himself engineered the robbery in order to secure the insurance? Had Pierre, the valet, been implicated, or had Helene, the nurse, had a hand in the crime?

"The only person in the house who seems to be absolutely clear of suspicion," Frecon muttered, as he considered the problem through a haze of tobacco smoke, "is Celeste. Certainly no child of that age would have had an inclination to take dull copper coins, even if she could have broken into the drawer—which she couldn't."

Suddenly, he sat up as erect as though someone had pricked him with a needle. Into his consciousness flashed the recollection of what the child had said upon the only occasion he had seen her. Then, without pausing further to consider the matter, he jammed on his hat and made his way with all possible speed to the Renant house, where he was relieved to find that the door was opened by the butler rather than the valet.

"Take me immediately to Mlle. Celeste's nursery," he told Edouard, adding, by way of explanation: "I desire to see Helene at once."

But it was in the child herself, rather than in the nurse, that the detective was interested. The moment he reached the nursery he asked Celeste if she remembered the operation she had told him had been performed on one of her dolls on the morning of the only time he had seen her.

"Yes," was the frank reply, accompanied by the wide opening of her blue eyes. "Pierre did it because he said he thought Julie looked pale. He cut a part of her body right here," and a tiny forefinger indicated a region of the stomach, "and took out some of her insides. They seemed to be like sawdust. Then he sewed Julie up again, and I guess she must have been all right, because there has been nothing wrong with her since. She's gained weight, too," added the youngster, with a proud and almost maternal smile.

"Which is Julie?" Dr. Frecon inquired. "I don't think I've been introduced to her."

"There she is over in the corner," Celeste declared, "the one with the yellow curls, in the high chair. She's a pretty big girl, isn't she?"

"Indeed she is," the detective agreed, and, before the youngster could see what he intended to do he had picked up the doll and was carefully examining the stitches which held her body together below the waist. Somehow she felt heavier than a doll ought to be, and poorly balanced. Whipping out his knife, Dr. Frecon commenced an operation of his own, and out of the sawdust which poured from the gaping wound in Julie's side there clanked a number of other articles which didn't rightly belong to the interior of the ordinary doll—the missing Roman coins!

* * * * * * *

"And that," concluded Bill Quinn, "is the reason that Julie occupies a place of honor in my collection. I think you will have to admit that she deserves it, for if you will examine her anatomy you will find that four inches of the stitches on her left side differ radically from those on the rest of her body. An excellent hiding place, wasn't it?"

"One that was fully comparable to Poe's 'Purloined Letter,'" I agreed. "But what I don't understand is why Pierre, whom you have painted as the impeccable and thoroughly reliable servant, should suddenly yield to a temptation which he had resisted for years. Surely he could have robbed his master at almost any time."

"Yes," explained Quinn, "but into this case there entered that strange something which people call 'collectors' fever.' As it afterwards developed, Pierre had acquired a mania for old coins which was hardly excelled by that of his master. Of course, his limited means prevented him from acquiring many of the pieces he wanted. But, finally, after resisting temptation for a long time, he succumbed, and when cross-examined by Dr. Frecon, admitted that he had removed the panes in the window in order to make the mystery so deep that even the police would have to give up in despair, for he felt certain that the hiding place of the coins would never be discovered, particularly since he had secured a duplicate of the doll, which he intended to substitute for Julie at the first favorable occasion.

"No," said Quinn, with a yawn, "there's no telling where you will pick up leads in cases of this kind. That note written in purple ink is only another example of this. But it's too late to go into that now. I'll give you the details of it some other time," and he moved over toward the window as if to give an imitation of Pierre in the act of locking up for the night.

Let me tell you about the remarkable discovery which removed my superfluous hair at once—then forever

To look at my face today—to see my skin as free from hair as a baby's and as clear and rosy looking as that of a young girl—you would not believe that I was once literally a "bearded woman" with hair on cheeks, chin and lips, and with a skin coarse and blemished.

A Woman's Experience

The transformation has been marvelous—all through a truly wonderful discovery of Science which immediately banished every vestige of the hair and gave me this perfect complexion. This, after I had suffered from embarrassing hair growths for years, and tried numerous ways to relieve the condition—even the painful electric needle.

Now I want every woman who suffers from unsightly, embarrassing hair growths, to know about this discovery which removes the hair at once, and with a few applications removes it permanently. I want to tell women how they can use this method themselves, in the privacy of their homes, and prove, without risking a penny, that it is all I claim for it.

I say that this discovery will remove superfluous hair permanently, and that it is the only method that I know of which will do this.

The discovery which Science brought to me is unlike anything else you have ever tried. It is not a powder, not a paste, not a wax, not a liquid, not a razor, not electrolysis. It causes no pain—no burning, no itching, no scarring. It not only removes the hair—it gives the skin a new beauty—makes it soft, clear, rosy, free from pimples, roughness and other blemishes. It does not have to be applied by a beauty specialist. You use it yourself. It's the simplest, easiest way you can imagine.

My Free Book Tells the Secret—Send for It

I have written a book which tells how I came to discover this amazing method and how any woman can get rid of superfluous hair, and know that it is permanently gone. Don't send a penny—don't make any promise. Just write to me. The book is FREE. A post card brings it.

CAMERA RECORDS OF TWO NOTABLE AFRICAN GAME HUNTS

This gorilla seemingly died with the expression of undying hate on his face. He was one of the smaller animals of the kind killed on the Barns expedition.

Sometimes they catch them instead of killing them. This picture, made on the Morden expedition, shows Mrs. C. F. Martin and her pet cheetah. Mrs. Martin is a daughter of Sir Edward Northey, late Governor-General of British East Africa.

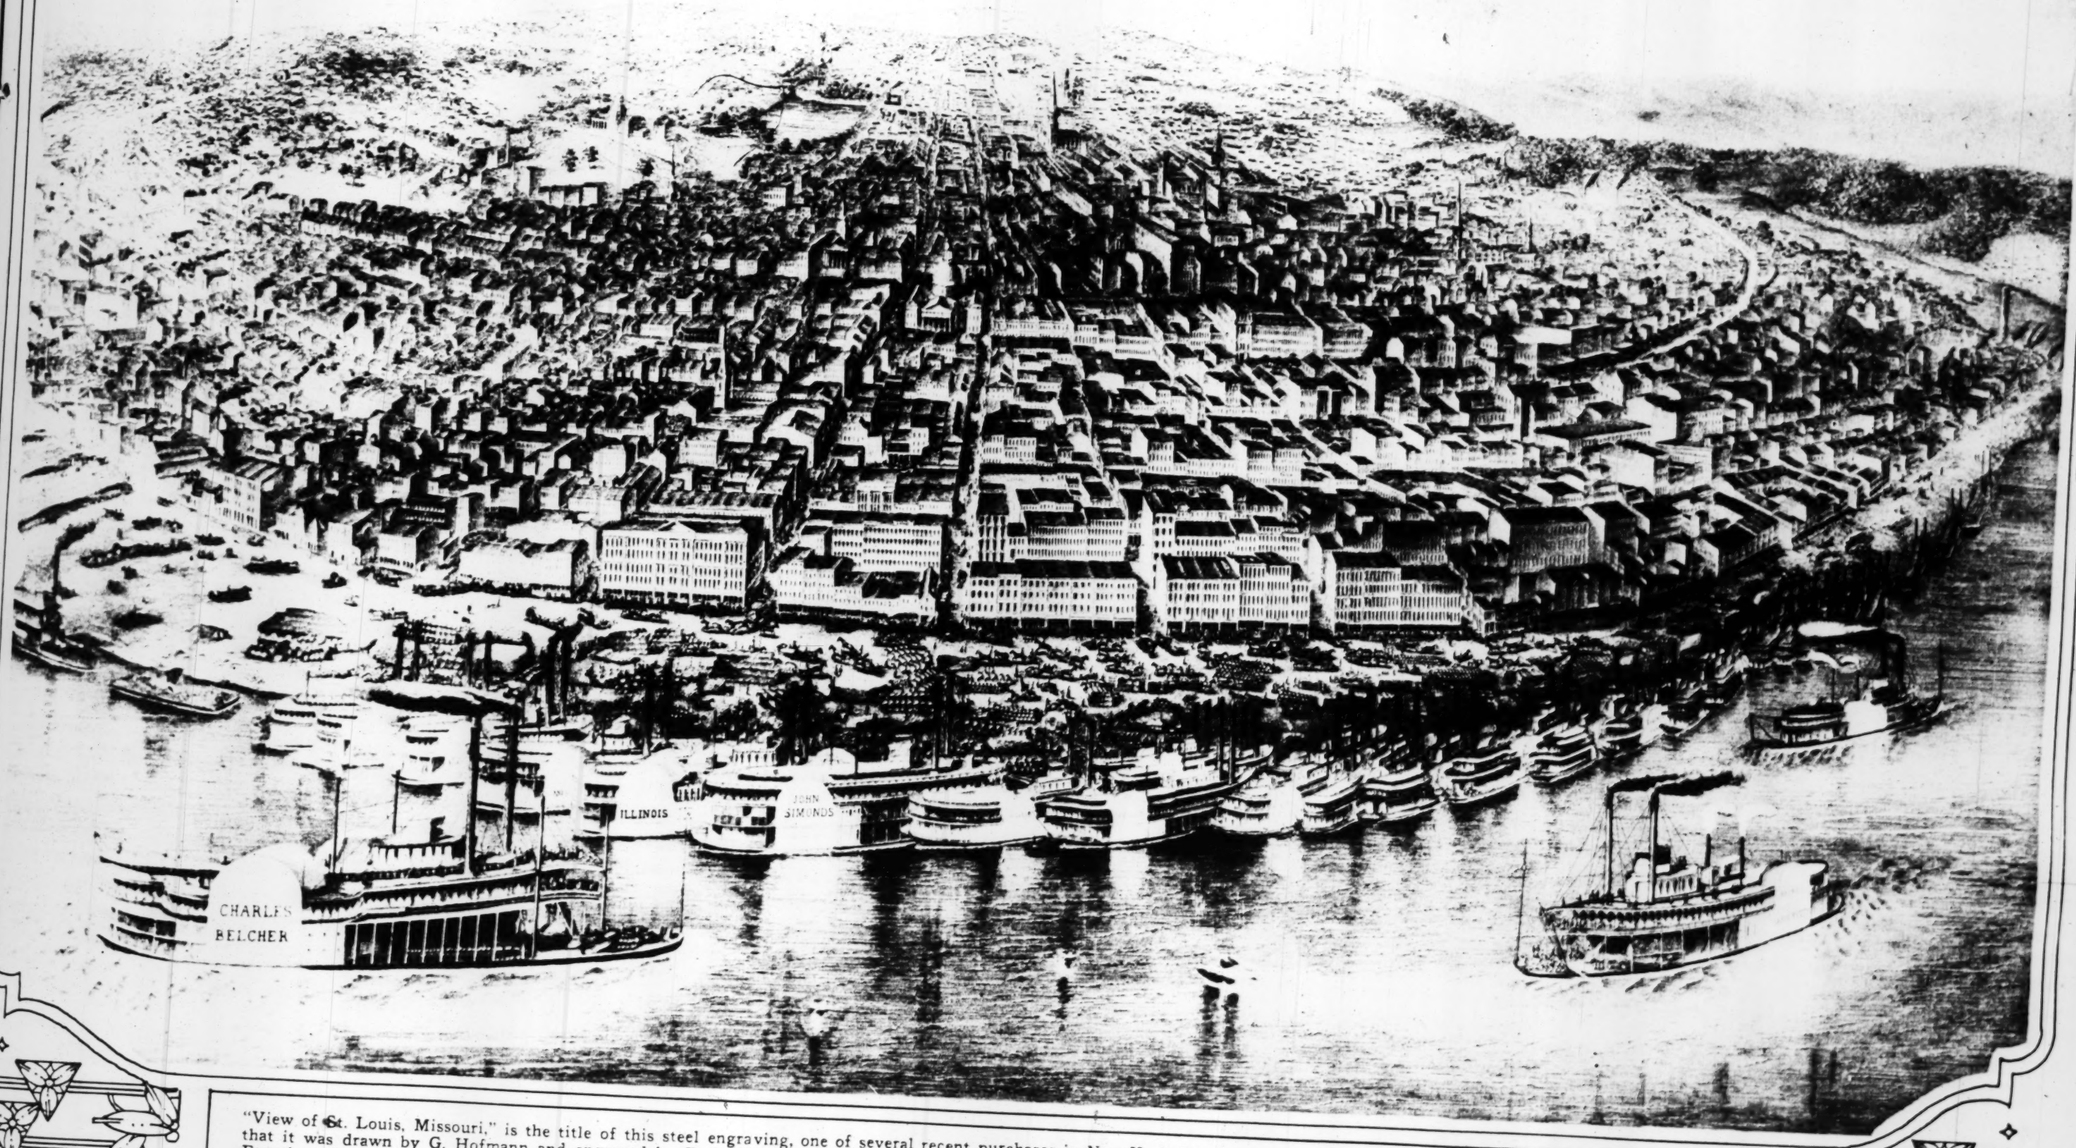
RARE OLD PRINTS OF ST. LOUIS, RECENTLY DISCOVERED



"View of St. Louis, Missouri," is the title of this steel engraving, one of several recent purchases in New York City by Arthur A. Kocian of the Noonan-Kocian Co. The plate shows that it was drawn by G. Hofmann and engraved by E. B. Krausse in 1854. Almost at the center is Chestnut street, and the Court House stands out prominently at the corner of Fourth and Chestnut. At the upper left center is Chouteau's Pond. The large number of steamboats and the piles of freight on the levee recall the palmy days of river traffic.

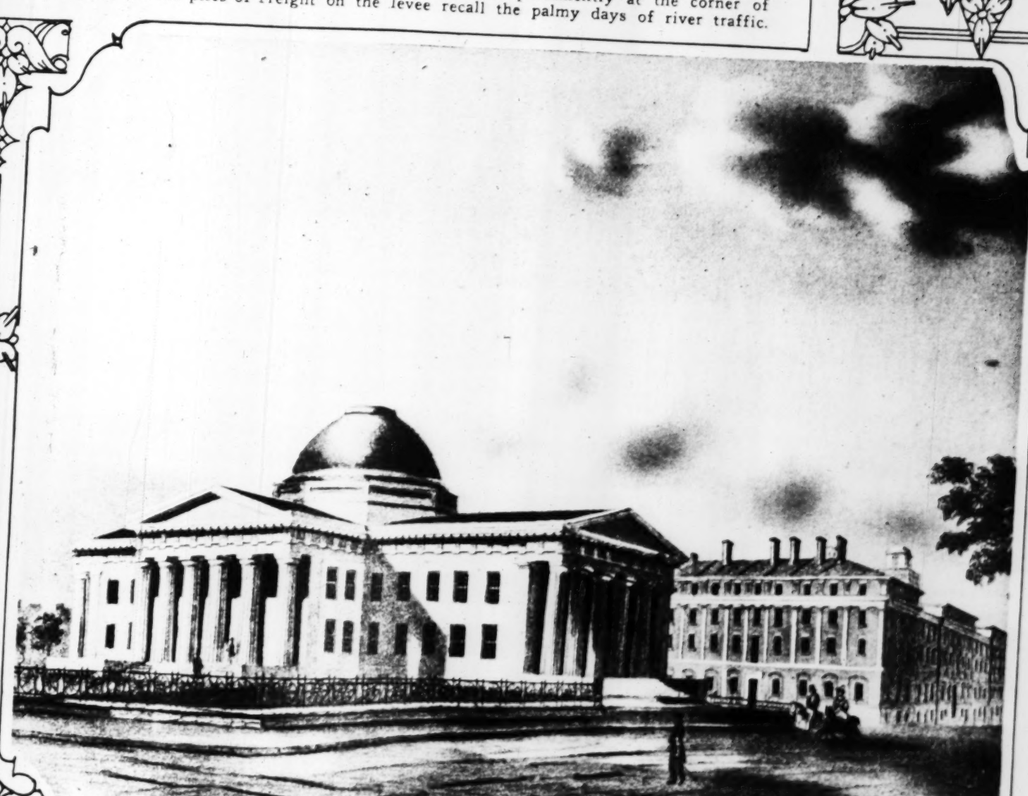
A lithograph in colors, bearing the legend, "View of Front Street, St. Louis." Thus was the levee formerly known. The picture was by J. C. Wild, and "Published at the Republican office." Note the two Indians at right, watching the roustabouts handle freight.



Another lithograph by J. C. Wild is entitled "St. Louis Court House." Today this building, despite its loftier present dome, is dwarfed by the tall buildings which surround it, but once it looked imposing. To the right is shown a former building of the Planters Hotel.

This natural fresh food

is freeing thousands from all the ills of constipation

IN place of drugs which upset digestion and actually increase the trouble—instead of cathartics which have to be taken in larger and larger doses—

Physicians and hospitals today are prescribing Fleischmann's Yeast! It is not a medicine, but a fresh corrective food which simply assists nature to restore normal, healthy conditions.

Every cake of Fleischmann's Yeast consists of millions of tiny living plants, which help to increase the bulk of our concentrated modern diet, and stimulate the intestinal muscles to act regularly and naturally.

Your own physician will heartily endorse this principle of treating constipation by gently encouraging the intestinal muscles to act for themselves.

Hundreds of thousands of men and women are being freed from all the evils of constipation by the regular eating of Fleischmann's Yeast. It is in no sense a purgative, and produces no sudden violent action. It must be eaten regularly to achieve results.

Eat two or three cakes a day—plain, or dissolved in water, milk or fruit juices—preferably half an hour before a meal or the last thing at night.

If you eat it plain, follow with a glass of water. Get several cakes at a time—they will keep several days in a cool, dry place. Be sure you get Fleischmann's Yeast! All grocers have it.

"Assured perfect regularity"

"Since I was eleven years old," a New Yorker wrote us recently, "I had used everything that could be suggested for constipation—without a cure. Three operations had been necessary. And then three cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast a day for a period of one month not only assured perfect regularity, but brought me back to my normal weight."

CHOOSE YOUR TOMORROW

Blossoms and sunshine—yes! And opportunity for you to grow and prosper. The climate and scenery that give California its charm also provide California with a prosperity that is worth your immediate investigation.

California's Assets

California's delightful climate means a year-round crop-growing season and California's beautiful valleys produce new fortunes yearly in fruits, vegetables and grain. Lofty mountains supply cheap hydro-electric power and water for irrigation, and verdant hills mean profitable pasturage for livestock.

California's boulevarded roads mean speedy and economical motor transportation; the magnificent expanse of San Francisco Bay and the broad rivers of the Great Valley are natural highways of transportation. California's trim towns and storied cities are alive with commercial, financial, manufacturing and shipping enterprises.

Write To Us

There is room for many thousands now coming to California and her Great Valley—where more people have bank accounts, where crop values are twice the national average per acre, where homes are more homelike, schools are better built, where people earn more, spend more and save more.

"An oily skin is especially liable to infection"

There is constant danger in an oily skin

IF your skin has the habit of continually getting oily and shiny—you cannot begin too soon to correct this condition.

A skin that is too oily is not only unattractive in itself—it is especially liable to infection from dust and dirt, and thus encourages the formation of blackheads and other skin troubles that come from outside infection.

You can overcome excessive oiliness by using every night the following treatment:

FIRST cleanse your skin by washing in your usual way with Woodbury's Facial Soap and luke-warm water. Wipe off the surplus moisture, but leave the skin slightly damp.

Now, with warm water work up a heavy lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap in your hands. Apply it to your face and rub it into the pores thoroughly—always with an upward and outward motion.

Rinse with warm water, then with cold—the colder the better. If possible, rub your face for thirty seconds with a piece of ice.

Within a week or ten days after commencing this treatment you will notice a marked improvement in your complexion.

Get a cake of Woodbury's today, at any drug store or toilet goods counter. A 25-cent cake lasts a month or six weeks. Woodbury's also comes in convenient 3-cake boxes.

FRECKLES

March Worst Month for This Trouble
How to Remove Easily

There's a reason why nearly everybody freckles in March, but happily there is also a remedy for these ugly blemishes, and no one need stay freckled.

Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from your druggist and apply a little of it night and morning, and in a few days you should see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the light ones have vanished entirely. Now is the time to rid yourself of freckles, for if not removed now they may stay all summer, and spoil an otherwise beautiful complexion. Your money back if Othine fails.

The Lemon Rinse
For Soft, Lustrous Hair

WHEN you shampoo your hair a curd is formed by soap. It settles on the hair and stays, no matter how frequently you rinse with water alone. The hair is sticky and unclean, although you "washed it good."

Rinse with the juice of one lemon in a quart of water, and note the difference. The lemon juice eliminates the curd completely. The hair is really clean.

Just feel the hair, to know it. Let your mirror and your friends tell you of its fine, lustrous gloss.

The best "Beauty Shops" rinse this way. It's the natural, harmless way.

Learn the effect just once and you, too, will always rinse with lemon.

Women in 56 countries defy severe climates . . . .

In the world's big cities where smoke and dirt age a woman's skin they depend on this famous method

In almost every country today, even on the bitter plains of North China and Manchuria, women have learned to defeat the ravages of climate on their skin.

They climb and ski and toboggan on the roofs of the world—play out of doors in zero weather as a matter of course—the soft skin of their face unharmed!

In great cities, too, where coal dust and dirt have made fresh, supple skins almost an impossibility with just ordinary care, women now defy them to do their worst. The smoke-stacks of Manchester and Pittsburgh, even the "black fogs" of London can be coped with—since this famous method was developed which takes care of the skin.

Two things were found essential to make the skin immune to cold and damp and dirt. First, to clean the skin with just the right amount and kind of oil it needs. And then to give it unfailing outdoor protection. To meet these two demands, Pond's developed two different creams,—Pond's Vanishing Cream and Pond's Cold Cream, each with its special purposes. Millions of women, where climates are most severe and under the most trying conditions of dirt and wind, have found that these two creams insure them the beautiful supple skin they want.

First, the special cleansing that does more than cleanse

Give your skin a nightly cleansing with the cold cream that contains just the right amount and kind of oil to work in and out without clogging—Pond's Cold Cream. So rich in the right kind of oil it cleans thoroughly and keeps the skin beautifully supple, too. Yet it is light enough to wipe off with a soft cloth and leave your skin fresh and clear.

In commercial cities especially, where soot and dust dry and age the skin of face, neck and hands, women depend on this particular kind of cleansing that overcomes these coarsening influences.

Unharmed! The soft skin of her face though constantly exposed to icy winds. In the fashionable winter resorts of the world, women depend upon Pond's Vanishing Cream to protect against exposure. They treasure, too, its perfect smoothness as a base for the powder.

To keep your skin beautifully clear and supple, give it every night the kind of cleansing that millions of women have found successful in defeating the coarsening effect of soot and dirt—Pond's Cold Cream.

And then the unfailing outdoor protection

Especially never fail, before going out, to apply the delicate vanishing cream which is known to women all over the world as the famous protective cream—Pond's Vanishing Cream. It contains the most effective softening and soothing ingredient known to skin specialists. And it is so beautifully proportioned that your skin absorbs it freely with no possibility of clogging.

In the winter resorts like the Swiss Alps, and in our own windiest and coldest cities, where women must have special protection, they find this cream unfailing. Because it is greaseless, it may be worn day and evening without fear of its causing a shine.

Use this double method. First the cream that cleans and oils. And then the famous outdoor protection. The most trying climate and conditions leave your skin unharmed. Immune from cold and damp, smoke and dirt. As cities have grown bigger and dirtier and as more women have gone to far countries of extreme climates, Pond's has met every need with these two creams.

Wherever you live, try these two creams this winter and see how beautifully clean and supple they keep your skin. Both these creams, Pond's Cold Cream and Pond's Vanishing Cream, are found in all department stores and drug stores. Of course, they contain nothing which promotes the growth of hair.

MARCH WINDS

By W. E. HILL

The blustery March winds have kept little Bobbie within doors, so, of course, the toys are all out on the floor Papa and mamma are looking forward with joy to the sunny spring days when Bobbie can be out doors all day long Papa has but this moment skidded on Bobbie's toy automobile truck

Now is the open season for the prospective June bride to go shopping, armed with the check Aunt Abby sent. Up in the furniture department Clara and Porter, and a helpful salesman, who is being much too helpful, are picking a couch for the living room On the back of an envelope Porter is showing Clara just how far Aunt Abby's check will go.

You never can tell what a March wind is going to do. Just look at poor Chester, all fixed up for spring, six months ahead of the styles, and now it's snowing and sleeting all over Chester's fawn-colored hat.

A little March golf practice in the office (a dollar umbrella will answer nicely) keeps the tired business man amused while the March winds blow

Oh, those cruel March winds — the harbingers of the spring It was just a year ago this spring that Ingrid and Nils were keeping company And such company as they did keep. Hugging and squealing and sitting on each others laps in the park of an evening—oh, it was simply grand. In fact, it was just too grand to last. They quarreled in July—it was the evening of the longshoremen's clambake to be exact—and, oh, the difference to Ingrid Ingrid is taking care of Mrs. Plumpton's little girl and if little Jessie Plumpton gets home safe and sound it won't be due to Ingrid Ingrid is miles away thinking of what might have been, and hating with a cold hate the gentle springtide

March is the month when the stylish stout lady, who decided last year she couldn't wear any of the new hats, decides this year she can't wear any of the new hats But she does.

"Now Harold, you're looking awfully pale and run down I'm sure you need a spring tonic" March and cod liver oil to Harold's mamma are one and the same

Debutante sailing away somewhere out of reach of the March winds. The home paper will have it that popular debutante departs on Olympic for warmer climes

With spring just a month off, the couples who have been cooped up all winter in a kitchenette apartment begin to long for the wide open spaces of the country And they take long hikes through the waste spaces of the nearest countryside at hand—which usually happens to be what the real estate boys call "the environs," otherwise known as the tomato can factory district between the city and the suburbs. Fierce dogs and holes in the pavements abound
